Talk of War Giving World 'The Jitters,' Hull Asserts

Anglo-U. S. War Treaty Report Is Untrue, Says Secretary.

Congress Demands Assurances Anew

The Defense Situation.

Secretary Hull declared there was enough irresponsible talk of foreign affairs to give the world the "jitters," and denied again there was any Anglo-U. S. war agreement.

Prof. Gilbert Murray, chairman, of the League of Nations Union, declared in London that Britain had assured this Nation of support in any warfare in the Far East.—Page 12.

Purchase of 1,000 new fighting planes and strengthening of the French African naval bases are planned by France despite her already huge armament budget, Paris reported.—Page 12.

Hull Denies Treaty.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, after declaring yesterday there was so much irresponsible talking about foreign affairs that it was enough to give the world the "jitters," repeated his denial of any agreement between this country and Great Britain regarding mutual assistance in warfare in the Far East.

The gravs, silver-haired Tennesseean made this statement in the course of a vigorous denial of a statement in London by Prof. Gilbert Murray, chairman of the League of Nations Union, that Great Britain had assured the United States of support in the event of conflict in the Orient.

Policy Explanation Sought.

His reiterated denial came in the face of fresh Congressional demands for a re-statement of American foreign policy before the $800,000,000 naval construction program was passed. It followed testimony by opponents of the 20 per cent fleet increase that American naval building inevitably would lead to war.

Charles A. Beard, famous historian-author, told the House Naval Affairs Committee it was "a dangerous philosophy" that permitted the President complete control of American foreign policy, and warned that President Roosevelt's "quarantine" policy, enunciated in Chicago last autumn, called for big battleships "to be used in aggressive warfare in the far Pacific or Atlantic."

"Would Intensify Distrust."

Miss Jeannette Rankin, legislative secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, told the committee that "wholly abnormal warship building" by the United States "would intensify the international tension and distrust."

Anarchy Perils Japan's Gains In North China

Marauding Bands Terrorize Peasants in Provinces Already Subjugated.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Feb. 10.—Anarchy and lawlessness were reported straining authority of the Japanese in North China today while their armies struggled to conquer a vast area of central China along the Lunghai Railroad.

Dispatches from Tientsin said that after the Japanese evicted Chinese officials in captured North China provinces, these areas relapsed into banditry and civic disorder.

Peasants Flee Homes.

It was authoritatively reported conditions had become intolerable for peasants who had not fled from their homes and that marauding bands were preying on the countryside.

Japanese authorities in Tientsin charged Communist agents were stirring up the people. Japanese troops were said to be mopping up bandits and alleged Communist guerrilla bands between Tientsin and Paotingfu. But 80,000, mostly former Chinese militia, homeless peasants and professional bandits, were reported holding out.

Sharply conflicting reports of success came from the central China battle zone, where armies have been fighting for weeks for the vital railroad network and rich agricultural provinces.

The Japanese said eight armies—five driving down from the Shantung Province region along a battle line roughly 275 miles long, and three fighting northward from the Hwai River front—were steadily closing in on the huge "corridor" along the East-West Lunghai Railroad.

Gains Disputed.

Reports of gains were disputed by Chinese, who declared their own troops had prevented the Japanese from advancing along the 100-mile Hwai River front and were successfully resisting the armies pushing toward the Lunghai Railway and the strategic junction city of Suchow from the north.

There were approximately 400,000 Chinese troops strung along the two parallel war fronts, which are approximately 180 miles apart and extend from the Yellow Sea far inland to the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

Britain Protests Japanese Troops On Leased Island

Hongkong (Thursday), Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Strong British protests were made to Japanese authorities after Japanese troops landed on part of the British leased territory of Weihaiwei, on the tip of the Shantung peninsula, early this week, it was reported reliably today.

Japanese landing parties from two cruisers were said to have debarked near British property on Liukungtao Island, which is part of Weihaiwei. After some negotiations the Japanese withdrew, but the two Japanese cruisers stood by, according to the report.

The British cruiser Suffolk and escort vessel Sandwich were standing by and the British cruiser Capetown was expected to arrive tonight.

C. I. O., Steel Pave Way for Pay Changes

Method Provided for Revisions as New Pact Is Signed.

Independents Announce Price Cut; Carnegie Follows Suit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 9.—The vast United States Steel Corporation, faced with sudden price cuts by non-C. I. O.-organized competitors, today granted the Committee for Industrial Organization an indefinite extension of its working contract, but left a door ajar to possible wage revisions.

The effect of the new "Big Steel"-C. I. O. treaty was to perpetuate the present contract, calling for a basic $5-a-day minimum, but with the understanding that adjustment could be sought by either side and that, failing concurrence within 20 days on any such revision demanded, the whole agreement would end.

To some observers it seemed clear that the corporation had decided to retain the status quo to permit time to determine to what extent the price structure would be hammered.

Today's price declines, which United States Steel's Carnegie-Illinois subsidiary followed, made the situation shape up like this:

Retain Status Quo.

Historic steel opponents of the C. I. O.—the independents—by lowering rates on some of their products had taken at least one step in the direction of the low-price, high-production economy demanded by some Roosevelt administrationists.

The steel price cutting opened what some authorities called the most important rift in major industrial prices since the 1937 slump in business and raw material markets.

Leading producers slashed the price of cold rolled sheets $4 a ton, lowering one of the chief materials purchased by the motor industry and an outstandin g product of steel mills.

A leading independent was said to have taken the initiative, quoting the lower prices to the motor industry.

The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. announced that it was following the action of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and reduced the base price on cold-rolled sheets $2 a ton and eliminated the $2 extra per ton for oiling.

Held Out to the End.

"Big Steel" already had laid a predicate for possible wage declines through a statement of Benjamin Fairless, president, that price cuts could but end eventually in lower pay for the workers.

U. S. Steel's action in signing with the C. I. O. last year was berated privately by some representatives of "Little Steel," and in a prolonged strike last summer they held out to the end against the union.

The new and extended U. S. Steel-C. I. O. agreement involves or

3 Factory Owners Strike to Force 40 Men to Join Union

Passaic, N. J., Feb. 9 (A.P.).—The owners of a men's neckwear plant "went on strike" today because their employes refused to join a union.

Asserting other attempts to get some 40 employes to join the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) had failed, the owners closed the Canal Company plant today and said they would open it again tomorrow, but only to union members.

"We pay union wages to our employes and we sell our products to union houses, so we see no reason why ours should not be a union shop," said Jack and Kenneth Tuchman and Max Brenner.

$200,000 Lost Yearly To Charity Racketeers

Washington Called 'Fall Guy No. 1' as Promoters Driven From Other Cities by Stringent Laws, Pour Into District.

This is the first of a series of articles exposing the charity racket operating in the District.

By Hedley W. Donovan.

Fall Guy Number One—that's now Washington rates among the gentry who make their living in the charity racket.

Driven from many of their happy hunting-grounds by vigorous municipal administrations, these racketeers who build their profits on human generosity rather than fear are flocking to the National Capital.

Their annual "take," according to various estimates, ranges from $200,000 to $500,000.

Whatever the exact amount, the money drained from legitimate charities by these fake appeals alarms District officials and social workers.

Private charity, they recognize, cannot meet Washington's critical relief problem, however honestly and efficiently it may be administered.

Important service can be rendered by private agencies, however, and the District can ill afford to have its charitable impulses dissipated in support of organizations whose "overhead" runs from 50 to 100 per cent.

The difference between the quota in the recent Community Chest campaign and the amount of money actually contributed, to take only one example, could be more than equaled by the annual proceeds of Washington's various charity rackets.

Here the charity swindlers find they can make and keep their peace with the civic authorities through compliance with a few elementary regulations.

Any charitable organization purporting to offer overnight lodging to the needy must obtain an occupancy permit. Satisfying the building inspector and fire department on the grounds of sanitation and safety, the phony philanthropist is ready to open shop.

The only other contact with the law comes if the charity sends out solicitors for house-to-house work.

Fifteen Seized As Police Push D.C. Crime War

3 Others, Taken in Gun Battle, Plead Guilty to Robbery.

Alarmed at the increasing number of automobile thefts, Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, yesterday ordered his men to watch parking lots carefully at all times.

His order, aimed, it is believed, at stamping out a gang of automobile thieves, came as District officials struck two smashing blows at organized crime here.

Fourteen men and a woman, all colored, were arrested in connection with 20 recent holdups, and three members of a "mob" of seven colored hoodlums pleaded guilty to robbery and assault charges.

The prisoners seized by the robbery squad were held for investigation. Detectives trapped them in beer gardens and low-class rooming houses. Arresting officers were Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and Paul E. Ambrose. Following the arrests, Inspector Thompson announced all the prisoners would appear in a police lineup later in the week.

While the detectives were bringing in the suspects, the three colored robbers, who were members of the "mob" of seven who held up liquor stores and groceries at pistol point, were arraigned in District Court and entered their guilty pleas to two robbery charges and one charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Two other members of the gang of seven are serving 40 years in Maryland Penitentiary for robbery, a sixth is a fugitive from justice and a seventh will go on trial here Friday.

The men, who were arraigned all were captured last week after a furious gun battle near Peace Cross.

The establishment of a permanent Bureau of Industrial Economics in the Department of Commerce as a Government agency of co-operation, entirely separate from agencies of regulation, was advocated yesterday by Donald Richberg, one of the President's intimate advisers.

Richberg spoke at a luncheon of the Washington Trade Association Executives at the Washington Hotel. He asserted that "quite obviously our industrial system must be improved."

"How are we going to start in the right direction?" he asked, and then said:

"First, by focusing public opinion on the need for co-operation.

Urges Co-operative Agency.

"Take an analogy from agriculture. You have seen an actual grappling with agricultural needs, the building of a co-operative mechanism and the achievement of practical results. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has played a large part in this public service.

"Apply the same principle and establish and implement a permanent bureau of industrial economics in the Department of Commerce, a Government agency of co-operation entirely separate from agencies of prosecution and punishment.

Administration in Charge.

"Then proceed with voluntary co-operative efforts to develop industrial planning and measures of a self-disciplined competition. In order to do this, there must be freedom from criminal penalties and punishments for efforts undertaken under public scrutiny and in the public interest.

Britain Is Urged To Pay U. S. Debt

Robert John Graham Boothby, conservative and former secretary to Winston Churchill, said unless something was done the world would be faced with another "first class financial crisis—which would make another World War inevitable."

Yearly Tests of Autos Approved by Senate

The Senate yesterday accepted House amendments to the compulsory motor vehicle inspection bill that will require Washington motorists to have their cars examined once a year at stations to be operated by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Virginia Replaces Beer 'Ads' With Modest License Placards

Virginia merchants nailed up some signs in front of their places yesterday and remarked: "It's a new law." Then they spoke of beer and inspectors in whispers. They looked furtively about to see if the words "beer" or "wine" were outside their premises.

It was the current turn in the State's liquor control problem, dating from that memorable day when Gov. John Garland Pollard told reporters, "Virginians don't want beer."

Under the A. B. C. ruling, which went into effect Tuesday midnight, a dispenser cannot indicate the brands he offers. Nor can he use any of the traditional fixtures such as glasses with printed brands on the sides, or mirrors reflecting beer "ads," or bottle openers with advertising.

The merchant must indicate that he sells light beverages by a sign that reads: "A. B. C. License," and to this legend may be added "On Premises" or "Off Premises," as the case may be. The letters of the sign cannot be more than 5 inches high. Inside the establishment, the merchant may post a sign giving the prices of beer and of wine. But he

House Votes Crop Control, 263 to 135

Will Contend Conferees Exceeded Powers by Making Inserts.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's $500,000,000 crop-control program rode to final House approval yesterday over shattered coalition opposition by a 263 to 135 roll call ballot.

The conference report on the measure was messaged immediately to the Senate, where a last attempt to stop it will be made today.

Temporarily, the filibuster anti-lynching bill will be laid aside to permit consideration of the farm bill, almost wholly rewritten in conference.

Foes Have One Hope.

Last hopes of the opposition rested on a point of order to be raised against the report, contending House and Senate conferees exceeded their powers by inserting new matter.

Should the point be upheld, the bill would be forced back into conference for revision of the sections complained of. It is possible the chair will not rule on the point, but submit it to a vote of the Senate.

Approval of the conference report by the Senate would complete Congressional action on a program of crop, marketing and price controls more sweeping than any hitherto attempted, in addition to extension of the present soil conservation plan.

Concessions to Dairies.

The two-to-one majority for the bill in the House followed last-minute concessions to dairy interests, which had complained bitterly of modifications in the Bolleau-McNary dairy amendment. To partially appease them, the House approved a joint resolution exempting lands "permanently" diverted for grazing uses from the effect of the amendment. The conferees had left out the word "permanently."

Again today the Bolleau-McNary amendment will be one of the pivots of the Senate fight on the bill. This amendment, designed to protect the dairy industry from new competition, originally denied benefit payments to farmers who used lands withdrawn from major crops to pasture cattle, or to raise other livestock or produce for market. Conferees limited the provision to dairy cattle and softened its effect.

"Gag Rule" Charged.

The point of order against the report in the Senate may be based on this modification, as well as on new language providing for Government payment of an additional subsidy of 2 cents a pound on cotton on which it already has made loans.

House approval of the report, without a change, followed five hours of debate in which Republi-

Riot Follows Ulster Defeat Of Eire Union

Clashes Occur After Polls Close With Apparent British Victory.

By the United Press.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 9. Rioting between Nationalists, Laborites and Republicans broke out tonight when the polls closed after an election in which pro-British adherents appeared to have defeated Eamon de Valera's appeal for a merger of Northern Ireland and Eire, the former Irish Free State.

Clashes broke out in Slate street, in the Falls district of Belfast, and police were forced to use batons when they charged into the rioters.

An automobile used by supporters of Sir Wilson Hungerford, a Unionist, or pro-British, candidate, was destroyed by fire in Old Park, in the Glenard Crescent district.

Ulster was quiet while the voting progressed. An estimated 80 per cent of 819,000 qualified electors voted in the six counties and elected 31 members of the Northern Ireland Parliament.

It appeared to be a complete victory for Prime Minister Viscount Craigavon who called the election purely on the question of the Irish partition issue.

By his victory, strengthening the power his Unionist Party has held since establishment of Northern Ireland as a semi-sovereign unit of the British Empire in 1921, Lord Craigavon will be able to bulwark his warning that the British government must not strike any "peace" bargain with De Valera and Eire at Ulster's expense.

In Belfast, the Unionists were believed to have won at least 9 of the 15 seats at stake.

Counting of the ballots will not start, however, until tomorrow and there will be no official announcement until Monday.

$250,000,000 Relief Fund To Be Asked By Roosevelt

Appropriation Will Meet Emergency Due to Hit Peak in March.

Sum to Be Sought 'Without Strings'

President Expected to Request Cash Today From Congress.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt will ask Congress, probably today, to appropriate "without strings" a quarter of a billion dollars to meet an emergency relief load expected by White House advisers to hit its peak in March.

The President believes, informed sources indicated, that the so-called Woodrum amendment seriously hampers the Works Progress Administration in meeting such emergencies as the present business recession, and will ask that no such provision be attached to the requested $250,000,000.

The Woodrum amendment, named after its sponsor, Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, is the provision now operating on the present dwindling $1,500,000,000 relief fund (which was to have lasted until July 1), under which the Works Progress Administration was forced to spread out its money in month-by-month allocations throughout the year.

WPA Funds Fading.

The emergency created by the recession, coupled with the inroads made by drought and flood relief, finds the WPA with fading funds and intensified demands, officials said yesterday, with the relief problem becoming more acute daily in industrial cities.

The President, who conferred Tuesday with WPA heads, discussed his forthcoming relief request with a group of seven yesterday—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell, Deputy WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, chairman, Senate Appropriations Committee, and Representative Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, chairman, House Appropriations Committee.

In line with his determination to hold down further inroads on the budget, the President would listen to no figure above $250,000,000, it was indicated.

Demanded Spread.

The Woodrum restriction, enacted by a combination of economical Democrats and Republicans over the wishes of the more ardent New Dealers, tried to fend off a deficiency appropriation, such as the President will ask, by its insistence the money be spread through the year.

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, moved yesterday to repeal the restrictions on relief funds, introducing a bill to that effect with the warning that unless additional funds were made available the Works Progress Administration would be forced to slash relief rolls by 20 per cent on March 1 with later reductions following each two weeks.

The President's recommendations, which are expected to come in the form of a letter to Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead of Alabama, are based on the statistics of Williams, whose figures show 1,900,000 persons now on relief—the most since April of 1936.

Of high importance to the business world was the information that the Administration advisers, asserting inability to see clearly beyond April 1, had said the unemployment peak was expected to be reached during March, with probable business upturn to follow those weeks.

Today the Senators will renew their inquiry into the case of Bridges. They want to know why the Australian hasn't been deported, why no action was taken on a recommendation by a Seattle immigration officer that he be arrested and why such solicitude has been shown in the case of an alien agitator.

The witness today will be Gerard D. Reilly, solicitor of the Labor Department, who has been investigating Bridges. He will supply the committee with the Seattle official's recommendation for Bridges' arrest

Senate Cloture On Lynch Bill Again Studied

Failure of New Petition May Bring Move to Investigate Riots.

Another attempt at Senate cloture and a Congressional investigation of lynchings were discussed yesterday by sponsors of the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, following five weeks of failure to break through the Southern filibuster against the bill.

The controversial measure will be laid aside temporarily today by the Senate to permit consideration of the privileged conference report on the Administration's farm bill. But the filibuster is slated to start up anew as soon as the farm bill is disposed of.

Plans were under way for circulation of another cloture petition to shut off anti-lynching debate and bring the bill to a vote. The Senate recently overwhelmingly voted down a cloture motion, but friends of the bill said they could rally more support on the next attempt.

Joint Inquiry Likely.

Should cloture efforts fail again, some anti-lynching bill strategists said a joint resolution for a Congressional investigation of lynchings and mob riots might be proposed before the Wagner-Van Nuys measure was displaced by Administration business.

Leaders of the Southern opposition indicated they would fight the proposed investigation as bitterly as they now oppose the anti-lynching bill.

An attempt to sidetrack the anti-lynching bill for the session is expected next week, when the independent offices bill again will be offered in lieu of it. Later next week, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, may attempt to call up the Administration's Government reorganization bill.

New Attack Opened.

Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, who recently completed a long-distance series of speeches against the anti-lynching bill, opened a new attack yesterday. Ellender held the floor throughout the afternoon, insisting the South was dealing "adequately" with the problem of lynching. He declared criminal records of Southern cities were better than those of comparable cities in the North.

"In some Northern cities there is a greater amount of crime among their 11 per cent Negro population than among their 89 per cent of whites," he said.

Ellender drew a challenge from Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, when he said colored persons, if left alone were "prone to go back to barbaric lunacy with reference to religion."

Davis asked if Ellender meant he wished to interfere with colored freedom of worship.

"Not at all," said Ellender, "but I don't want that kind of people to rule the country."

The Louisiana Senator had been attacking Father Divine, in Harlem.

O'Connor for More Time for Bankers

By the Associated Press.

J.F.T. O'Connor, retiring Comptroller of the Currency, urged Congress yesterday to give bank executives another year to repay pre-1933 debts to their institutions.

The banking act of 1933 prohibited loans by banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System to their officers, but gave them two years to liquidate existing indebtedness. This deadline was extended in 1935 until June 16, 1938.

O'Connor said in his annual report yesterday that the bankers have reduced direct obligations 69.83 per cent and indirect obligations by 62.11 per cent.

President's Complaint About High Pressure Salesmanship Raises 'Glass Houses' Question.

By Franklyn Waltman

An item of current news to the effect that excerpts from five volumes of "The Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt" have been sold for approximately $100,000 for newspaper syndication recalls that the President on occasion has complained about high pressure salesmanship in the business world.

WALTMAN.

This question of high pressure salesmanship is an interesting one. Mr. Roosevelt directed his complaint specifically against the methods used by automobile salesmen in persuading the Smiths to keep up with the Joneses by buying a new shiny car and the effect that sort of thing has on economic stability.

But what about the high pressure salesmanship of the Roosevelt family, the New Deal and the Democratic Party since 1933? How about the effect of that kind of high pressure salesmanship on the morale of Government workers and the country generally?

Since memories are short, it may be worthwhile to recount some of the instances of high pressure salesmanship exercised in the last four years by these three groups, each under the direct control of the President. Each of these groups is touched with a public interest, and generally those in public life should observe a higher standard than those following private pursuits. Let us see if that has been true during the Roosevelt era.

Passing over such crude forms of political high pressure salesmanship as using public moneys to attract votes, either through the distribution of jobs or construction projects, we come to Postmaster General James A. Farley's schemes for raising campaign funds.

First and foremost are his annual Jackson Day dinners. Here in Washington the squeeze is put on every Government official in the higher income brackets to dig up $100 for a plate at the chief of these dinners. It is not a matter of choice whether an official wishes to pay the $100—he is told to do so and that is all there is to it. If he does not he runs the risk of losing his job or getting lost in the scramble around here.

He pays $100 for what? For a dinner which any hotel would serve him for $2 or $3—and with more efficient service; a little music and a great deal of oratorical blah which gives him indigestion.

The same type of high pressure salesmanship is applied here and throughout the country to Government workers drawing smaller salaries to put up $25 or $10. Actually it is a form of enforced bribery on the part of Government workers and it contravenes not only the spirit but the letter of that standard which would free a Government worker from paying monetary tribute to a political party.

And then there was that other little scheme of the Democratic National Committee, used to bludgeon money out of corporations for the party's war chest. Actually, that represented, in the opinion of many qualified persons, a violation of the Federal corrupt practices act—but Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said it was not and so we guess it was not.

This scheme, it will be recalled, had the President autograph quite a few hundred souvenir books left over from the 1936 Democratic National Convention. Without the Presidential autograph, these books had the value only of waste paper. With that signature a value of $250 each was placed on them by the Democratic National Committee, and a horde of high pressure salesmen—receiving a commission of $100 for each book sold—was turned loose on the business world to sell them at that price.

If Mr. Roosevelt really would like to have a few pointers on high pressure salesmanship, he should have a talk with his son, James. That young man, before he was put on the Federal payroll at $10,000 annually, gave a demonstration of high pressure salesmanship that made the insurance salesmen of Boston and New York open their eyes in amazement—and concededly they are the highest pressure salesmen in the country.

Indeed, no family has commercialized the White House as the Roosevelts have. A few years ago the country would have been shocked into breathlessness if a member of the White House family undertook to make money out of that connection, much less the President himself. It will be recalled that Herbert Hoover went into a rage at a press conference over a newspaper story pointing out his son's employment by an airplane company which was being favored for a Government subsidy.

And now we have Mr. Roosevelt charging the newspapers of the country a fee—and from all reports a sizable fee—for the privilege of printing observations he makes in a series of volumes which deal with the public business. The North American Newspaper Alliance reveals that the syndication rights for these writings was offered to it for $100,000. That syndicate did not accept the offer, but the President confirmed reports that the articles have been sold to another syndicate.

Now that a precedent has been set, why should not the President charge the radio broadcasting companies a fee for his speeches, or require the payment of a fee by all newspaper correspondents who wish to attend his press conferences? Indeed, if the desire is to get every possible dollar there are all sorts of ways for the President to make money. Why not charge the tourists a fee for being permitted to view the public rooms of the White House?

U. S. Aide Cites Failure to Pay Prevalent Wage

Reynolds Explains Cause of Government Quarrels With Contractors.

Failure of certain contractors to pay the prevailing wage scale in some communities was cited yesterday by W. E. Reynolds, assistant director of procurement, Treasury Department, as one of the reasons why contractors had not enjoyed the best relations with the Government. Reynolds made his statement before delegates to the nineteenth annual convention of the Associated General Contractors of America at the Willard Hotel.

Reynolds also scored the "kickback" by which some contractors force their employes to return a part of their wages, thus defeating the purpose of the Government's building contracts stipulation that prevailing wage schedules be maintained.

Says WPA Interfers.

W. A. Klinger, president of the contractors' group, told members at yesterday's session that "the Works Progress Administration is becoming increasingly construction minded. In carrying out its program it is interfering more and more with industry and taking away more and more of the market."

John C. Page, commissioner of reclamation, Interior Department, told the convention that "the biggest construction program in the history of Federal reclamation moved forward rapidly during the past year with 68 construction contracts, involving $38,565,000, completed and 55 constracts, involving $55,620,000, in force at this time."

Banquet Slated Tonight.

The convention will close its three-day session tonight with a banquet at the Willard Hotel at 7 o'clock.

President-elect E. P. Palmer, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, and Klinger, outgoing president, are scheduled to speak at the banquet. A. E. Horst will be toastmaster.

Business sessions of the convention will open at 9 a. m., with E. P. Palmer, vice president at large, calling members to order. Speakers at the morning session will include William E. Hayes, local attorney; Dr. Ernest M. Fisher, director, division of economics and statistics, Federal Housing Administration; George B. Walbridge, chairman of the legislative committee, and Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of New York.

Afternoon sessions will be called to order by Klinger. In addition to reports of committees and regular business, the session will hear a talk on "The Importance of a Safety Program" by G. W. Maxon, of the Maxon Construction Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Emporia's Editor Becomes 70

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

An unknown young man bought the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette in 1895 and since has become one of the Nation's famous editors. He is William Allen White, who will celebrate his seventieth birthday today. The editor, who denies he is a "sage" because "a sage is a bug-eyed, long-haired creature that has no contact with reality," is shown reading in his easy chair at home.

House Group Favoring Sanctions Against Japan Gather Tonight; 'West Point' for Artists Urged.

A meeting of fellow representatives who feel that economic sanctions should be invoked against Japan has been called for tonight by Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, and Representative Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland. Scott said he believed exports and imports to Japan should be reduced to foodstuffs, and only in quantities reached in peace-time while aid should be given to China. He also said that at least 15 members of the House agreed with him.

A West Point for artists was advocated before the House Patents Committee yesterday by Bernard Godwin, Beaux Arts scholar and painter of Cabinet officers. He would have Senators and Representatives select young writers, painters, singers and musicians to be educated at Federal fine arts academy.

* * * *

The levying of estate taxes on American holdings of voluntary expatriates that would make the word "confiscation" a reality instead of an idea was advocated yesterday by Representative Patrick (Democrat), Alabama. He wants Congress to give particular study to "the voluntary expatriation of rich Americans with their absentee financial and industrial landlordism."

* * * *

The proposal of Senator George Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, that amendments to the Constitution be ratified by popular vote in two-thirds of the States was opposed yesterday before a Senate committee by Bainbridge Colby, New York City attorney, and former secretary of state. He said he was opposed to "tinkering" with the Constitution and that such tinkering "will inevitably lower the general respect for the Constitution which would be an evil of major proportions."

A resolution by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, which if adopted by the Senate would recommend administrative action to stabilize prices was approved yesterday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The resolution declares it is the sense of the Senate that the Federal Reserve Board, the Treasury, and other executive agencies of the Government "should proceed forthwith to adjust the purchasing power of the dollar by the necessary monetary policies and measures to attain within the next 12 months the 1926 price level . . ."

Japan Completes Navy Reply; Won't Give Information

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Japan was reported tonight to have completed her answer to the American-Anglo-French notes requesting information on the Japanese navy by February 20.

The reply reportedly states that Japan is not obligated to notify the powers regarding her naval plans since she did not sign the 1936 London Naval Treaty. It was said, however, to reiterate Japan's willingness to participate in any disarmament conference, provided quantitative limitation is discussed.

Union Vote Report Called Misleading

Woodruff Randolph, secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union, yesterday declared "misleading" newspaper reports analyzing returns from local unions in a referendum prior to the election of national officers.

"Each local union," he said, "counts only one indorsement no matter how large or how small the union may be."

Each candidate must receive a required number of indorsements to be placed on the official ballots. Randolph charged C. M. Baker, opposing Charles P. Howard, president, with waging a campaign of misrepresentation.

U. S. Inquires for Man Arrested by Loyalists

By the Associated Press.

The State Department telegraphed yesterday to the American Consul in Barcelona asking him to inquire as to the welfare of Cliff Haley, of Tacoma, Washington. The department said it acted after being told that Haley, a volunteer loyalist machine-gunner, was under arrest by the loyalists for trying to leave Spain.

Moore Refuses To Help Quiz Get Election Record

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 9.—Democratic Gov. A. Harry Moore flatly refused today the request of an assembly investigating committee that he assist it in getting records of his own election from a sealed vault in Jersey City.

The Governor rebuked the Republican-controlled committee for presenting the matter to him, saying its members knew he had no authority to act.

"The courts of the State are open to you," he said.

Republicans charged that if they could get the books they could prove widespread fraudulent voting in Hudson County, where Moore recieved a plurality of 129,000.

D. C. Fund to Aid China Is Increased to $1,258

Voluntary contributions totaling $1,258 for Chinese relief have been received to date, the District Chapter of the American Red Cross announced yesterday.

One transmittal of funds has already been made and a second check will be sent today. Contributions may be left at banks in the city or sent to the chapter office.

Cromwell Invents Theory to Balance Money With Goods

By the Associated Press.

James H. R. Cromwell, husband of the former Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, suggested to the House Banking Committee yesterday a new economic theory of synchronizing the flow of dollars with the flow of finished consumer goods.

Cromwell testified in support of a bill by Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland, to set up a system of retail discounts financed by $10,000,000,000 of currency that would circulate only among banks.

Cromwell recommended that the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System be directed "not only to increase the flow of dollars as required by increases in the flow of finished consumer goods, but to offset as well any hoarding which might take place."

L. P. Goldblatt to Talk.

Lester Paul Goldblatt, executive secretary of the Jewish Community Center, will speak at services at the B'nai Israel Congregation at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow. A forum will follow his address on "What Is a Jewish Community?"

Sen. Walsh Backs Bulkley Road Bill

Further Senate support for the proposal of Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat, Ohio, to build ten transcontinental highways at a cost up to $8,000,000,000, came yesterday from Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat, Massachusetts.

Walsh supported the Bulkley bill as an immediate means of giving work to millions of jobless employables.

He declared the Bulkley plan would not increase governmental expenditures because of its self-liquidating features through payment of "adequate but reasonable tolls," but would decrease relief appropriations and stimulate capital goods industries.

Ex-Dean Noe's Daughter Joins Him in Hospital

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 9.—The Rev. Israel Harding Noe's daughter, Margaret, 13, was taken to the hospital today where the clergyman is recovering from his 22 days of fasting. The child was stricken with appendicitis at school. Meanwhile, Mr. Noe was pronounced physically well enought to leave the hospital.

Gunmen Slay One, Shoot Trio In Gaming War

Nonchalant Chicago Killers Use Tactics Like Those of Gangland Days.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Three nonchalant gunmen slew one cornered victim and wounded three others today in a gambling war battle.

"Hello, Sam."

Victim Shot 3 Times.

Costello, 43, was shot three times in the abdomen. He died shortly afterward in a hospital. His brother, Nick Costello, 32, was struck in the groin and thigh. Their companions, Nello Bagli, 37, and Joseph Giovanni, 40, were felled by bullets in their right ankles.

Leaving their victims sprawled on the floor and 18 bullet holes in the walls, the gunmen pocketed their weapons, hurried to a car stripped of license plates and sped away.

Police Lieut. Henry Andel described the slain Costello as one of the chiefs of a syndicate operating slot machines in the southern section of Cook County and an adjacent district in Will County.

Survivors Silent.

Investigators reported none of the three survivors would discuss the episode. They were confined in a hospital.

Giordono told them he could not provide a good description of the gunners since he was leaving when they entered. He believed machine guns had been used, but the police recovered only shells from .38 and .45 caliber revolvers.

The marksmen's technique was reminiscent of tactics employed in the turbulent era of Chicago's gangland. Back in 1926, affable, handshaking dead shots killed Dion O'Banion, leader of a North Side mob, after entering his floral shop in manner of friends.

Quarterless gunfire also marked the massacre of seven gangsters who stood, backs turned and hands high, in a garage on St. Valentine's Day in 1929.

Forum to Discuss 'State Medicine'

A large attendance of physicians was expected at the Weekly Public Health Forum of Georgetown University tonight at 8:30 p. m. to hear a discussion of state medicine by Dr. Morris Fishbien, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Fishbien is the official spokesman and leader of the association in its fight on state and socialized medicine. The committee in charge of the forum previously had sought participation of officials of Group Health, Inc., in a joint debate with Dr. Fishbien on the issues that have stirred medical circles here and elsewhere. They declined to debate.

A panel will question Dr. Fishbien at the end of his address. It consists of Representative Louis C. Rabout, of Michigan; Dr. Arthur C. Christie and Dr. F. X. McGovern, who was chairman of the recent forum held by the District of Columbia Medical Society. The session tonight in Gaston Hall on the university campus is open to the public.

Lone Bandit Gets $150 at Bluefields

Bluefields, W. Va., Feb. 9.—A lone bandit held an assistant manager at pistol point in the brightly lighted Grenada Theater vestibule, took an estimated $150 and escaped in a waiting automobile.

Richard Horon, about 25, assistant manager of the theater, said the robber was a small, slight man.

Hull Uncertain On Duties of His New Assistant

Adolph A. Berle Has Little Experience in Field of Foreign Relations.

Appointment by President Roosevelt yesterday of Adolph A. Berle, jr., one of the original "brain trusters," to be an Assistant Secretary of State has aroused widespread curiosity in official and diplomatic circles as to what his duties will be and what part he will play in the New Deal of the future.

Berle, an outstanding authority on corporation law and structure, has had little experience in the field of foreign relations. His previous connection with the New Deal was chiefly in the field of finance, although he served for a short time in Cuba in connection with a sugar stabilization plan and was one of the American delegates to the Pan American Conference at Buenos Aires in 1936.

When asked what assignment would be given to Berle after the Senate confirms his nomination, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said he had been so preoccupied with other matters that he had given no thought to this subject. He added that he believed Berle would assum the duties of his predecessor, Hugh Wilson, now American Ambassador to Germany.

Hull's comment was taken as a denial of reports several weeks ago that Berle would be given the job of interpreting this Government's foreign policy to the press and the country and would become a sort of official spokesman for the department.

Aside from that aspect of his statement, Hull did not shed any light on what Berle's duties will be, because Wilson had no specified duties. He handled matters specially assigned to him by the Secretary. In the department's register Wilson is listed as "charged with such duties as may be assigned to him by the Secretary of State."

Berle is not particularly qualified to deal with European affairs, while the field in which he is qualified—economic, financial, tariff and general trade questions—is now under the supervision of Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

In some quarters the belief prevailed that Berle will devote most of his time to working on projects for the President and will become one of the White House advisers, being placed on the State Department pay roll to give him a salary and an office in which to work, as Raymond Moley was in 1933.

Ruining Clothing Of Friend Costs Woman $25 Fine

Arthur Mitchell, colored, of 437 Temples Court southwest, looked like a haberdasher come to judgement when he appeared as a witness in Police Court yesterday. Over his arm were three coat-hangers, each supporting a suit.

As the case got under way, it became evident that the clothing was not much good to Mitchell, or anyone else. Systematic application of a razor had reduced it to ribbons.

According to Mitchell, the damage was done by Lucille Johnson, colored. He and the girl had been out together Saturday night, he said, and quarrelled.

When he returned home later, he found the door had been broken down and damage amounting to $75 inflicted on his wardrobe. Lucille was sentenced to $25 or 25 days.

Capone Reported In Strait-Jacket

San Francisco, Feb. 9 (AP).—Al Capone, the former Chicago gang chief, was under observation of at least one psychiatrist and two other doctors at Alcatraz prison today while reports were published and denied that he had been placed in a strait-jacket.

The Justice Department in Washington said his condition on his fifth day in the prison hospital was "about the same."

Justice Department officials said they had no knowledge of any plans for a sanity hearing for Capone.

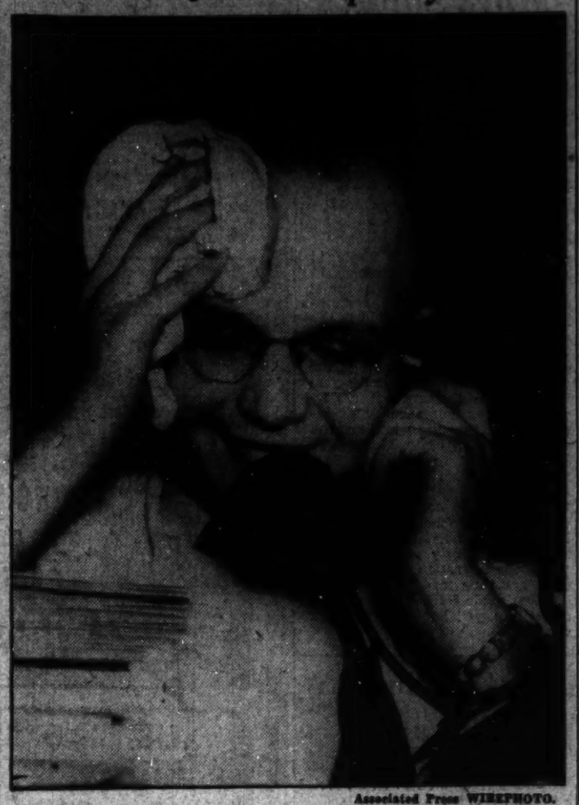
Offers of Jobs Swamp Lazy Man



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Andrew J. Habinek, 22, of Cleveland, advertised himself as "unreliable, dishonest and lazy," but in need of a job with "short hours, big pay." Numbers Bill Will Be Aired By Palmisano

District Committee Chief Still Opposed to Some of Its Provisions.

Still hostile to the bill aimed at the numbers racket, Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, yesterday agreed to hold hearings on the measure.

Pressed by members of the committee as to why the bill had been dormant since it was passed by the Senate more than a year ago, Palmisano defended his pigeon-holing of the legislation and recalled that he had supported an amendment to increase the police force.

Fears "Shakedown."

"This bill will give the police an excuse for going into anybody's home without a warrant," he said, "just like they used during prohibition. I'm not criticizing the police here, but that would just give 'em a chance to shake down people."

Palmisano recalled that "a colored gentleman named Brown" testified before the District crime subcommittee several years ago that his "boss" paid $20 a month to the police for protection.

"And the police officials weren't interested enough to take him before the grand jury," the chairman added.

Against Provision.

Palmisano said he also was opposed to another provision of the bill which would make possession of numbers slips prima facie evidence of being a runner.

"Why, I might have a number in my pocket—maybe it would be a telephone number—and the police could arrest me and hold me as a numbers runner," he said.

"Now, I would help get more policemen, if the people want them, and I did try to get them in the District appropriations bill.

"I don't know much about Washington uptown, but I know you never see a policeman down this way. Why, a man could be held up between here and Union Station and there wouldn't be a policeman in sight. These Capitol police around here are just building guards or they are busy looking after traffic."

Triangle Slayer May Escape Death

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 9.—Prosecutor J. Miller Leavy told the jury which will decide the fate of Paul A. Wright that "we contend murder in some degree was committed."

Court observers construed this portion of his argument today in the prolonged trial to mean that the State may not ask the death penalty for Wright's killing of Mrs. Wright and John Kimmel, a friend and business associate.

Girl Fails to Wake As She Is Carried Through Smoke

C. M. Johnson burst from the door of his smoke and fume-filled apartment at 1626 R street southeast last night, his two small daughters in his arms.

Carol, 2, was crying lustily. Joan, 4, remained limp, her eyes closed. Neighbors called the fire rescue squad, believing the child had been affected by the smoke or by what appeared to be gas fumes.

But by the time the rescue squad arrived Joan was awake and asking what all the excitement was about. She hadn't let the smoke or fumes from a burning celluloid light shade disturb her sleep, that was all.

Killer of 3 Chained To Prevent Suicide

By the United Press.

Tucker Prison Farm, Ark., Feb. 9.—Lester Brockelhurst, former Illinois Sunday school teacher, who admitted killing three men on a hitch-hiking tour and then boasted he would "never burn in the chair," tonight was chained in his death row cell to prevent his suicide.

The youth, sentenced to be electrocuted March 4 for shooting to death Victor Gates, Little Rock planter, last year, was chained to the floor after he attempted to hang himself by tying one end of a bed sheet around his neck and the other end to the top bars of the cell.

Guards were posted on a 24-hour watch outside Brockelhurst's cell and another condemned slayer was placed in the same cell.

Gardner Boom For Presidency Stirs Exchange

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 9.—The name of O. Max Gardner for the proposed salaried presidency of the New York Stock Exchange was tossed into the exchange's reorganization proceedings today and caused a stir within its inner councils.

Charles R. Gay, now president, wrote the exchange membership that "reports as to the selection of anyone . . . can have no basis in fact," since the proposed amendments to the exchange's constitution had not yet been adopted, nor the new board of governors chosen.

Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, now practicing law in Washington, has been urged for the new exchange position so strongly as to lead to a published report that his selection was assured.

Gardner said the post had not been offered him, that he was not and had not at any time been a candidate for it.

The proposed paid presidency, which has been urged by SEC Chairman Douglas, recently was approved in principle by the governing board.

The name of Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC also has been prominently mentioned.

Officer Hunting Auto Finds Man Sought for Year

Tuesday he was stretched out beneath a car in the I street garage where he is employed, making a few repairs. Policeman C. E. Rabbitt, searching for an automobile involved in an accident stooped down to see what the mechanic was doing. The eyes met, and Shubert realized he was in an extremely embarrassing situation.

More than a year ago he encountered Policeman Rabbitt for the first time. On that occasion Rabbitt arrested Schubert for speeding, driving without a permit and using dealers' tags. Shubert promised to appear in court the next day, but failed to do so. Inquiry at his address revealed he was believed to have gone to Atlanta.

Yesterday he kept a late date in police court, and paid $10 for speeding, $5 for driving without a permit and $5 for using dealers' tags.

Man Asks Swing Music For 'Last Long Mile'

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—In the death house at Sing Sing, Charles J. Brown, 30, colored, of Ellenville, N. Y., wants to walk to the electric chair to the throb of swing music. He may get his bizarre final request, Warden Lewis E. Lawes said today. Brown's execution is set for February 24.

11 Bus Drivers Are Indicted By Grand Jury

Former Transit Employes Charged With Larceny Conspiracy.

A group of eleven men formerly employed as bus drivers by the Capital Transit Company were indicted by the Grand Jury yesterday for conspiracy to commit larceny.

According to information presented to the jurors, one of the eleven, James C. Jackson, admitted seeing a master key that opened coin boxes on the buses, and had made a copy of it from memory. With the duplicate, authorities said, he opened the boxes at the ends of runs and removed portions of the contents. The drivers were alleged to have received part of the contents.

Besides Jackson those named were Augustus Jenkins, Holmes A. Orndort, Theodore R. Willoughby, Robert R. Rawls, Paul A. Bishop, Thomas F. Sliney, William C. Lunsford, Harry E. Gibbons, Roy K. Swann, and John F. Johnson.

Police said officials of the company had their suspicions aroused when a sudden drop in revenues was noticed.

A charge of forging the name of Representative Albert Thomas, of Texas, to a check for $25 which he cashed at a restaurant, led to indictment of Daniel W. Kingsbury, 42, for forgery and uttering. He was arrested when he sought to cash another check in Philadelphia, where he represented himself as the Texan.

Others indicted were Margaret E. Johnson, James E. Allen, John Byrd, Robert L. Waters, Arthur Whitaker, Cleveland Lockwood, Edward J. Josephine Roche Asks Coal Group To Save Her Mine

By the Associated Press.

Josephine Roche, the country's only woman coal operator, told the Bituminous Coal Commission that her Rocky Mountain Fuel Co. probably would have to close its Columbine Mine unless the commission allowed her to charge the Burlington Railroad $2.57 a ton for lump and egg coal and $2.20 for mine run.

The commission several weeks ago issued an order putting Miss Roche's request into effect temporarily. Yesterday's hearing was on her petition for a permanent order.

Girl Will Preside At Law Banquet

Miss Elizabeth Espey, attractive brunette of the junior class of the Washington College of Law, will break tradition by acting as toastmistress at the school's forty-second annual banquet at 8 p. m. Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Hatton W. Summers, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, will speak at the banquet at which 500 to 600 alumni and gnests are expected.

Alumni of the class of 1913 will celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary. Entertainment and dancing will follow the banquet.

Library to Expand Lending Service

Lending services of the Library of Congress will be expanded under a grant of the Rockefeller Foundation to provide apparatus for microfilming and other photoduplicating processes, Librarian Herbert Putnam said yesterday.

"Through the use of the photostat and, though in a meager way, the use of film, some such service already has been in operation," he said. "But, in providing for a really adequate plant representing the latest developments in such apparatus, the Foundation will enable the Library to extend far more widely the benefit of its huge collections, now, in the aggregate, exceeding those elsewhere under any one roof."

Biggers Creating Idleness, Is Charge

Shreveport, La., Feb. 8 (AP).—Complaint that John A. Biggers, director of the unemployment census, is "willingly" creating unemployment was presented to Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, on her visit here, by representatives of the Shreveport local, Window Glass Cutters League of America.

Eleven cutters recently were laid off indefinitely at the local Libby-Owens-Ford glass plant, of which Mr. Biggers is president.

Beware Kidney Germs if Tired, Nervous, Aching

Are you Run Down, Nervous, suffer Aching or Swollen Joints? Do you Get Up Nights, sufer from Burning Passages, Frequent Headaches, Leg Pains, Backache, Dizziness, Puffy Eyelids, Loss of Appetite and Energy? If so, the true cause often may be germs developed in the body during colds, or by bad teeth or tonsils that need removing. These germs may attack the delicate membranes of your Kidneys or Bladder and often cause much trouble. Ordinary medicines can't help much because they don't flush the germs. The doctor's formula Cystex, now stocked by all druggists, starts fighting Kidney germs in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Sis-tex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co.—Adv.

Dark-Haired Native of West Africa Ominously Silent at Press Conference, But She Has a Good Reason—She's a Chimpanzee.

A native of West Africa—her sojourn in the City of Brotherly Love was brief—Mary has not yet picked up any English. At her initial press conference yesterday she refused to talk to reporters and snubbed photographers, but even had she been more cordial she probably wouldn't have said anything, because Mlle. Mary is a chimpanzee.

She is the first chimp the zoo has had since Soko died of old age a year ago. Accordingly, Director William M. Mann and Head Keeper William H. Blackburne are pleased with the new accession.

To be exact, Mary is "on deposit," although she is likely to become a permanent fixture in the ape department of the mammal house. Her chances of remaining will be especially good if she doesn't delay in adapting herself to the new surroundings.

Three years old and strong, the chimp received a wide berth yesterday from keepers. Her nervousness was increased by an incident accompanying her arrival.

Shipped in a crate, Mary wore an iron collar to which was attached a chain. Somewhere along the line the key to the padlock was lost. The collar had to be removed with a bolt cutter, while keepers held her hands and feet. She was a pretty good "patient" while the operation was in progress, but once freed she set up a din that made Susie, the next door orangutan, put her fingers to her ears.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will make a census of unemployed veterans in the District starting Monday in an attempt to provide work for jobless members now estimated to number 3,300.

In announcing plans for the census, O. W. Hollingsworth, department liaison officer, said applications giving personal history of unemployed veterans, will be received at the department headquarters, 1624 H street northwest. The census is expected to take several weeks to complete.

Following compilation of the census data, Hollingsworth said, a written appeal will be made to all business concerns in Washington employing more than five persons, to provide work for the veterans.

Results of the census will also be sent to Congress and requests made to place the men in Government jobs, Hollingsworth declared.

"Another thing we intend to tackle," Hollingsworth asserted, "is the attitude of most private concerns that men over 40 are not capable of handling a job. Most of our men are over that and just as capable of handling a job as anyone else."

Meanwhile the Equality-Walter Reed Post convenes tonight at the Pythian Temple, while the Col. H. L. Edmonds Post gathers at the Hamilton Hotel.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Bar Bandits Get $50,000 in Loot

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Three men held up the Arena Bar on Biscayne boulevard this morning, rifled a bank of private safe deposit boxes and escaped with cash and jewelry unofficially estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000.

The robbers, unmasked and brandishing pistols, walked in at 8 a. m. while the shifts were changing in the all-night resort, herded eight employes and one customer upstairs and made them lie on the floor, where they covered them with coats and tablecloths. With crowbars the men pried open 20 safe deposit boxes.

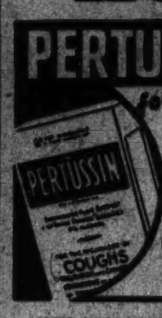
How To Save On Doctor Bills



The one safe way to save on Doctor bills is to visit your Doctor—or call him in—at the first indication that all is not as it should be. Often his timely counsel may save a long and costly illness. It's poor economy to try to do your own prescribing. And when your Doctor gives you a prescription, be sure to bring it to a Certified Druggist. Our registered pharmacists will fill it exactly as he directs. Our stocks are large and complete; our prices are always fair.

Sen. Smathers, Bride Depart On Honeymoon

New Jersey Legislator Surprises Friends by Speedy Marriage.

Senator William H. Smathers, of New Jersey, and Miss Mary James Foley, of Winter Haven, Fla., were married yesterday in the historic courthouse at Fairfax, Va.

Immediately after the ceremony, performed by the Rev. E. Clark Maxwell, pastor of the Fairfax Methodist Church, the couple left by airplane for a wedding trip to Boca Ratone, Fla.

Although the couple's engagement had been announced, no date had been set for the wedding and the ceremony yesterday came as a surprise. Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, broke the news to the Senate when he announced that Smathers would not be present because he "was detained by domestic urgency."

Son Is Best Man.

Senator Smather's mother Mrs. B. F. Smathers, of Waynesville, N. C., and three of his five children by a previous marriage were present at the wedding ceremony. The Senator's eldest son, Joseph, 14, was best man; his youngest son, Benjamin, 12, gave the bride away and his daughter, Miss Billy Smathers, 18, was bridesmaid.

The bride wore an ensemble of midnight blue trimmed with gray fox, blue suede shoes and a small hat of the same material as the ensemble. Her corsage was of pale pink camelias and lilies of the valley.

When they motored to Washington Airport to board a Miami-bound plane, the newlyweds were greeted by a battery of photographers.

Jokes With Photographers.

"Make me look like the Duke of Windsor," the Senator asked the cameramen. The bride apparently didn't think much of the idea. "You look better than the Duke of Windsor," she declared.

After a week at Boca Raton, the couple will be at home at the Senator's estate, Four Winds, Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Smathers, who is 28 years old and a native of Barryville, Va., has spent most of her life in Winter Haven. She was educated at the Gibson School in Winter Haven, St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., and Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.

Smathers, 47, was born at Waynesville, N. C., and is a graduate of the University of North Carolina law school. Moving to Atlantic City after his graduation, he became, in 1922, the youngest court of common pleas judge in New Jersey history. He was a New Jersey State senator before he came to the United States Senate.

Holding Company Law Is Challenged

By the Associated Press.

An attorney for the Electric Bond & Share Co. told the Supreme Court yesterday he was challenging the constitutionality of the 1935 public utility holding company act "in order to protect our property from being taken over by a Federal commission."

This assertion by John F. Maclane, New York lawyer, concluded a six-hour argument on validity of the legislation. A decision may be given as early as February 28.

Rep. O'Toole to Speak.

Representative Donald O'Toole, of New York, will address the Washington Chapter, Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes of America, Inc., at 8 o'clock tonight in the National Democratic Headquarters, 1500 Rhode Island avenue. The chapter is interested in bringing classified status to Federal employes not under civil service. Charles E. Reed, association president, will preside.

New Jersey Senator Takes Bride

Harris & Ewing.

Rabbi Metz to Speak At Adas Israel Rites

Services of Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest, at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow, will be dedicated to Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, President Joseph A. Wilner announced yesterday.

Rabbi Solomon Metz will speak on "Foundations of Jewish Unity" and Seymour S. Guthman, vice president, will speak on "The Secret of Jewry's Survival."

Maj. Gen. G. S. Simonds To Be Retired March 31

The War Department yesterday announced the retirement March 31 of Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, now commanding the Ninth Corps Area, with headquarters in San Francisco, Calif.

He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, who is now on duty as commander of the Third Corps Area, with headquarters in Baltimore, Md.

Wage-Hour Bill Likely to Await End of Session

Postponement of Legislation Till Passage of Regular Appropriations Seen.

Postponement of efforts to enact wage-hour legislation until the last of the regular appropriation bills have been passed by the House, and Congress is on the home lap toward adjournment, was indicated yesterday.

The bill has been inactive in the House Labor Committee since the special session, when the House refused to accept the measure and sent it back for revision.

Some friends of the bill said they hoped to frame a measure mild enough to pass the scrutiny of the hostile House Rules Committee, but strong enough to assure an effective compromise in conference with the Senate.

The Rules Committee, which last session refused to give the bill right-of-way, this session will have final say on whether the revised measure goes to the floor. House leaders insist they will not attempt to discharge the committee by the petition route. There was general doubt they could get the necessary 218 signatures if they chose to do so.

A switch of at least two votes in the Rules Committee would be necessary before the legislation could be shaken loose, as that committee was aligned approximately, 9 to 5, against the bill last session.

Wage-hour bill strategists said they anticipated a major effort to push a modified bill to the floor after action on the last appropriation bill, in late March or early April.

Held for Cruelty to Child

Martha Harris, 27, and her father, David Harris, are shown in Connellsville, Pa., as they appeared before a justice of the peace who held them for court on new charge of cruelty to Miss Harris' 3-year-old daughter, Alice. The new charge is "cruelty to an infant" and is punishable by two years in jail and $500 fine.

Stock Regulation Bill Draws Fire

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Banking Committee is expected to vote next week on the Maloney bill, which provides for Securities Commission regulation of over-the-counter dealings in unlisted securities.

Charles E. Weigold, a partner in the New York firm of Roosevelt & Weigold, Inc., told the committee at its final session yesterday the proposed legislation, offered by Maloney (Democrat), Connecticut, would give the SEC "virtual control" over municipal financing.

Charity Racket Costs District $200,000 Year

Charity

Since such investigation often is embarassing to the fake charity, the modern racketeer avoids the bothersome possibility by almost exclusive use of the telephone.

Possessing no real licensing or police power over these shady enterprises, the District government can only say to its citizens "Caveat Emptor," by which the Romans meant, "Let the buyer beware."

And "buyer" is the right word, because something is certainly being "sold." The figurative cash registers of the charity rackets ring up two chief types of sales.

Method of Operating.

In the first class fall the "one-night-stands," benefits organized for one specific cause, to combat a single emergency or disaster.

Riding the wave of aroused public opinion, the professional operator attaches himself to the "cause" and organizes a single event or short-term drive for funds to aid the sufferers.

By the time the operator has left town, the generous citizens of Washington realize that the sufferers are just where they started, if not a bit behind, while the high-pressure organizer is the only recipient of any charity.

But, quite as costly to the city as the spectacular single-event rackets are the tight-knit, efficient little organizations which do business day in and day out, tirelessly telephoning the residents of northwest Washington, quietly dividing the spoils at their shabby headquarters.

Several of these "charities" have been doing business at the same stand for several years. Others appeared on the local scene only after recent tightening of regulations in various cities along the Eastern seaboard drew notice to the District's hospitality.

Appeals Described.

Describing the appeals of these organizations last week to church members in an exclusive residential section, the Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the department of social welfare, Washington Federation of Churches, found that more than half his audience had been victimized within the last month.

Less gullible than most, one woman reported she left the collector at the door while she went to the telephone to make inquiries. When she returned to the door, he had left.

But as often as not, no inquiries are made. The collector takes the contribution the solicitor has lined up by telephone a few minutes earlier.

And with the dollar or $5, as the case may be, gathered in, the mysterious and solvent processes of overhead begin to function.

When sweet charity finally gets its "cut," the paper currency has shrunk to one of the smaller examples of silver coinage.

The case history of a dollar contributed to a typical charity racket will be described in tomorrow's article.)

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The relations between 500,000 steel workers and capital soared to a new level yesterday as a new C. I. O. contract was signed at New York by the U. S. Steel Corporation, replacing one which expires February 28. Seated signing are Benjamin Fairless (left), U. S. Steel president, and Philip Murray, of C. I. O. Standing, Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel; C. F. Hood, American Steel & Wire president; William Beye, U. S. Steel vice president; J. L. Perry, Carnegie-Illinois Steel president; David J. McDonald, Steel Workers Organizing Committee secretary-treasurer; William Mitch, S. W. O. C. director; Van A. Bittner, S. W. O. C. director; Charles Cox, National Tube Co. vice president, and Clinton S. Golden, S. W. O. C. director.

affects 240,000 workers. The C. I. O.'s steel workers' organizing committee, headed by Philip Murray, retains the right to bargain only for its members. Steel emphasized that the open shop was reaffirmed.

Murray, saying the new contract promised "to stem the tide of wage slashing," added it was a "victory for America" because of the "stabilizing effect" it would have on business generally.

"Triumph," Says Lewis.

John L. Lewis called the new C. I. O.-U. S. steel wage and hour agreement announced yesterday "a triumph for moderation and sound business judgment."

Lewis said:

"It preserves the current wage structure and standards; it maintains the buying power of labor except as curtailed by shrunken opportunity; it gives leadership to the confused and bewildered in business, because it charts a definite course which all industry will do well to follow.

"Best of all it creates an opportunity for industry and labor to help in the solution of the country's pressing problems rather than to tear at each other's throats."

Sweethearts of 1887 Parted 50 Years, Reunited in 1938

Superior, Nebr., Feb. 9 (AP).—A romance that bloomed in 1887 culminated here in the marriage of Edward M. Kleven and Miss Pink Seydel. They fell in love at the wedding of her brother, Ellsworth, in 1887. They planned their marriage that day but later quarreled, parted and married others.

Last September 20, Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Seydel celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Among the guests were the old sweethearts, now widowed.

They met, fell in love again. Yesterday they were married and will settle down on Kleven's farm.

Dirigibles to Use Two Navy Fields

The Navy Department said yesterday a contract had been signed between the Navy and the American Zepplin Co. for use of Lakehurst and Miami fields as terminals for the LZ-130, which will make its first trip to the United States in June.

Similar to a previous contract with regard to the Hindenburg, which exploded May 6, the contract calls for use of "naval airship facilities" at Lakehurst and "temporary facilities" at Miami.

cans had cried "gag rule" and "regimentation" and Democratic farm chieftains had replied in effect that it was "this bill or nothing."

In the end, 243 Democrats had joined with 14 Republicans, 5 Farmer-Laborites, and 1 Progressive in voting for the conference report. Only 54 Democrats lined up with 74 Republicans and 7 Progressives to vote "no."

Farm Rift Widened.

The rift between rival farm organizations over the measure was widened as the scene of battle was transferred to the Senate. The American Farm Bureau Federation has been supporting the legislation as the best it can hope for at this time. The National Grange has hotly opposed compulsory features, maintaining the objectionable features far outweigh the good.

The Grange yesterday wrote individual Senators that "no emergency, however great, could justify Congress in passing the bill in its present form."

"It would be playing the shabbiest kind of a trick on the farmer if Congress, under the guise of doing something to help in the solution of his problems, should bind him hand and foot and deprive him of his fundamental and constitutional rights," said the Grange.

"If the parliamentary situation is such that the bill cannot be amended, it should be killed outright and one that would really do the farmers some good should be written and passed at this session of Congress."

Is Compromise Draft.

The bill now pushed to the brink of enactment has been before Congress since the President called a special session last November 15 for the specific purpose of framing farm legislation. Widely conflicting bills were passed by House and Senate before the special session was adjourned. The present conference report represents a compromise between those two drafts.

Complex machinery is erected on the basis of the existing soil conservation act, providing for controls, loans and "parity" payments if possible on the five major crops—cotton, wheat, corn, rice and tobacco.

Penalties Provided.

If production ranged high above the surplus point in any of these, the Secretary could publish restrictive marketing quotas, which farmers would have to approve by a two-thirds referendum vote. Penalties would be assessed for sales over quotas.

"Parity" price payments to farmers would depend on the money available. A graduated scale of benefit payments would give increases to all farmers receiving less than $200, and place a $10,000 ceiling on individual benefits. Commodity loans could be made on wheat and cotton, ranging from 52 to 75 per cent of parity, when prices fell below 52 per cent of parity. Corn loans would be made when the price dropped below 52 per cent of parity.

The Government would make its first experiment in crop insurance, starting with voluntary insurance of the 1939 wheat crop. To find new uses and markets for the five major commodities, research laboratories would be set up in four sections of the country.

Equality Its Objective.

Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, based his defense of the bill on what he said was its chief objective—"farm equality for industry."

"There are $40,000,000,000 worth of farm lands, with more than a billion acres in cultivation," he said. "There are 65,000,000 cattle and 51,000,000 hogs. We produce an average of 2,000,000,000 bushels of corn every year, and about 700,000,000 or 800,000,000 bushels of wheat. We produce great quantities of cotton, on an average of 13,000,000 bales per year. No business in the world is comparable to the farm business. Industry secured its tariff. We insist the farmers have an offset to the tariff and be put on equality with industry."

Criticism of the measure came principally from Republicans, but some Democratic voices joined them. Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, predicted Democrats would be demanding repeal of the program in two years. He said the bill would "do more to destroy the Democratic Party and bring Republicans back into power than anything else." Representative Edward H. Rees (Republican), of Kansas, warned of the dangers of crop regulation, and asked for soil conservation extension "without hooking it up with crop control."

Policeman Is Better.

Police Sergt. Estie Williams, traffic division, seriously ill in Emergency Hospital, was reported greatly improved yesterday following a blood transfusion. More than a dozen policemen responded to a call sent out Tuesday for voluntary donors after Williams' condition became grave.

Bill Is Reported To Void Liability Of Congressmen

The House District Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill to relieve members of Congress of personal liability for damages in case of death or injury to their employes.

Acting at the request of Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, the committee approved a bill that would exempt all such employes from the District compensation act.

Hobbs explained that another bill is pending before the House Judiciary Committee to place the financial responsibility upon the Federal Government.

The committee also reported favorably bills to exempt the Society of Cincinnati from taxation, to amend the charter of the Washington College of Law, and to change the status of the chief clerk of the health department.

Dwelling Burns As Owner Calls Wrong Numbers

Totowa Borough, N. J., Feb. 9 (AP).—Mrs. John Zajac's home caught fire today and she telephoned the Wayne Township firemen, who told her to send the alarm to the Totowa Borough department. Getting mixed, she next told her story to the Little Falls firemen, who also referred her to the local department.
She finally got the right number.

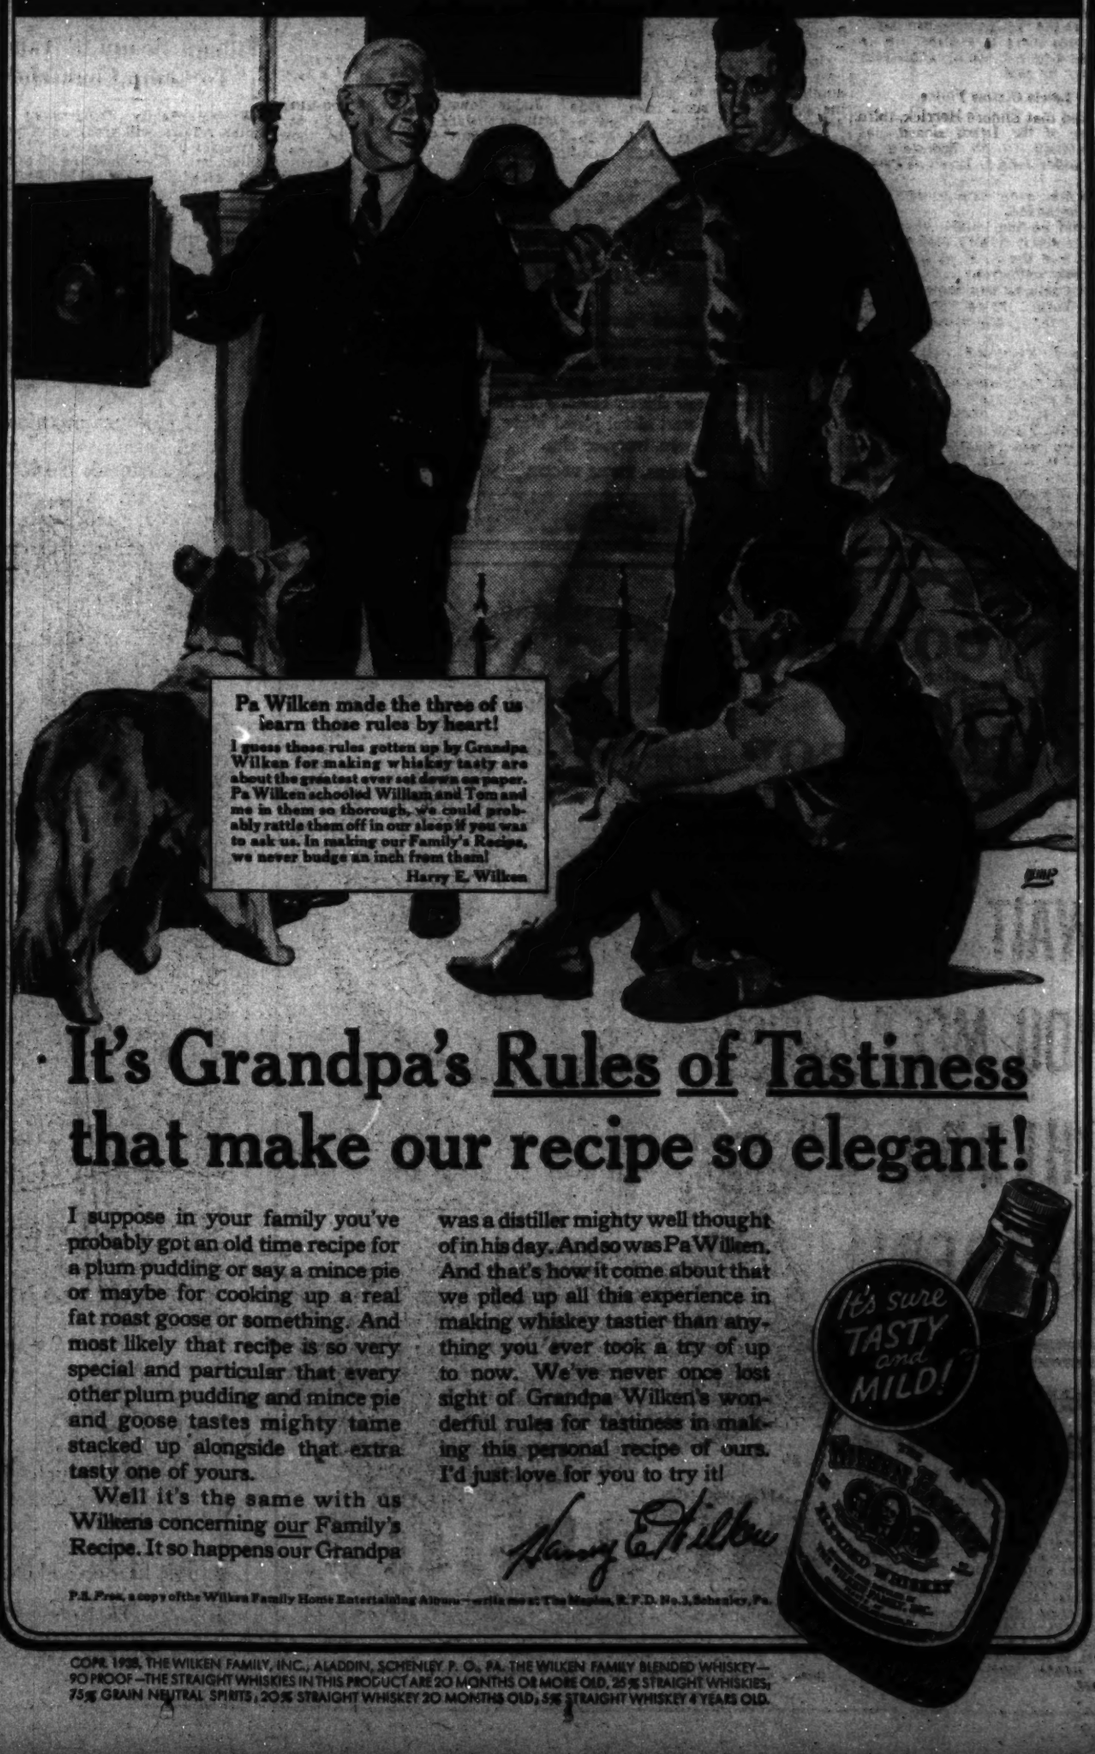
THE WILKEN FAMILY
BLENDED WHISKEY—IT'S OUR FAMILY'S WHISKEY, NEIGHBOR!


Pa Wilken made the three of us learn those rules by heart!
I guess those rules gotten up by Grandpa Wilken for making whiskey tasty are about the greatest ever set down on paper. Pa Wilken schooled William and Tom and me in them so thorough, we could probably rattle them off in our sleep if you was to ask us. In making our Family's Recipe, we never budge an inch from them!
Harry E. Wilken
It's Grandpa's Rules of Tastiness that make our recipe so elegant!
I suppose in your family you've probably got an old time recipe for a plum pudding or say a mince pie or maybe for cooking up a real fat roast goose or something. And most likely that recipe is so very special and particular that every other plum pudding and mince pie and goose tastes mighty tame stacked up alongside that extra tasty one of yours.
Well it's the same with us Wilkens concerning our Family's Recipe. It so happens our Grandpa was a distiller mighty well thought of in his day. And so was Pa Wilken. And that's how it come about that we piled up all this experience in making whiskey tastier than anything you ever took a try of up to now. We've never once lost sight of Grandpa Wilken's wonderful rules for tastiness in making this personal recipe of ours. I'd just love for you to try it!

'Reds' Rule CIO Marine Unions, Senate Is Told

and with four depositions sworn out by communists and others. These were missing from the Bridges file which Secretary Perkins turned over to the committee last week.

From all indications, Harry Bridges is about to become an "issue" on Capitol Hill.

In San Francisco last night, Bridges "dared" Senator Copeland to call him as a witness.

"As mouthpiece of shipowners and reactionary interests," he said in a telegram to Copeland, "you dare not allow our testimony proving shipowners and persons as yourself are responsible for maritime industry unrest."

Copeland has said repeatedly that he would not summon Bridges, explaining that he hoped to confine the hearings to "Americans."

On Communist Pay.

After hearing Longshoreman Ryan blast Bridges, Joe Curran, leader of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.), Secretary Perkins and members of the National Labor Relations Board, the committee yesterday made a favorable report on the Copeland resolution for appointment of a five-man special committee to investigate "subversive activities" at sea.

Ryan told the committee that both Bridges and Curran were Communists. He said Curran had been on the Communist pay roll at $45 a week.

"Can you prove that?" asked Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan.

"You bet I can," Ryan replied.

Later on, after the day's session was over, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, the chairman, said he had a strong "doubt" that Curran was a Communist.

"I understand that he is a devout Catholic and goes to mass regularly," Copeland said.

Copeland is convinced, however, that most of Curran's lieutenants are Communists, some of them making no efforts to hide the fact.

Curran Asks to Testify.

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, said last night that Curran had telegraphed Copeland from New York asking for a chance to appear and repudiate Ryan's testimony. He said Curran had asked also that Ryan be there when he testified.

Ryan, in charging that Secretary Perkins and members of the National Labor Relations Board had "built up" Bridges, said that Edwin C. Smith, a member of the board, had once detained his office staff after hours to harangue them "about what a great labor leader Harry Bridges was."

The big longshoremen's boss referred to Edwin Smith and Donald W. Smith, also a member of the board, as the "cough drop brothers."

"I claim there is a direct tie up between Edwin C. Smith and Harry Bridges," he said.

Lewis Claims Police.

He said that Elinore Herrick, third member of the Labor Board, had an ambition to be Secretary of Labor under John L. Lewis as President.

"She may even want to be President," he added.

He said he had talked with John L. Lewis about rivalry between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. on the New York waterfront.

"Lewis said he had control of the New York police department through the administration," he said.

Lewis J. Valentine, police commissioner of New York, said last night that the statement was "absurd and ridiculous."

Stanley Hiller, head of the Pacific Coast Fisheries Co., told the committee late yesterday that labor unions in San Francisco had driven him out of business with their continued demands for wage increases and overtime pay. The result was, he said, that the company's nine ships are idle and many men are out of work.

He said more than 70 per cent of the men who had worked for him would like to get out of the unions and go back to work, but were afraid of union leaders and "strong-arm men."

He predicted that the unions would wreck the salmon canning industry in Alaska, thus throwing business to the Japanese. In response to a question from Chairman Copeland, he said he was convinced that Communists dominated the West Coast unions. Their policy, he said, was not to help the workers, but to destroy industry.

Changing Beer Sign Modes of 1938

Post Staff Photos.

Virginia merchants looked at their new beer and wine signs yesterday and muttered, "It's a new rule." They had been compelled at midnight Tuesday to remove all signs indicating the sale of wine or beer and substitute an uninteresting sign like the one at the left being examined by C. M. McKenzie. The other sign is "out" unless the owner removes the words "wine, ale and beer," leaving only "dancing" and "Bar-B-Q" to entice customers.

can't call a beer or a wine by name. He can't place a bottle in the window. Billboard agencies must tear down their advertisements.

All the merchants near the Washington limits were talking about it yesterday. One merchant in Alexandria had a big sign that cost $450. He covered up the first three letters, leaving the word, "weizer," on the end. "Drink Weizer," suggested the sign, and the merchant left it in lieu of a ruling on the case.

On a rural road, a filling-station proprietor grabbed a handful of drinking glasses and cried: "Under this law I've thrown my money away. I bought these glasses and they have the name of a beer on them. Now, what can I do? I tried to chisel the name off, but it's burnt in."

Road Signs Destroyed.

Another said, "I can't use my bottle openers because they have an ad on them."

Otherwise in the picture were the beer companies that dispatched numbers of boys to pull down all the signs on the rural roads. One driver for a well-known brewer said he had been instructed to dispose of all the signs of his company that he saw on the routes.

A canvass of the important roads on the Virginia side of Washington disclosed all signs gone, excepting in one instance. And this one wasn't illuminated after nightfall.

'Free' Bail Banned For Traffic Court

In the interest of impartiality, Judge Hobart Newman, of Traffic Court, yesterday discontinued the custom of releasing offenders, in custody of employers. The practice is unfair to other offenders, Judge Newman said. He sees "no reason why the employe of a large concern should be given more consideration than the general public."

The case at issue was that of John A. Scott, Capital Transit Co. motorman charged wih hitting a pedestrian. Scott was released in custody of a company attorney when first arrested. He asked for a continuance yesterday. Judge Newman turned down the proposal of a $100 bond, setting it at $300 instead.

Judge Newman's uncompromising attitude toward traffic violations became evident soon after he took over traffic court recently. Fines for speeding now start at $10 in most instances, rather than at $5.

Measles on Rise in U. S.; Only 12 New Cases Here

Measles cases still are on the rise, the Public Health Service said yesterday, with 36,667 having been reported in the week ended February 5.

The outbreak is most severe in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and North Carolina. During the week ended January 29 new cases throughout the country totaled 21,929.

In the District, however, measles is all but nonexistent. Only 12 cases were reported last week.

Committee for Industrial Organization, conferred with Assistant WPA Administrator David Miles yesterday before announcing that immediate and extensive Government relief "is the only solution to the unemployment problem."

Martin, stating that local governments cannot sustain the "tremendous increases in relief rolls" expressed himself as greatly encouraged "at the prospect of immediate Federal aid."

He added:

"In the city of Detroit alone I understand that the present rate of relief expenditure is $90,000 a day. The city cannot possibly produce more than $300,000 for relief, which at the present rate will last only a little more than three days."

The sum of $497,000,000 is now available to carry on WPA relief until June 30, WPA officials said.

nated as the Undersecretary of Commerce.

"Give him the aid of a policy-making economic council.

"When specific trade agreements or association plans are presented, let there be a special advisory committee, representative of management, labor and other group interests directly concerned.

"Require written approval of co-operative programs in findings of fact and conclusions. Provide for continuing public supervision so as to make sure that the public interest is protected.

"Industrial planning is now predominantly planning for individual profits, whereas individual profit-making should be a means of carrying out broad scale industrial planning for adequate production and distribution. The ordinary individual will not and cannot plan for social gains. So it is necessary to blance and direct his efforts with collective planning. An entire industry may plan for group profits, but only through inter-industrial planning can we obtain a balanced program for the general welfare.

Approves Governmental Control.

"The only organized responsibility for the general welfare lies in government. That is why we turn to government to aid in organizing social planning. But government cannot execute the plans because political control naturally tends to eliminate the free working of the profit motive and to impede individual initiative, which is impelled by hope of individual gain.

"Thus, we arrive at the primary responsibility upon government, which is to bring together and hold together competitors for the determination of broad industrial policies.

"But we must also insist that public supervision shall not be extended into governmental control, which means the political destruction of that essential liberty of action, which is preserved to the individual by protecting private property rights and encouraging private profit as the reward of an individual adventure in undertaking the risk, the responsibility and the effort of private enterprise."

Maid Shoots Self In Maryland Home

Nellie Reese, 43, a maid employed in the home of Charles Beall, Derwood, Md., was found lying dead on the kitchen floor of Beall's house last night, her head almost severed by a charge from a 12-gauge shotgun which lay nearby.

Members of the family told police they were inspecting a barn in the rear of the home when they heard theh report of the rifle and rushed to theh house and found Miss Reese prostrate on the floor.

The body was removed to the Warner Pumphrey funeral home at Rockville and a certificate of suicide issued by Dr. William Linthicum.

Fifteen Seized As Police Push D.C. Crime War

Bladensburg. They are alleged to have raided the District from their homes in Baltimore. Police said they left their residences in automobiles, drove into Washington, used their guns, snatched their loot, leaving terror in their wake, and speeded back to Baltimore again.

Those who admitted their guilt yesterday were Harry M. Towson, 20; Andrew Savage, 25, and Samuel T. Brady, 30.

They admitted robbing a liquor store and a grocery, and said they had fired at one of their victims.

Behind the bars of the Maryland prison are two of their former "pals," Roosevelt Carter, 26, and William McKinney, 25. Police still are seeking Thomas O. Austin, 24, while Solomon McNair will come to trial tomorrow.

The seven committed least 22 robberies, police said.

Capture of the men came after they resisted Detective Sergts. Robert Barrett, D. J. Guest and E. E. Scott, who had chased them from the District to the Peace Cross.

Two Jewelry Thefts.

While authorities drove ahead on gangland here, two jewelry robberies were reported yesterday.

Gladys Schwarzenback, of 436 Luray place northwest, told police jewelry valued at $237 had been stolen from her home by a thief who entered through the bedroom window and ransacked the house.

Inspector Thompson's order came after repeated thefts of cars had been reported within the last 24 hours.

Cut in Railroad Fees For Liquor Proposed

A "wholesale" license rate for railroads that sell liquor in Washington on dining and club cars was proposed in a bill in the House yesterday by Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee.

Instead of the annual $20 a car fee, the bill would permit a blanket fee of $60 for all cars of a single railroad, or $10 a car. For beer and wine licenses the measure proposes a reduction from $10 a car to a blanket fee of $30 for all cars.

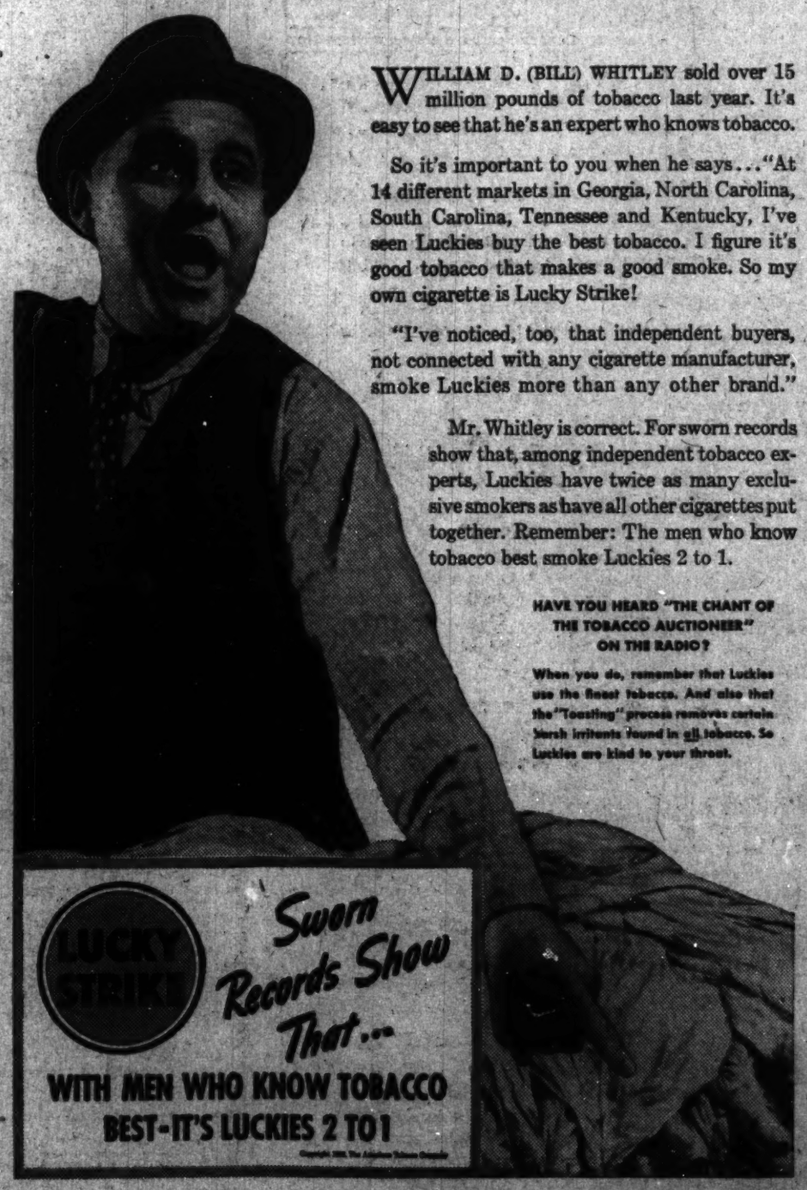
HE SEES WHO BUYS WHAT TOBACCO
Like so many other independent experts, Bill Whitley, Tobacco Auctioneer of Henderson, N. C., smokes Luckies



WILLIAM D. (BILL) WHITLEY sold over 15 million pounds of tobacco last year. It's easy to see that he's an expert who knows tobacco.

So it's important to you when he says..."At 14 different markets in Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, I've seen Luckies buy the best tobacco. I figure it's good tobacco that makes a good smoke. So my own cigarette is Lucky Strike!

"I've noticed, too, that independent buyers, not connected with any cigarette manufacturer, smoke Luckies more than any other brand."

Mr. Whitley is correct. For sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together. Remember: The men who know tobacco best smoke Luckies 2 to 1.

HAVE YOU HEARD "THE CHANT OF THE TOBACCO AUCTIONEER" ON THE RADIO?

When you do, remember that Luckies use the finest tobacco. And also that the "Toasting" process removes certain harsh irritants found in all tobacco. So Luckies are kind to your throat.

Labor's Appeal For Business.

In a formal statement at the conclusion of its meeting in Miami, the A. F. of L. executive council asserted that the "real remedy for unemployment is the creation and maintenance of work opportunities for working men and women in private industry."

Government spending, the council declared, can bring only temporary relief to the unemployed. In thus stressing the fact that relief outlays are mere palliatives, the A. F. of L. indirectly rejects the theory that Government pump priming is a cure for depression.

The reasons for the failure of private industry to supply jobs for the idle millions are discussed by the A. F. of L. with a tolerance and objectivity in marked contrast to some of the sharply critical observations of the Administration. Whether or not there is a valid reason for the prevalent lack of confidence which is one of the causes of restricted activity, the A. F. of L. admits the existence of fear and suggests a means of combating. The recommendation is for repeal or modification of the undivided profits and capital gains taxes, in order to restore confidence and create "co-operation and understanding" between industry, labor and Government.

In making this demand the labor leaders are not animated by altruistic motives, but by a knowledge that employes as well as employers are injured by tax laws which dry up sources of new capital and thereby retard industrial expansion. Those who imagined that such discriminatory laws would automatically attract the support of labor are due for a rude awakening.

The emphasis placed upon the mutuality of interests of labor and capital also strikes a conciliatory note that is definitely encouraging. While reasonable protests continue to be expressed against wage reductions, the council's evident desire to lighten tax burdens testifies to its realization that depressed industries cannot support high wages.

Thus, quite logically and for its own sake, organized labor comes forward as the foe of a tax program launched in the supposed interest of the "little man."

American Rentiers.

Except under the high-pressure salesmanship methods of wartime the American people have never heretofore been disposed to invest their savings in Government issues. There are various reasons for this indifference. One is that the low interest rates of tax-exempt or partially tax-exempt Government issues have until recently made them unattractive to persons of small means. Moreover, when the Federal debt was limited and the budget in balance, the Government itself was especially concerned to create popular investment support for its issues.

Today the situation has changed radically. The Government appreciates as never before in time of peace the importance of expanding the investment demand for its new issues. This non-inflationary kind of borrowing is the antithesis of sales of Government issues on credit, which result in undesirable, often dangerous, concentration of Government issues in bank portfolios.

The "small" investor, for his part, finds today that choice of investment outlets is extremely limited. If he desires security he must be content with limited returns. Furthermore, he is less inclined to venture where there is risk of loss. The net result of a change in attitude, both on the part of the Government as borrower and of the man of limited means as investor, is a situation very favorable to development of a really popular demand for Government bonds.

Evidence that such demand exists, and is being cultivated by the Government, is found in the mounting sales of United States savings bonds. Secretary Morgenthau reports that January sales were the largest for any month since the bonds were first offered in March, 1935. To date bonds having a maturity value of over $1,500,000,000 have been disposed of, chiefly in small amounts. Individual purchases account for about 85 per cent of all the bonds sold, and most of the buyers take small amounts.

The 1,250,000 individual investors reported provide an outlet for a substantial volume of Government offerings. They also constitute an alert body of citizens interested in maintaining the credit of the Government, whose influence is, or should be, active against extravagance in spending and vocal for budget balancing.

The 'Equal Rights' Amendment.

Worthy of a better cause is the persistence with which a small but ardent group of feminists have fought for a constitutional amendment according "equal rights" to women. A Senate judiciary sub-committee is now holding hearings on this much discussed proposal which, as one thoughtful witness pointed out, ignores the fact that law "is no place for emotional hopes."

One of the best ways to gauge the value of any proposal is to note the character of the opposition to it. Women prominent in the trade union movement, or familiar with the conditions under which women work, have appeared to cite their objections to the amendment. That distinguished leader in the fight for women suffrage, Carrie Chapman Catt, and the organization which she heads, as well as other civic bodies composed solely of women, likewise protest against a plan that they regard as impractical and "misleading." Many of the country's outstanding legal authorities, both conservative and liberal, are also on record against the proposal.

These dissenting groups seem thoroughly in sympathy with the desire to emancipate women from legal restrictions impairing their usefulness and unduly hampering them in their freedom of action, either as housewives or paid workers. They do not, however, believe that a blanket amendment could provide a desirable sort of freedom unless one regards the right to be exploited as a privilege to be cherished. For passage of the amendment would obviously undermine all protective laws applicable to employed women workers as such.

Women in industry are as a rule unorganized, unskilled workers who in the absence of protective legislation fall easy victims to exploitation. The restrictive provisions of laws applying only to women may, in a limited number of cases, result in the employment of men. But, as Mgr. Ryan said in testifying before the Senate sub-committee, the number of women who have been handicapped by labor laws is "quite insignificant" compared with the number benefited.

It is not only in the industrial field that the proposed amendment might work havoc, through forcing arbitrary changes in State laws. Witnesses also stressed the legal complications that would result from attempt to establish arbitrary equality for women, regardless of the practical considerations that have given rise to statutory distinctions. Thus Dean Acheson pointed out that all but 14 States require husbands to support their wives. He pertinently asked whether the proposed amendment would impose a similar legal obligation upon the wife.

This blind struggle for theoretical equality of rights has a certain valiant crusading aspect that arouses admiration. But very little reflection is needed to show that it is not a practical approach to solution of the problems raised by the inferior legal status of women. Whenever and wherever legal handicaps have lost their original justification, they should be fought, not with a meaningless slogan but with specific remedies for admitted evils. The removal of unwarranted, inexpedient and outmoded restrictive laws applicable to women is needed, not a misnamed "liberty" that would deprive the weak and defenseless of essential safeguards.

Furthermore, the way to set about securing a rational emancipation in this field is to work for changes in the laws of the several States. To empower Congress to define "equal rights" for women and to force its definition upon the States, would be an impossible proceeding. It could only be "provocative," as one witness said, "of endless turmoil and trouble."

Making Safety Pay.

A new device to combat automobile accidents is now about to be tried. Fervent appeals to reason, threats of punishment, warnings of disaster have all been resorted to in vain. Science has supplied protected highways; manufacturers have developed cars that stop and go at a finger's touch; traffic lights, school patrols, pedestrian control—all have failed to reduce the national highway toll. Now bribes for good behavior will be tried.

A group of 31 leading casualty insurance companies has agreed to apply a "Safe Driver Reward Plan" in the District of Columbia and 27 States. Other regions will be included as more State insurance commissions give their approval. A private passenger car owner insured as of February 1 or later for bodily injury and property damage liability will receive a 15 per cent rebate on his premium payment if, at the end of 12 months, his driving record has been free of accidents. Concurrently, an increase in insurance rates amounting to 4.8 per cent for the country generally (less in Washington) will be inaugurated.

In effect, safe drivers will receive rewards of something more than 10 per cent on their insurance expenses. The obverse of the picture will be that careless or perhaps unlucky drivers will be penalized by increased charges. The precise amounts of the rewards and punishments have been calculated on the experience of the insurance companies that between 85 and 88 per cent of their clients suffer no serious accidents in the course of a year. The hope is, of course, to increase the proportion. The good psychology of giving virtue more than its own intangible reward encourages this prospect.

On the other hand, if the plan succeeds in making an appreciable dent in the accident statistics where all other schemes have failed, it will be a bitter reflection that even in questions of death and injury money talks the only language to which the country as a whole will respond.

Implied Understandings.

In his brief but pointed letter to Senator Pittman, Secretary Hull effectively cut the ground from under certain persistent suspicions regarding our current foreign policy.

Senator Hiram Johnson had introduced a resolution asking (a) whether the United States has or contemplates "any alliance, agreement or understanding" with Great Britain "relating to war or the possibility of war;" (b) whether there is any understanding, "express or implied," for the use of our navy "in conjunction with any other nation" and (c) whether the United States contemplates patrolling "any particular waters" as a result of any such understanding.

Without waiting for the Senate to act on this resolution, Secretary Hull took occasion to reply, in each instance in the form of a flat negative. His action has apparently eased senatorial doubts regarding the diplomacy of the Administration, and that is all to the good.

But the fact remains that the absence of any positive commitments on the part of the United States is not of and by itself either encouraging or discouraging. Which of the two it shall be depends entirely on the course of events. The United States maintains a free hand primarily so as to be able to make use of every opportunity to protect our interests. Not least of these is the preservation of world peace and of solemn treaty obligations to which we, and others, are parties.

Our freedom of action is, as Mr. Hull has made plain, in no way limited by any contractual arrangements in the form of alliances or military understandings entered into with any other nation. But it is unmistakably limited by our neutrality law.

In the present Far Eastern crisis the application of a rigid neutrality is now evidently a matter on which Japan can force our hand. A declaration of war against China by the island empire, now or at any time in the future, might compel the invocation of that law even though every sound consideration of policy recommended scrupulous adherence to the course which the President and the Department of State have pursued since the beginning of the undeclared war. Certainly little can be said for any law which at the instance of an outside nation may compel us to act in a manner dangerous to our fundamental interests.

There is, therefore, everything to be said for Senator King's demand for the immediate repeal of the present neutrality act. That unfortunate law tends to put our foreign policy in a straitjacket. It is based on the utterly false assumption that our relations with other nations can be regulated in advance, without any reference to the trend of actual developments.

Neither the United States nor any other nation lives in a world of its own devising. And legislation which proceeds on that assumption merely plays into the hands of those who may be less scrupulous in the conduct of their diplomacy.

Sparring For Wind.

If the Baltimore City Jail isn't equipped with a gymnasium a young man recently incarcerated there has been badly stung. He is a lightweight fighter from Richmond, and he told the committing magistrate a tale of woe.

Apparently his career has been limited to two professional combats. After he had taken out his license and paid his manager, the first netted him $14. In the second he got $6.50 and a broken nose. He took his nose to the hospital and was told to take it home and put it on ice. And so, his $6.50 having melted, he asked for a jail sentence. It would mean, he thought, a good doctor and good food and by and by he'd be ready for another bout.

And there you are and there he is. It may be that a punching bag for the use of vagrants is a little too much to expect. Skipping rope, highly recommended by trainers, is not to be thought of in a jail where both "skipping" and "rope" have sinister connotations. But at least the authorities ought to be able to provide the young man with dumbbells. The world is full of them.

And it may even be that there are lots of other lightweights who would be happy to sacrifice freedom for social security.

The taxpayer will never be able to get on his feet as long as he has such an expensive Government on his hands.

Defense Of The D. A. R.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent communication in your paper of February 7 entitled "Estimate of the D. A. R." shows that American manhood has sunk to even lower depths than other nations believe.

While these United States are faced with internal disorders and strife and with a world situation which calls for the greatest care in order not to explode the powder keg, some of our brave citizens have seized upon the moment to attack one of the finest organizations in existence. The entire tirade against the D. A. R. certainly is one of the lowest forms of indoor sports; and while it is bad enough for American men to show ill will and animosity toward one another, there can be no excuse for men vilifying and attacking patriotic women in our leading publications.

The writer who signed himself a "Descendant of the Cheer Leaders of '76" seems to be well acquainted with the procedure of D. A. R. conventions. Did he attend them and accept their hospitality only to excoriate and abuse them later? Does he happen to know any of the accomplishments of the D. A. R.? Does he know that the Federal flag code and regulations which demand respect for the flag were adopted due to the insistence of the D. A. R. We wonder if he would salute the colors if they passed by, or would he feel that this was showing too much courtesy to the D. A. R.?

Why shouldn't the D. A. R. have a voice in the policies of our Government? Certainly many of these noble and lovely women, even though of the weaker sex, have far more physical stamina and courage than he who has attacked them. His remarks, as well as those of others, are a direct insult to the members of the D. A. R. and it is a good thing that he has decided to conceal his identity.

We would suggest that he get the facts about the accomplishments of the D. A. R. and then see if he and his organizations, if he belongs to any, can equal even one of them.

Bridges And Other Aliens.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 7 is a lengthy article discussing Senator Copeland's opinion of Harry Bridges and Bridges' opinion of the Senator.

For four long years, Madam Perkins has been "investigating Bridges" and says she still is. She admits immigration inspectors have investigated Bridges and that the Bridges file in her department contains their recommendations that Bridges should be arrested on a deportation warrant. She told the House Appropriations sub-committee week before last that she did not want to reveal the Seattle officers' report and deportation recommendation because it would reveal the names of witnesses who had testified to Bridges' deportation affiliations and subject such witnesses to coercion and intimidation! Of course, with such an administrative attitude, law enforcement becomes purely a matter of her personal likes and pinkish dislikes.

That Miss Perkins turns loose from her "custody" alien forgers, perjurers, dope peddlers, bigamists, embezzlers, prostitutes, and even a killer, every one of whom the law expressly says shall be "taken into custody and deported" by the Secretary of Labor, is shown by deportation case files in her department and called attention to on the floor of the House by Representative Starnes and on the floor of the Senate by Senator Reynolds after personal inspection of those official files by those members of Congress. No wonder Congress last session reprimanded the Secretary of Labor and that a committee last month interrogated her and her assistants about her failure to "well and faithfully execute the law" in a way indicative of another reprimand or something even more effective and decisive.

The Little Businessmen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of February 5 a Mr. Witcher notes with sorrow the failure of the recent convention of small businessmen to return thanks for the manifold blessings bestowed upon them by the Roosevelt Administration. If he will devote a few moments to the following facts he may find some reasons for the convention's remissness:

When Mr. Roosevelt took office we had 11,000,000 unemployed and a national debt of $19,000,000,000.

After five years of Mr. Roosevelt we have 11,000,000 unemployed and a national debt—not including Government-guaranteed obligations—of nearly $38,000,000,000.

With Mr. Witcher's conclusions that there is little use for the businessmen of the nation to waste their time and money coming to Washington to see the President I am in full accord.

X. Y. Z.
Washington, Feb. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The little businessmen's congress and our regular filibustering Senate are on a par with each other. They represent chaos, lack of intelligent leadership, lack of purpose. Compare either Uncle Danny's or Uncle Sam's congresses with another meeting in Washington—the congress of the United Mine Workers. In the latter we have leadership, co-ordination, social objectives, co-operation, unity of purpose, order, courage and intelligence.

Roper's congress or the Senate are symptoms of the disease that is afflicting American competition. Uncle Danny's little fellows are the failures of capitalism. They have the same ethics, the same unscrupulousness, the same exploitative instincts, as the big successful businessmen, but they lack the capacity of organization. They are fighting each other and more interested in cutting each other's throats to succeed in business than they are in serving the public needs.

In the United States Senate and House we have the same competitive confusion. Men like Senator Borah have the old trust-busting instincts and vainly try to restore competition. That day is past.

It is true that the little businessman is being squeezed, but so is the white collar worker and the professional class with a fixed salary. They are rugged individualists, competitive, and have no social philosophy. They have no understanding of economics. All they do is yell about taxes and try to succeed at the expense of the other fellow. Contrast that with the United Mine Workers, who are working together for mutual and social benefit.

ARISTOTLE.

"The Politicians Fiddle."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just as people were beginning to believe that something constructive would be done to restore confidence, Messrs. Jackson and Ickes, aided and abetted by some of the big boys behind the screen, started a fierce bombardment against big business, thereby shattering what little hope remained.

The policy of raking good or bad business over the coals, with fear rampant, borders on political lunacy. Even a Dillinger would not be warned with a club, if prostrate in a hospital.

Conditions in this country remain chaotic with 12,000,000 idle, according to the latest census, and although Congress has been in session for several weeks, virtually nothing has been accomplished. Our lawmakers are so busy palavering about the lynching bill, in the obvious endeavor to hold the Negro vote intact, they appear oblivious to the fact that the country is facing one of its worst depressions. History is repeating itself. The politicians fiddle furiously and with a futility that is astounding, while the conflagration spreads.

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Far Eastern Real Estate Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish you would give a little space to a most significant and recent occurrence in the Far East. I refer to the recent leasing to Japan of the Isthmus of Kraa by Siam for 99 years.

For the moment America is thinking of the Far Eastern upset in terms of China alone—but as the story unfolds it looks as though China were but a stepping stone in Japan's path toward other conquests. I happen to know where the Isthmus of Kraa is, because I lived for three years just south of this country in the Malay States. But most people have never heard of it. It is the slender bit of territory which connects Burma with the so-called Siamese States and the British protected Malay States. Here the Malay Peninsula broadens out into the Federated Malay States (including the Straits Settlements), and then tapers down to a point and ends, one might say, with a period—which is the island of Singapore at the tip-end of Asia and a hair's breadth from the Equator.

The papers are giving much space to the completion of the great naval base at Singapore, which is referred to as "the Gibraltar of the East." It cost Great Britain huge sums of money, but is worth it. This fortress stands as sentinel on the threshold of the Far East, giving security not only to India and England's possessions in the East, but to Dutch and French possessions as well—and promising protection to the scattered islands of the southern seas and reaching as far as Australia.

To the east of Singapore is, of course, the China Sea, and to the west the Straits of Malacca, which are bordered on one side by Sumatra and on the other by the Malay Peninsula. All the shipping from the west that goes to China and the Far East must pass through the Straits of Malacca. The road from the east to India and back to Europe also leads through the straits. The importance of Singapore in Britain's Asiatic picture is obvious.

But what about the Isthmus of Kraa, which lies some hundreds of miles north of Singapore and the Straits of Malacca? For many years Japan has been trying to get possession of this narrow neck of land. She wishes to build a canal across it—from the Gulf of Siam to the Indian Ocean. In which event Singapore would be isolated and its value to England greatly reduced. For many years England's influence in Siam was great. But as her power in the East has declined, Japan's rising sun has been shedding its rays at long distance—even to Siam. Over England's protest Siam has at last leased this territory to Japan for the period of 99 years.

Quite a lot of things can happen during this period—and many of Japan's ambitions in the East and perhaps elsewhere can be realized. With her canal across Kraa completed she can forget Singapore and the Straits of Malacca and approach Kraa directly—should she choose to do so. It would also assure her of extraordinary liberty of action in the matter of her general navigation of Eastern waters and allow her to circumvent with ease the barriers and hurdles which England at great pains has been able to erect.

In fact, there has been no occurrence in the recent series of sinister happenings in the Far East more significant and likely to lead to such far-reaching consequences than this real estate deal which was terminated between Japan and Siam a short ten days ago. And England is not the only country which should feel concern.

Private Murders.

A CHINESE laundryman was killed here the other night, knifed and garroted in bed, and now the police are reported to be hot after the killer. The dragnet is out for him, but you could safely wager that it will haul in no more than it has in previous Chinese killings here, and that is exactly nothing. It is almost a 100-to-1 shot—provided, that is, that the murderer was a Chinese.

Chinese murders just aren't solved in Washington; or, for that matter, any place else in the United States. They aren't solved because murder with the Chinese is a very, very private affair, as will be shown.

The triple Chinese murder of 1919 is excluded here. It had nothing to do with tongs and the local Chinatown.

* * *

About 12 years ago we had a tong murder in Washington. At least, that's what the police said it was. For boldness it beat anything we young police reporters had ever encountered. The scene was a Chinese restaurant in the heart of the city, the time, along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of a bright day.

A Chinese—he would have been called a "hatchet man" in the old days—entered the restaurant by the front door. There was nothing stealthy about him. He walked past the cashier, then down the length of the dining room past the waiters, and thence into the kitchen where a doomed cook was stirring noodles.

The killer picked out his man and blew out his brains—calmly and efficiently. Having thus earned his fee, he went out as he had gone in, past the waiters, past the cashier and into the radiance of the afternoon.

Later, we learned that a cab driver had picked him up and driven him some ten blocks or so. It sounded like an important break in the case, but it wasn't.

"What did he look like?" the cab driver was asked.

"Well," the driver said, "he had slant eyes and——"

"Never mind," said the detective, "skip it."

* * *

Then came the coroner's inquest. At the time of the murder there had been two cooks in the kitchen. The live one now was called to the witness stand. Who was the killer, he was asked. What did he look like? Where did he come from? What had the murdered man done to deserve killing?

Blandly the cook replied that he was unable to answer the questions. He hadn't even seen the killer. He was busy cooking chow mein, or something. Well, hadn't he even heard the shot? He wasn't sure that he had.

The waiters were no help, either. Though it was a dull hour—between luncheon and dinner—they all had been very busy, too busy to notice a murder under their noses.

They were followed by the cashier. He was the smartest, the most sharp-eyed of the lot. His desk was right near the door of the restaurant, the killer had to pass close to him going in and going out.

The same questions, now grown monotonous, were put to the cashier. What could he tell about the killer? He was sorry, but he couldn't tell anything.

An exasperated examiner asked him:

"Do you mean to say that you sat there at the cashier's desk and let this murderer pass you twice without even looking at him? Did you hear the shot?"

"No."

"Well, what in the world were you doing?"

"Me read Chinese newspaper."

A detective assigned to the case threw up his hands at this point. He was licked and he knew it.

"What can a man do?" he sighed.

* * *

If you will forget their passion for fan-tan and overlook the occasional opium addict, the Chinese are among Washington's most law-abiding citizens. I found this out as a police reporter. I don't recall a single instance where one was arrested for robbery, forgery or assault. There never seemed to be any wounded Chinese. When the guns barked there were only dead Chinese. But these murders always were very, very private.

Exception In Chicago.

Chicago.

"THIEF," "grafter," "burglar" and "hoodlum" are among the family pet names by which the community of Chicago describes most of her public servants and certain other leaders. There is a hearty tolerance, almost a comradeship, however, and a man who is called a thief, for example, is not necessarily hated. On the contrary, he may be very popular and the people's choice at election time. Chicago seems to be a frame of mind as well as a great city, and it takes a little time to develop an understanding of local thought on the subject of politics and government.

PEGLER.

Granted that one faction is bad, it would seem to a stranger that the opposing faction, or at least certain of its leaders, must be reasonably honest, if only by comparison, but that is not conceded. If the leader is conceded to be honest in some things, then it develops that his following includes a pack of the most remorseless grafters and racketeers that ever sold a public street to a private purchaser and that the leader himself is prepared to go along with them, giving them a free hand to gamble and rob when the returns are in.

All this makes one a little self-conscious or sheepish in reporting that the one conspicuous exception noted in more than a week of guarded inquiry in Chicago is a tough little labor dictator named "Jimmy" Petrillo, the president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians. But inquiry even among those who have had to do business with Mr. Petrillo's hardshell monopoly of the music business has revealed only respect for Petrillo's single-minded devotion to the interests of his fiddlers, trumpeters and all, and for his word given in a bargain.

IN A CITY where labor has been the victim of many rackets which have preyed on members and employers alike such praise is a strange note, but it sounds loud and clear, the verdict being that "Jimmy" will play ball with an employer to let him make a dollar and thus keep him in business and musicians in jobs, but that he never throws down his men.

Mr. Petrillo's union has bought a downtown building for its headquarters, and he sits in a rather flashy office paneled in wood and some plausible fake. He is said to keep a gun in a desk drawer and to reveal it casually to visitors who need to be impressed, but if so he wasn't in character one afternoon last week. He sat back of his desk admitting that the same absolute powers that he holds, if passed on to some successor of less noble principles, might lead to grievous abuses, and boasting that he had received more salary with his $25,000 a year than any other labor leader until John L. Lewis recently accepted a raise to the same figure.

He boasted also that he had just rounded up and taken into his union, waiving the initiation fee, 2,500 members of two small unions which were on the loose and which Mr. Lewis' C. I. O. was about to grab for competitive purposes, thus closing the town to the C. I. O. as far as music is concerned. He hates John L. Lewis with frank, honest expletives learned as a newsboy on the West Side and is almost as joyous in his hatred of that policy of many craft unions in his own A. F. of L. which restricts the number of men who may obtain membership cards and thus creates a self-perpetuating job trust for those who do belong. Mr. Petrillo welcomes applicants for membership, puts them through an examination to determine their qualifications and lets them in if they pass.

• • • •

MR. PETRILLO is a politician, too, and, as a member of the Park District Board, obtained $63,000 out of public taxes last year and $80,000 this year for concerts in Grant Park, the money being paid to the musicians as wages. It would be no less reasonable, perhaps, to appropriate like amounts to the janitors and teamsters, but "Jimmy" argues that the city is paying enormous amounts to buy hay for elephants and bananas for monkeys in the parks and that it is much more humane to buy spaghetti and hamburger for his musicians.

I have heard nobody call Mr. Petrillo a thief, grafter, burglar or hoodlum. A dictator, yes, who levies fines and will not let a musician fiddle a squeak or horn a bleat for hire in his territory unless the job is cleared through his office. How can that be managed? That is a hot one! Now it is you who are being naive.

Miami Beach.—A man clinging to a rubber raft signaled frenziedly to the life guards here yesterday. Two life guards leaped into the surf and swam to his side. "What's the matter?" they demanded. "Lissen," replied the swimmer, "could you find out who won the first half of the daily double?"

And that isn't the whole story. Both life guards got indignant and bawled the swimmer out. It seems his calls interrupted them just as they were trying to dope out what horse would win the second half!

Paris Letter

Correspondent Notes Growth Of Sentiment For "National" Instead Of "Popular" Front; Chautemps Cabinet Promising.

By Jacques Kayser.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris

THE MONTH of January, 1938, marked a very real turning point in the history of France. It was not because of the cabinet crisis—that sort of thing happens here too often to be in and of itself startling—but because it saw the constitution of a minority government achieving the miracle of securing, at its first appearance before the Chamber, the sensational and record-breaking majority of 501 to 1.

The outstanding fact in the recent crisis was that the nation remained astonishingly calm throughout. It would have been supposed that the break-up of the Chautemps Popular Front government would have led to disturbing repercussions among those working class elements that could imagine themselves deprived of the fruit of the victory won at the polls in May, 1936.

In June of that year there had come into power a government directed by the Socialists with the collaboration of the Radical Socialists. A year later Leon Blum found it necessary to hand in his resignation. His regime was succeeded by a government in which the direction was in the hands of the Radical Socialists. This time the Socialists were in the role of supporters. Now a second shift has occurred. The new regime is practically an all-Radical regime.

THE QUESTION which everyone is now asking is whether the curve of events manifested on two previous occasions following electoral victories of the left is now to be repeated.

It is difficult to reply with any assurance to this question. But one thing is clear: The calm of the populace during the recent crisis arose out of the belief that a marked shift to the Right was out of the question. Why? Because the Popular Front remains a real factor in the nation, and recognizing this the new Chautemps government has pledged itself to continue the program of that bloc. From one end of the country to the other departmental committees and local groups have voted strong resolutions in favor of the maintenance of the Popular Front. In Paris, during the very height of the crisis, the National Committee of Popular Unity, which includes the directing heads of the Radical, Socialist and Communist parties and the General Confederation of Labor, continued its sessions just as though nothing had happened.

On the other hand the new fact is that many individuals belonging to Right and Center groups outside the Popular Front have begun to realize that it is not possible at this time to govern against the interests of the working class, that it is impossible to return to the status quo that obtained before the passage of the Blum social laws. If the attitude of a part of the employers (the element which one employer has labeled the "divine right element") continues to be intransigeant, another section is prepared to undertake a policy of co-operation. It this is not an impossibility in the economic and social sphere it is even less so in the political sphere.

Blum Has Suggested New "National Front."

IN FACT one idea thrown out by Leon Blum during the crisis—that of a national front with the Popular Front as nucleus—is now being ardently discussed in all circles. In general, it seems to meet more opponents on the Right than on the Left. And to the degree that this national front could be constituted purely for the defense of existing liberties and the peace of France, it is possible to presume that the representatives of the workers would be followed in supporting the plan by the great masses of the French people. Camille Chautemps clearly understands the force of this sentiment. He showed this in his speech in the Chamber when he admitted that his regime was simply a transitional one "between the antagonisms of yesterday and the co-operation of tomorrow."

Among other indications that the idea of a national union of all parties but the extremists is gaining ground the following may be cited:

The Radical Socialist Party is, historically, anti-clerical in its outlook. It has always been opposed to collaboration with clerical forces. Nevertheless, at the last meeting of the party's executive committee, on January 26, no one arose to protest when one member advanced the necessity of a rapprochement with the Catholics. And in doing so this Radical leader was merely voicing a point of view that has already been expounded by the Communists who, at this moment, are seeking to recruit a Catholic clientele. The Red motto now is the extended hand in contrast with the clenched fist!

It can be assumed, therefore, that the idea of a national union will not quickly pass from the scene. On the contrary, it will remain a force more and more to be reckoned with. For today more than ever the capital fact in France is that the whole nation has become fully and completely aware of the great external dangers which threaten the republic.

In all the newspapers, at all public meetings, voices are being raised calling attention to the threat to French security and world peace embodied in the international policies of the totalitarian states. The question is being asked on all hands whether the "test of force" is now around the corner. And in the face of this threat all internal differences among Frenchmen are tending to disappear. No one denies that in the presence of a grave crisis the union of all the forces of the nation is peremptory. But while some may not accept such a union until the very moment when danger arrives, others, and they are in the great majority, are hoping that this union will be realized without delay. It is their belief that if the fact is advertised abroad that France is strong and united the dangers of war will diminish.

I DO NOT know whether at the time this letter appears the Chautemps government will still be in office. One of its members told me the day the cabinet was formed: "We shall survive only as long as our majority is slight." By this he suggested that an excessive majority would be an equivocal one and, therefore, a source of weakness. But there is a French proverb often verified by us that it is only the provisional which endures!

In this respect the Chautemps government is organized to endure. Several of its aspects are interesting. In the first rank of his collaborators, for instance, are three men who by their assigned functions and through their personalities can be considered a notch higher than ordinary cabinet members. These are Messrs. Daladier, Bonnet and Frossard. Daladier is at one and the same time vice president of the cabinet, minister of national defense and of war. In the latter capacity he controls the ministries of navy and air. Thus the whole defense system is concentrated in one man's hands. This reform, for so long urged, has thus now been accomplished.

Georges Bonnet has been named minister of State charged with financial and economic problems. To be sure, there is already a minister of finance, a minister of commerce and a minister of public works. But M. Bonnet's task will be to organize, inspire and control them.

M. Frossard, for his part, has been appointed minister of state charged with social problems. It is he who, in liaison with the minister of labor, will have to work out new labor laws, take care of arbitration proceedings and other efforts to prevent and settle disputes between workers and employers. Formerly a Communist, later a Socialist, he has kept his contacts with the working class.

The government is, thus, for the first time, a truly organized government, hierarchical in its nature. At the summit is the premier, who has general direction of affairs. At his side are three men entrusted with a supervisory job in the most difficult and complicated fields of government—national defense, national economy and the organization of labor.

The financial crisis is more a crisis of confidence than one of finance per se. The lack of confidence is attributable in part to social disturbances which the government now proposes to regulate through the labor codes. The increase in the cost of living continues. Will this circumstance, plus the demand by the workers for higher wages, the inevitable consequence of a rising cost of living, and the attempts by certain employers to sabotage the Blum laws, checkmate the good intentions of the government?

Pull Of Events

By

America, Britain And The Far East.

ACTING WITH vigor and dispatch, Secretary Hull has scotched the rumor that in some dark and devious fashion, without the consent or even the knowledge of Congress and the people, the President and the Department of State have made an entangling alliance with Great Britain.

The other day Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, asked a series of leading questions in the form of a resolution. He asked to be told what, if any, naval and diplomatic understandings have been reached for possible joint Anglo-American action in the realm of international policy.

Mr. Hull has now replied in categorical fashion that there are no such understandings and that none is contemplated.

• • • •

WELL, then, where are we? The fact that we have no alliance, agreement or understanding with Great Britain or any other foreign power suggests that in the Far East and elsewhere we are charting our own course without reference to the policies those other powers may be pursuing.

Technically, of course, this may be true. In reality the statement requires considerable qualification.

The Far Eastern situation is one which the United States views with the gravest concern. American rights and interests, material and otherwise, are, in the opinion of those entrusted with the direction of our foreign policy, endangered by that crisis.

For that reason we have protested certain actions of the Japanese government and the Japanese army. The Administration has also decided that the time has come to take account of the growing dangers to our security by building up our navy to a higher level.

• • • •

THE BRITISH happen to find themselves in the same boat. They, too, have rights and interests which they see threatened by Japan's continued encroachments on the mainland of Asia. They, too, have found it necessary to protest against certain actions taken by the Japanese authorities, military and otherwise. And they, too, have begun to build up their navy beyond levels they once deemed adequate.

Thus for similar reasons the United States and Great Britain have perforce been acting along parallel lines. And to pursue a course of that kind no agreement or understanding or alliance is necessary.

Yet, obviously, British and American policies necessarily interact. If Great Britain takes a vigorous stand in defense of her particular interests, it becomes that much easier for the United States to do likewise, and vice versa. The opposite is, of course, equally true.

• • • •

THE UNITED STATES can, of course, withdraw altogether from the Far East, which is what some Americans have been vehemently urging.

But this policy the Government has never seriously contemplated. For the crisis in the Far East is in reality not a Far Eastern crisis alone. It is a world crisis. It is the latest link in a chain of explosive events which, beginning with the occupation of Manchuria in 1931, was followed by the Ethiopian war, the eclipse of the League of Nations, the international crisis concerning Spain, rearmament on a staggering scale, a growing threat of world war. And the outcome of the present Sino-Japanese crisis will certainly have a bearing on events at points far removed from Tokyo and Nanking.

True, the United States could withdraw from the Far East. But we cannot withdraw from the world. So while seeking to avoid entanglement in any war, this Nation is also trying to do what it can to protect its interests and those standards and values without which international relations would be reduced to complete anarchy.

• • • •

AT THE MOMENT the possibility of American involvement in war in the Far East or elsewhere appears remote. The overwhelming majority of Americans hope and pray that it will continue to be remote. And yet the fact that a hugh naval building program is now contemplated indicates that we are not sure. And what holds true for us holds true for all other peoples, including the British.

It is thus through no Machiavellian plotting or devious diplomacy, but by virtue of the pull of events, that the United States and Great Britain are, willy-nilly, being forced to conduct their policies along parallel lines.

This happens to be known in London. It also happens to be known in Washington. And each side, therefore, in projecting the present curve of events to possible conclusions necessarily, inevitably and wisely takes into account the eventuality that parallel action may, perforce, be transformed into joint action.

It may be, of course, that this eventuality will never arise. Human affairs are unpredictable. But as long as the present situation in the Far East obtains and as long as neither Great Britain nor the United States are prepared to clear out bag and baggage from that part of the world the question of whether the two nations have an understanding to act in harmony will remain purely academic.

Largest Publisher

By
The Princeton University Press.

79,447 Jobs In 1937.

IN THE YEAR 1937, 238 American publishing houses issued a total of 8,499 books. Five published over 200 books each, as follows: Macmillan, 605; Grosset & Dunlap, 337; Oxford University Press (American branch), 291; Harper, 250; Doubleday, Doran, 238. One would say offhand that Macmillan, with approximately two new books for each business day of the year, led the field easily. One, however, would be mistaken.

The Publishers' Weekly states that the largest printing and publishing establishment in the U. S. A. is the United States Government Printing office. It has 5,594 employes, a pay roll of $12,000,000 and its publications, aside from the Congressional Record, and miscellaneous forms, totaled more than 231,000,000 copies. The bindery division of the printing office handled 79,447 different jobs during the year ended last June, among the largest being an order for 250,000 copies of a Seamen's Discharge Book and 2,500,000 copies of a pamphlet entitled "Our Job With the WPA."

One thing this means is that every citizen of the country is part owner of a publishing house, which may explain why so many people feel qualified to explain to those whose whole time is devoted to publishing what is wrong with their methods. Certainly no one can complain that the publishing business our citizens own and operate does not get distribution for its publications. On the other hand the Government Printing Office has one distinct advantage over its rival publishers: all of its publications are fully subsidized.

Duchess a Chestnut Blonde

Next to Antoine of Paris, about the most famous hair stylist in Europe is Leo of Vienna. He's a gray, dapper little man who turned up in New York a while back, all full of whispers about his most important customer, the duchess of Windsor.

She isn't a dark brunette you think she is from her picture, Herr Leo says. She's really a chestnut blonde, if that means much to you. She gets a permanent every eight months, uses a little bit of mascara, a little rouge and a lot of blood red on her fingernails, with toes to match. The duke usually comes along with her to Leo's. Sometimes he smokes and sometimes he reads, but usually he just sits and waits.

And, to get back to the duchess, Leo thinks the architectural line of her coiffure is practically perfect for her, but doesn't think it would work for most women.

That last item of information ought to warm the cockles of American hairdressers, even if none of the rest does. Our coiffeurs have been in the devil of a state for the last year, worrying about the simplicity of the duchess' hairdo. They even wrote an open letter to her, in the New York Times, and told her she'd ruin their business if she kept on wearing her hair that way, and would she mind putting it up in a slightly more complicated fashion?

Tom McCarthy

Hey, The War Isn't Over!

IT WOULD have been an awful job trying to explain the proceeding to the unaffected intelligence of a kid.

"What's goin' on, Pop," would have been a question leaving even the best intentioned at a loss for an answer.

McCARTHY.

"What're all the guys gathered about the guy in the gray suit for?" the kid might ask.

"Well, you see, son, he's a war veteran."

"That's nice," the kid might say, "but what war did he fight in?"

"Well, he's an American, son, but he fought in the Spanish Civil War."

"Well," the kid might say, "I should think those reporters would interview somebody that fought in an American war?"

"They would, kid," you might answer, "but that wouldn't be news. You see we got a lot of one-legged guys out at Mount Alto who're veterans of American wars, and the like, but they aren't news. You see this Spanish war is still goin' on. This guy, whose name is Alfred Tanz, was a New York lawyer who went to Spain to fight. And that war is still going on. That war is news."

"I don't get you," the kid would probably say, "because if the war is still goin' on, how come this guy is a veteran?"

That one might leave you puzzled for a while, and when you come to telling the kid that the fellow in the gray suit fought in an Abraham Lincoln Brigade he'd probably be still more puzzled. Because, since kids can only see straight and not around corners, like adults can, he probably wouldn't get it at all.

But even if you only had to explain it to grown-ups it would be pretty difficult business.

• • • •

YOU SEE, this young fellow, Alfred Tanz, was in a downtown hotel yesterday, giving a press interview. He was getting the press attendance because he is a veteran of the Spanish war. And he's an American who lived in New York.

He said that he fought in the war because he didn't like Fascist dictatorship. But then he said that 25 per cent of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, in which he fought, was composed of Communists. And nobody's ever proved that Lincoln was anything but a Democrat. And nobody ever claimed that "Papa" Stalin, who is known by more Communists than ever heard of Marx, has any relation to Santa Claus.

And he told reporters that he fought for a year, and that his brigade really saw some tough fighting. And then he admitted that the American brigade was led, for a time, by a Czech. But he explained that very well, because the brigade hadn't been made up of Americans at the start . . . it just sort of developed.

He was being interviewed, it developed, because veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade are coming to Washington this week for a convention. There are going to be 60 of them here. And they're all veterans, even if the war in Spain is still going on.

The veterans of the Spanish Civil War, in which Czech generals are leading Americans, against Italians, Germans, Spaniards and Moors, are coming here to have a little reunion and lay a wreath at the Lincoln Memorial.

But even yesterday at the press conference most of the newsmen were a little puzzled. Because they couldn't quite get it clear as to why these birds are veterans, and coming back here to march around, and have pictures taken of themselves since the war is still going on.

"I felt I could do more good for the cause of Spanish democracy back here," Lieut. Tanz told the reporters. And he said that he'd paid his way over to Spain, but that somebody over there paid his way back . . . so he could do "more good" over here.

One reporter mentioned propaganda, but that wasn't quite a nice thing to say, and Lieut. Tanz, who is a good-looking young fellow, didn't use the word, but looked very quiet and easy to get along with and not at all inclined to argument.

• • • •

"HOW COME you were able to get back here after only a year of fighting?" one of the sourpussed newspapermen asked.

"Well you see we don't enlist for any definite length of time," Lieut. Tanz said.

"How come the boys don't walk out before the battle, then?" another sourpuss wanted to know.

"Well, of course we're under military orders," young Tanz said, and he nodded slightly, grinning a bit, because a photographer was getting poised with a camera.

But, even then, nobody was quite sure as to why 60 of the veterans are at large and planning a convention and having their pictures taken, even though they admit they still want to help loyalist Spain.

After all, veterans aren't supposed to show up until the war is over. Of course, as Lieut. Tanz said, he and his fellows would go back to loyalist Spain if they were really needed . . . all 60 of them.

In the meantime, the American fighters of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade are going to hold their convention here in Washington, read about the Spanish war in the papers, pose for photographers, tell heroic stories about the foreign war, lay a wreath on Lincoln's Memorial, and make no mention of the word propaganda.

NaziPoliceSeek News Leaks in Pastor's Trial

Niemoeller Hearing Delayed for New Counsel to Get Data.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—The Nazi Gestapo (secret police) today took advantage of a recess in the secret sedition trial of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, militant anti-Nazi Confessional pastor, to run down persons suspected of revealing the court proceedings.

The recess was ordered after the three-judge court, refusing to let Niemoeller conduct his own defense after he fired his three attorneys, appointed an "ex officio attorney" to act on his behalf.

The pastor's Confessional followers indicated that he might, "like Pontius Pilate," refuse to have anything to do with the court-selected lawyer.

The judges held that Niemoeller's release of his lawyers made it impossible to continue with the trial under regular procedure and the trial was adjourned indefinitely to permit counsel to acquaint himself with the case.

As court adjourned the judges admonished spectators against giving information to foreign newspapermen—the German press has not printed a single word about the trial.

Reports in foreign newspapers proved, the judges said, that correspondents were acquainted with what was transpiring.

The secret police, attempting to stem the leak of information, took away the courtroom permits of five of the Rev. Niemoeller's friends suspected of giving out information.

Opposition Squelched.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today appeared stronger than his discontented generals since last week's army and cabinet shake-up, but diplomatic quarters were shaken again by reports that three generals had offered their resignations in protest against Nazification of the army.

No one knows how many discontented higher officers there are in the army, but it was pointed out they could do nothing beyond hand in their resignations.

Observers said all precautions against effective opposition naturally were taken before the chancellor ever embarked on such a drastic shake-up.

Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg was removed as war minister, Gen. Werner von Fritsch was deposed as chief of staff and 13 army and air force generals were retired as Hitler assumed direct command of the armed forces.

The names of the three reported to have offered their resignations were withheld. Their action was said to have been one outcome of resentment over an editorial last Saturday, in Hitler's own Voelkischer Beobachter, which was taken as a reflection on army morals.

Nazi Party Busy.

Meanwhile Nazi Party headquarters, with Heinrich Himmler, chief of all the German police, as the prime mover, was said to be preparing an order for "Nazification" of the army.

It was reported that the order would eliminate chaplains, make the Nazi salute obligatory, confine recruiting to future young officers to men who attend Nazi Party institutions of learning, and place a political commissioner on each army staff.

Germany's munitions depots were reported guarded no longer by ordinary troops but by guard troops regiments. These correspond to what under another regime would be imperial guard regiments.

Soviet Scientists on Floe Sight Greenland's Coast

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 9 (AP).—A message picked up here today at 11 a. m. (E. S. T.), said the four Russian scientists marooned on a small ice floe had drifted within sight of the east coast of Greenland.

Position of the floe was given as 72.6 north latitude and 19.38 west longitude. The message said the weather was better and the scientists' tent, damaged by yesterday's storm, had been repaired.

Loyalists Stab AtRebelBaseon Teruel Front

Sudden Drive Is Launched on Stronghold Near Strategic Highway.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), Feb. 9.—A sudden northward drive today carried Spanish government troops through foothills southwest of Teruel toward the rebel stronghold of Albarracin.

The offensive, launched against a long-quiet rebel pocket west of the strategic feeder highway between Teruel and Zaragoza, forced a temporary cessation of fighting in the area east of the road where insurgents in four days had driven back their foe.

Both sides declared fighting in the sector north of Teruel and east of the highway connection with Zaragoza had ceased during consolidation of new lines and burial of dead.

Dispatches from Barcelona admitted the insurgents in their recent drive in the area "completely eliminated the spearhead which the government had driven toward Singra and Torre la Carcel."

Government advices, however, asserted the insurgents had failed in their ultimate purpose since they were unable to cut the Caminreal-Montalban road. This road is the government's communication line "between the governmental army in extreme eastern Spain and that in Aragon."

Oil Firm Fails to Reach Agreement With Mexico

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—T. R. Armstrong of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, returned today from Mexico with the announcement he had found it impossible to reach a settlement of the labor controversy involving the major oil concerns there. No further action was expected until the Mexican Supreme Court hands down its decision on the Federal Labor Board's awards to the workers.

New Eden Plan Is Outlined to Placate Italy

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 9.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was believed tonight to have decided upon a new course to obtain withdrawal of foreign volunteers in Spain and make friends with Italy in one diplomatic sweep.

It was reported the Foreign Secretary, undeterred by the previous setbacks in his nonintervention and Italian peace moves, had decided to shelve discussion of Spanish belligerency rights temporarily in order to make progress on other angles of the problem.

Details of his latest approach were guarded closely, but one diplomatic source said the percentage of volunteers to be withdrawn before belligerency rights were granted was not included in the discussions at present.

Obstacle to Removal.

(This question was the major obstacle to removal of the volunteers, Russia and Italy disagreeing as to how many should be withdrawn before belligerency rights were granted to the insurgents.)

The British and French, diplomatic quarters said, are aiming to convince Premier Mussolini that a government victory would not mean bolshevism in Spain. The argument is that Spanish Communists are not likely to control the Socialist administration of Dr. Juan Negrin.

Thus, these quarters stated, Mussolini will have an opportunity to withdraw the Blackshirts and yet tell the Italian people he fulfilled his aim in saving Spain from bolshevism.

Likewise, Moscow's determination not to permit Italy to establish a foothold in the Spanish peninsula would be realized if Italian volunteers were withdrawn. The Soviet Union then could withdraw its help from Barcelona without loss of prestige.

Early Settlement Hoped.

Remarks made by Eden in the House of Commons were interpreted as reflecting hopes for an early understanding with Italy. Replying to a question, the foreign secretary indicated his belief Mussolini would send no more troops to help the insurgents.

He sidestepped a reaffirmation of the government's policy against recognizing the Italian conquest of Ethiopa, indicating he was anxious to avoid anything which might jeopardize the success of his moves to get Il Duce's friendship.

A Celebrated Singing Star Comes to Town, Is Feted, Displays Some Unique Trinkets and Makes a Present

Helen Morgan to Headline Stage Bill at Capitol, Flies in and Receives the Press; Sonja Henie Stops Briefly Today; Orson Welles to Present "Caesar" Script to Folger; Tryouts for "Living Newspaper;" Notes.

SO Helen Morgan, the charming chanteuse who made piano tops famous, flew into town yesterday afternoon at 2 and then flew immediately to the clattering rooms of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel to meet the ladees and gennulmen of the press.

BELL.

One of the most ingratiating personalities identified with stage, screen, radio and night clubs, Miss Morgan held court for something like two hours, during which she displayed a nimble sense of humor, an exceedingly complicated 26-strand chain bracelet, hung with more gadgets than you could shake the legendary stick at, and a complete willingness to "break down" and reveal the tough time she had scrambling from South Danville, Ill., to the top of the heap of popular Broadway entertainers. And what a tall heap that one is!

Miss Morgan opens in the headline spot on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday as star of the revue that bears the slightly promotional title of "The World's Fairest on Parade"—probably written by Grover Whalen, who has some remote connection with a minor World's Fair business to be held in New York sometime or other.

It was no easy sailing that Helen Morgan had breaking her way into the top flight of "torch" singers. She labored at all manner of occupations during the years when the idea was formulating in the back of her mind—or maybe it was the front—that what she really wanted to be was a stage star. Migrating from Danville to Chicago, where she decorated the "West Side," she did her successive stints as manicurist, waitress, comptometer operator, model, clerk in Marshall Field's and biscuit packer. But from those kid days when a playmate threw paint in her eyes and made it necessary for her to lie alone in a dark room for months on end, when she sang to herself to pass the weary hours away more swiftly, there was the constant subconscious impulse to believe that perhaps somebody else would like to hear her sing, too. You can see for yourself how it turned out.

Miss Morgan has not been in Washington professionally since her last appearance at the National in the revival of "Show Boat." Never before has she appeared on a local stage as a vaudeville star—always as a stellar member of the cast in some major production.

Her impending engagements include an Antipodean tour, beginning in Australia and proceeding then to other far-flung outposts of the British Empire, not omitting South Africa and all the rest. Having covered the European amusement field with conspicuous thoroughness, Miss Morgan seems just a bit thrilled at the prospect of circling the globe from the opposite direction.

Having both grown up, more or less, in Chicago, Miss Morgan and I talk the same Chicagoese—which makes it very much easier at these afternoon hors d'ouevres imbroglios. A companionable and genial person, this Helen Morgan.

• • • •

Her personal adornments, by way of another paragraph, are fascinating embellishments of a jovial personality. That dingle-dangle bracelet, for example, requires almost as much time to appreciate as the Smithsonian Institution. It is hung with every tricky contraption you could think of even in your most imaginative moments—a miniature of her sitting on a piano, a replica of the "House of Morgan," an initialed little device that tells you where you can go when you spin it, good luck charms and whatnot. After it has been passed about the table for ecstatic inspection by all and sundry, Miss Morgan seemed as much surprised as I was that she ever got it back to clamp on her wrist again.

She didn't have such good fortune with her red-white-and-gold cigaret case. In a moment of weakness, I admired the thing, having one something like it in black-and-gold. So she gave it to me, against every remonstrance I could think of at the moment. They must have been very punk remonstrances.

Some of these stars are like that—not many, but some.

Sonja Henie, skating and cinema star, who was a recent visitor in Washington to receive a decoration from her king, will pay the Capital another fleeting visit today.

Miss Henie and a considerable entourage will arrive at the Washington Airport, via Eastern Air Lines, at 10:20 a. m., and pause only long enough for the plane's refueling—probably not more than 15 or 20 minutes. She will be accompanied by 19 New York sports writers, Mike Jacobs, the promoter, and several others. Her plane will be piloted by Dick Merrill, world famous flier, who made the transatlantic hop, two ways, with Harry Richman, another theatrical luminary of whom you may have heard.

Miss Henie is en route from New York to Miami, Fla., to open the "Miami Ice Carnival."

So now you know—provided, of course, that Arthur de Titta, Washington manager of Fox Movietone News, knows what he is talking about. He usually does. It is to the Twentieth Century-Fox Co. that Miss Henie is articled to appear in films, her next being "Happy Landing," with Tyrone Power.

No time is being lost in whipping Katharine Dayton's new comedy of "Save Me the Waltz," being presented by Max Gordon in the National Theater this week, into final and acceptable shape. On Tuesday night almost a full half hour had been lopped off the running time of the three acts. The last curtain was down a little before 11:15, instead of 11:40. George S. Kaufman, called in as consultant, has expressed the opinion that "Save Me the Waltz" is a good play that needs no rewriting. In the estimation of this expert playwright and director, it requires only a quickening of pace and some judicious pruning of overwritten lines. These ministrations it is receiving at a rate that is almost unprecedented in the polishing of new works for the theater.

Orson Welles, founder of the Mercury Theater, in New York, and the most discussed stage director in the country because of his modern stage version of Shakespeare's play of "Julius Caesar," will be in Washington next Monday to present the working script of the play to the Folger Memorial Library, dedicated exclusively to Shakespeareana. He will remain over to attend the first performance of "Julius Caesar" in this city at the National next Monday night.

The script which Mr. Welles will present to the Shakespeare archives contains the Mercury stage directions, the famous light plots and all production details, accompanied by photographs and diagrams.

This acting script will be published in book form as a special Mercury Theater edition late this month by the Todd Press. A foreword to the book has been written by Archibald MacLeish. It will be Mr. Welles' second published book before he has reached the age of 23. His first was "Everybody's Shakespeare."

• • • •

Will Osborne and his "Slide Orchestra," will headline the stage bill at the Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday, February 18. Featuring the slide trumpet—a trombone in miniature—Osborne offers a distinctive type of melody and syncopation which he originated. He also originated the method of singing close to a microphone which has since come to be known as "crooning." It has been alleged that it was he who imparted the secret of this effective innovation to Rudy Vallee. That was the basis of the feud that continued for a long time between these two.

I shall never forget the first time Will and his band ever came to town and were given a press luncheon at which his unique method of singing over the air was to be demonstrated. I sat within 3 feet of the microphone—on the wrong side—and have yet to hear a single word or note the eminent Mr. Osborne sang!

Tryouts for a "Living Newspaper on Spain," to be produced at the end of the month by the New Theater, will be held tonight and tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, at 810 F street northwest. Script for the production, the first of its kind to be given in Washington, has been written collectively by the Washington League of American Writers, cosponsors of the production.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 9.—Sittin' Around (universal): The Cafe in this old studio—re-vamped a dozen times, but still much the same as it was 20 years ago—conjures up an army of ghosts for every Hollywood old-timer. It was always a favorite meeting place for the stars of yesterday, and Universal had on its roster many names that will never die.

HERSHOLT.

• • • •

I never eat here without seeing the wraiths of those colorful early-day stars. Norman Kerry, swashbuckling from table to table, conscious of the admiring glances of every girl in the place. Lon Chaney and Jean Hersholt in a huddle over some makeup problem . . . J. Warren Kerrigan and Ruth Roland talking about their next pictures . . . Francis Ford and Grace Cunard planning new stunts for their next serial . . . Mary Philbin, Herbert Rawlinson, Frank Mayo, Priscilla Dean, Dorothy Dalton, King Baggott, Laura La Plante. And over in a corner, "Uncle Carl" Laemmle, pudgy, paternal and jovial, ready to listen to the troubles of anyone and everyone.

• • • •

Some of those old-timers are still living, of course, but most of them are dead as far as their screen careers are concerned. Of them all, only one, Jean Hersholt, is still prominent in pictures. What memories that old cafe must bring back to him!

Many of the most important dramatic scenes in "The Crime of Doctor Hallett" are being photographed through a microscope. The story concerns the battle of a group of American doctors to discover and destroy the germs causing a fatal tropical fever—and for a few moments after I stepped on the set today, I thought that I had made a mistake and strayed into a scientific laboratory. The photo-micrography is being supervised by technicians from a famous hospital and real tropical fever cultures are being photographed. And just there enters the typical Hollywood angle. Fever germs are scarce and delicate. The dyes which must be used to make them visable on the screen soon kill them. So stand-ins are being used—and the stand-ins are good, old-fashioned chicken pox germs.

On the "Goodbye, Broadway" set, I witnessed the discomfiture of Hollywood's most incurable practical joker, Alice Brady. Tommy Riggs, the ventriloquist who does that amusing "Tommy and Betty" skit on Rudy Vallee's radio program, is playing a feature role in the picture. Discovering that Alice knew nothing of Rigg's double-talking accomplishments, Director Ray McCarey promptly framed her. Every time she played a scene today, a voice, apparently coming from one of the score of electricians on the set, criticized her performance. Alice pretended that she didn't hear at first; then she began to burn. I have never seen the self-possessed Brady as chagrined as she was when McCarey finally broke down and revealed the gag.

The "Mad About Music" company, scheduled to work outdoors, on location, today was driven back to the sound stage by a torrential rain storm. And thereby hangs one of those ironic coincidences so typical of Hollywood. The scenes to be filmed on location were rain scenes. Six thousand dollars worth of rain-making equipment had been installed. And it could not be used because a real rainstorm made it impossible to light the outdoor sets. Director Norman Taurog showed me the call sheet for today's work—and there isn't a more jumbled line in "Alice of Wonderland." It read: "If raining, we work inside—if the sun in shining we work outside, in the rain!"

Harold Lloyd Uses Army Weather Tip

The United States Army today was called on by the Harold Lloyd Co. filming "Professor, Beware!" at Kernville, Calif., to keep them informed of the progress of the storm sweeping down the Pacific Coast.

Unable to get accurate local weather reports, the Lloyd Co. officials kept in touch with the pilot of an Army airplane from the Presidio, San Francisco, marooned near the location site, who received hourly reports from San Francisco and Burbank on the weather. With this co-operation, the Lloyd unit was able to gauge its activities, and saved valuable time in its scheduled two weeks' stay at Kernville.

Tragic Drama In New Dress Tops New Bills

Mercury Theater "Caesar" at National Monday; Other Programs.

One of the most novel dramatic items of the season will be presented for the first time in Washington next week, when Orson Welles' modern version of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" will be offered in the National Theater under the managerial guidance of Alex Yokel, beginning Monday night, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The treatment given the classic tragedy by this youthful genius of the theater is reputedly one of the freshest, most vital and most compelling interpretations of Shakespeare that this generation has seen. Among the principal players will be Tom Powers, as Brutus; Lawrence Fletcher, as Caesar; Herbert Ranson, as Cassius; Edmond O'Brien, as Antony; Morgan Farley, as Casca; Helen Craig, as Caesar's wife, Calpurnia, and Muriel Brassler, as Portia, spouse of Brutus. There will be a supporting ensemble of 60. Extraordinary lighting effects have been devised to accentuate the power and effectiveness of the play.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," Walt Disney's first feature-length production, made without the aid of living players, but executed in the most advanced form of Technicolor photography, will be the attraction for the week beginning tomorrow at the RKO-Keith Theater. One of the most amazing examples of the sheer artistry of the cinema ever released, "Snow White" presents a practically flawless entertainment, with so much to watch in its elaborated cartoon form that it should be seen several times to form a full conception of its unprecedented worth. Every element of screen entertainment is represented in this extraordinary feature—comedy, music, pathos, drama, melodrama and spectacle. It is a superb and unparalleled achievement in a new field of feature production.

Walter Huston, in association with Beulah Bondi, James Stewart, Guy Kibbee, Charles Grapewin, John Carradine and scores more of note on stage and screen, returns to the local silver sheet tomorrow as star of "Of Human Hearts," originally announced under the book title of "Benefits Forgot." The story is one of the primitive life of the circuit riders in the pre-Civil War days in Ohio, but the major appeal of the drama—and it is very great—lies in the profoundly moving play of human emotions which it reflects. The picture was directed by Clarence Brown and is released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. On the Capitol stage next week, the "World's Fairest on Parade" revue will be headlined by Helen Morgan, foremost of the plaintive singers of "torch" songs, who prefers to perch on a piano. Other acts, along with Phil Lampkin's overture and the Fox Movietone News will complete the program.

"Swing Your Lady," adapted from the stage play of the same name, will be the Warner Brothers' screen attraction at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Louise Fazenda in the role of the Ozark lady blacksmith. In the principal male roles will be seen Nat Pendleton, Frank McHugh and Humphrey Bogart. Others in the cast will include the Weaver brothers and Elviry and Penny Singleton. On the stage, "Start Stepping" will present diversified entertainment, headlined by Pinky Tomlin, composer of "The Object of My Affections," surrounded by Irene Vermillion and Company, in "Dance Moods;" Schichtl's Royal Wonderettes, Dick, Don and Dinah, and, as an added attraction, Lee Dixon, dancing star of "Varsity Show" and "The Singing Marine."

Cecil B. De Mille's twenty-fifth anniversary production, "The Buccaneer," costarring Fredric March and Franciska Gaal, with Akim Tamiroff, Margot Graham, Ian Keith, Douglas Dumbrille, Hugh Sothern, Walter Brennan and hundreds of others in support, will be continued for a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. Perhaps the finest picture De Mille ever has produced, "The Buccaneer" assuredly provides Fredric March with his greatest screen role. The short subjects also will be continued.

Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and John Barrymore are the three stars, of "True Confession," the hilarious burlesque of mystery murder trials, which will resume its downtown popularity as chief feature of the new week's bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater. They are supported by Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Overman, Porter Hall and Richard Carle. The bill also will embrace short-reel subjects and full, composite newsreel.

At Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow the major attraction will be "Mannequin," booked for a week's repeat engagement on F street. The stellar role is played by Joan Crawford, with Spencer Tracy as costar and Allan Curtis leading the support, which includes Ralph Morgan, Mary Phillips, Oscar O'Shea and Leo Gorcey. Short subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day" will be added.

Four outstanding short subjects will supplement the world newsreel coverage at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. They are "Feminine Fun," novelty sport reel; "Chile—Land of Charm," "Stranger Than Fiction" and a Mickey Mouse cartoon. "Chile" is in natural color.

The "Oriental Girls" burlesque company, opening a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater with the usual Sunday matinee, is said to be dominated by attractive, accomplished and versatile feminine performers. Foremost among these is Peggy Garcia, famous New York night club entertainer and radio star, booked as a special added attraction. Others will include Dolores Dawn, Marie Voe and Irene Cornell. The comedy end of the show will be in the competent hands of Charles "Red" Marshall and Murray Leonard. A beauty chorus will support the principals.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the major screen attraction will be a revival showing of "The Affairs of Cellini," in which the stellar role is played by Fredric March. In roles of almost equal importance will be found such luminaries of the cinema as Frank Morgan, Constance Bennett and Fay Wray. The bill will be augmented by short-reel subjects and a new release of the picturized news events.

Whitney Bourne Cast Opposite Dix

Whitney Bourne, former New York actress won is fast becoming a popular figure on the screen, has been selected by RKO-Radio Pictures to play the feminine lead opposite Richard Dix in an untitled feature which will mark Dix's return to the Gower street plant after a two-year absence.

The new picture will be produced by Cliff Reid from an original story by William Joyce Cowan. The plot recites how the affection of a dog for his master brings romance and happiness into the latter's life.

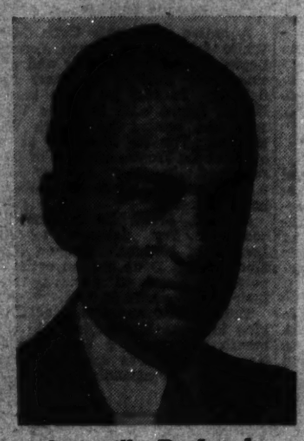
THE GRANVILLE B. JACOBS Method of

PERSONALIZED INSTRUCTION

Come Tonight, Shoreham Hotel



Granville B. Jacobs
B. S.—M. S.
One Wall St., New York City

Granville B. Jacobs has been training adults in effective speaking and in influencing people for the past twelve years. Many leading business and financial institutions have engaged his services to improve their personnel in the art of dealing with people.

He has had wide experience, not only as an instructor, but also as a practical business man. He has held key positions in direct sales, sales promotion and sales training work with The Celotex Corporation of Chicago, manufacturers of insulation and acoustical materials.

The originator and director of this course was awarded an L. C. Roberts Fellowship for advanced study at Columbia University, New York, in 1922-1923. He has served as special lecturer at the Walton School of Commerce and at Loyola University, Chicago. Companies and organizations which have benefited from his instruction and talks include such as the White Motor Truck Co.; Butler Brothers, Baltimore; The Glens Falls Insurance Co.; The Financial Advertisers' Association of America, and The Safe Deposit Association of Washington, D. C.

Personalized instruction is important to you.

You will appreciate the importance of a football coach knowing his men personally in order to develop effectively their latent powers.

This is even more important in developing your latent powers in speaking and dealing with people.

Personalized instruction means that this course is conducted by Granville B. Jacobs himself. He will be with you at every class session except two. You will know him—he will know you. He will follow your progress and give personalized instruction according to your needs.

The Advertising Club of New York—a non-profit organization of 2,500 business and professional men from various fields of endeavor—is, at the present time, sponsor of The Granville B. Jacobs system of training in New York City.

This progressive organization sponsors this training so that their members may have available a course which provides the benefits of personalized instruction.

8 Things This Training Will Do for You

1. Banish fear of an audience.
2. Advance you to greater leadership through your ability to think on your feet.
3. Train you to remember names and faces and what you want to say.
4. Speak extemporaneously before boards, business conferences, organizations, clubs, dinners.
5. Give you more poise in appearing before groups and with individuals.
6. Approach people with greater ease, more personal force.
7. Handle interviews with increased assurance.
8. Increase your personal power and influence by improving your ability to apply practical principles of psychology in dealing with people.

England Backs U.S. in Far East, Britisher Says

London to Support Us Regardless of Risk, Oxford Professor Declares.

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 9.—Great Britain has given secret assurances to the United States of her support in any "direct action" in the Far East regardless of the risks involved, Prof. Gilbert Murray, outstanding champion of closer Anglo-American relations, asserted today in a speech.

The 72-year-old Oxford professor, chairman of the League of Nations Union, told the National Liberal Club he had "reason to believe on good authority" that the United State Government has been informed Britain "is ready to support them in any action they make take facing any risk."

He spoke as alarm over war prospects was voiced in the House of Commons in a deluge of questions put to the minister of co-ordinated defense, Sir Thomas Inskip, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Minister of Navy Alfred Duff Cooper.

Called Confidential.

"The trouble is," Prof. Murray said in his speech, "that it was a confidential communication of the government that most people here do not know of, and the great American public does not know it or believe it for a moment."

He said it would be impossible for Britain alone to attempt to prevent the Japanese invasion of China and added:

"We could go in with America, and I think I may say that there is reason to believe it is perfectly certain that if we went in with America then Soviet Russia would be on our side to support us."

Prof. Murray indicated after the speech that his information regarding the British "assurances" was based on a speech which he said Brig. Gen. Edward Spears, member of Parliament, made at Carlisle two weeks ago.

He said Gen. Spears' speech was in answer to statements of Wilfred Robert, another member of Parliament, who said the Government should extend assurances of support of the United States in the Far East.

Information Not New.

"This information is not new," Murray said.

Regarding Russia's possible support, Murray said "that, too, is not news.

"Great Britain is not strong enough to prevent Japan from invading China," he explained. "We are too largely preoccupied in the Mediterranean for that. Besides, the strength of Japan's home fleet is formidable. It is such that only a long war could achieve the result aimed at, and no good could come from such a long war."

Informed of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's statement in Washington today about people who comment on foreign affairs without knowing what they are talking about, Prof. Murray said:

"I never suggested there was any 'agreement.' I merely stated my belief that assurance had been made by the British government.

"This has more than once been stated in the press. I am not at liberty to give my reasons for this belief, but I should not have expressed it had not the same statement already appeared in the public press. Furthermore, I thought there were no reporters present when I made my speech."

MacWhite, Irish Envoy, Leaves March 2 for New Post in Rome

With Ten Invitations Already Filed, U. S. Will Miss Nine-Year Treat of Hearing Minister Talk on St. Patrick's Day.

Michael MacWhite, Irish Minister to the United States, is leaving Washington.

For the first time in nine years an American audience will be denied the delight of hearing his St. Patrick's Day oration on March 17. He plans to sail March 2.

MacWhite received word from Dublin yesterday that he had been named Ireland's first Minister to Rome, or, as his credentials read, to Emmanuel III, "King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia."

Britain Embarrassed.

Ireland some time ago recognized Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and in so doing created a bit of embarrassment for Great Britain. Ireland's envoys are also envoys of George VI, the King, and it was necessary for the King to sign MacWhite's credentials.

Minister MacWhite, one of the most popular men in the diplomatic corps, came to Washington in 1929. A great admirer of this country, he has traveled through 47 States and made an intense study of American history and customs.

He revealed last night that he already has received ten invitations to make St. Patrick's Day speeches this year. One year MacWhite received 23 such invitations.

Leaving This Month.

A native of County Cork, MacWhite joined the French Foreign Legion in the World War and distinguished himself in front line fighting. In 1917 he came to the United States with M. Rene Viviana, who headed the French War Mission. The big Irishman, at request of the French ministry of war, remained in this country for a year and a half making liberty bond speeches.

In 1932, MacWhite became his country's first delegate to the League of Nations. He and Mrs. MacWhite, a Dane and an artist of note, remained in Geneva until their transfer here in 1929.

The Minister and Mrs. MacWhite plan to leave Washington late this month and spend a few days in New York before sailing. Their son Eoin, is attending school in Dublin.

Holland May Act On Rome Conquest

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Feb. 9 (AP).—The newspaper Telegraaf said today it had learned from reliable sources that The Netherlands intended to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia by naming an envoy accredited to King Vittorio Emanuele as Emperor of Ethiopia.

(On December 21 a spokesman for The Netherlands ministry of foreign affairs disclosed that the Scandinavian countries had rejected suggestions from The Netherlands designed to "end abnormal relations with Italy" over the Ethiopian question.)

Bishop of Nanking To Talk Tomorrow

Bishop Yu-Pin, head of Nanking Cathedral, will speak at the Rialto Theater at 8:30 tomorrow night under auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China.

Another speaker will be Dr. William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany. Mgr. John A. Ryan of Catholic University will act as chairman.

Born in Manchuria, Bishop Yu-Pin, now only 36 years old, is a graduate of Shanghai University and holds degrees from several European universities. He once served as the Pope's envoy to Ethiopia. His cathedral at Nanking was recently captured by the Japanese.

Paraguayan Throng Hail Returning Leader

Asuncion, Paraguay, Feb. 9 (AP).—Cheering crowds carried Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia through the streets on their shoulders today when he returned from two years in exile. Rafael Franco, deposed dictator of Paraguay, banished Gen. Estigarribia, commander in chief of Paraguayan forces in the Chaco war with Bolivia, after he gained power in a coup in 1936. Franco himself was ousted last year.

French Budget Increase Asked To Boost Arms

Daladier Seeks 20 Per Cent Rise for Planes and Naval Bases.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 9.—France's already vast armaments budget has been revised to provide for 1,000 new fighting planes this year, strengthened French African naval bases, and the start of a military highway across Algeria to Italian Libya's frontier, sources close to the fighting services said today.

Defense Minister Edouard Daladier will ask a 20 per cent increase in 1938 armaments spending, these sources said.

Such an increase would be 4,000,000,000 francs (about $133,330,000) above the 22,060,000,000 francs (about $733,333,333) already approved by Parliament.

The additional expenditure would make possible the 1,000 planes, immediate construction of two 35,000-ton battleships, naval base construction, and increased mechanization of the army.

Completion of a new naval base at Mers-El-Kebir, on the Bay of Oran, Algeria, would complete a triangle of French bases, with Bizerta and Toulon in the Mediterranean. Bizerta, in Tunisia, is only 150 miles from Sicily and less than an hour by air from the Italian airplane bases.

Construction of a naval base at Agadir on the Atlantic coast of Morocco also would be started, it was said, for use in case French shipping was forced to take the cape route to the Orient if an enemy controlled the Mediterranean in war time.

Army Fortresses To Visit Argentina

A group of three to six Army "flying fortresses" will make a good will flight to Buenos Aires to participate in the inauguration of Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz as President of the Argentine Republic February 20, the State Department announced yesterday.

The planes, officials said, will follow the West Coast route, with brief stop at Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chile.

program, would "increase the speed with which humanity is drifting into the general destruction of another World War."

Meanwhile, in Tokyo, authoritative sources disclosed, according to an Associated Press dispatch, that the Japanese Government would refuse to reveal its naval building plans to the United States, Great Britain and France.

Assurances Sought.

From Paris came a dispatch asserting France's already vast new armaments budget had been raised to provide 1,000 new fighting planes this year, strengthened French-African naval bases, and the beginning of a military highway across Algeria to Italian Libya's frontier.

Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, member of the mandatory neutrality bloc, said he would insist on a "restatement" of American foreign policy, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, declared that "further exploration" of the Administration's attitude was "urgently needed" before Congress approved the naval program.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, asserted the Administration had adopted secretly a new foreign policy which "means nothing more than preparation for aggressive warfare abroad."

But Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, majority leader, said Secretary Hull's letter of Tuesday removed all obstacles to passage of the Navy bill, adding:

"It would not be fair to ask Secretary Hull to explain or state further what the United States position would be in event of a world crisis because developments are too rapid to permit a reply to such a proposition."

Beard, before the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared the President's "quarantine" policy would imply passing judgment by this country on all European and Asiatic crises. He urged the committee to summon Hull to explain the Chicago speech of the President, stating he did not believe the committee would care to subpena the President himself. He said:

"I submit that the United States now possesses a Navy not intended for defense of our own shores, but for aggressive action in all parts of the world.

"I submit that if we intended only to defend the United States we should have a very different type of military and naval equipment. We should spend far more than we are doing on coast defense, including fixed guns, mines and submarines and airplanes. We should probably spend less on large battleships and large cruisers that are intended to operate in all parts of the world."

Bruce Bliven, an editor of the New Republic, weekly topical magazine, drew committee fire by his statement that "President Roosevelt is engaged in a great game of bluff with the Fascist powers. In one hand he holds a gun, in the other a reciprocal trade treaty. He hopes to frighten them into taking the trade treaty instead of the gun. I submit that this is the most dangerous game any nation has ever played."

When asked by committeemen what experts had given him "the lowdown" on the naval program, Bliven said he had talked to none.

1. Choice of 60 H.P. or 85 H.P. V-8 Engine.
2. 122-Inch Wheelbase.
3. Modern Styling with Handsome, Rugged Appearance
4. Full-Floating Rear Axle.
5. Straddle-Mounted Pinion.
6. Extra Large Brakes (277 sq. in. total lining) and Ribbed Cast Iron Brake Drums.

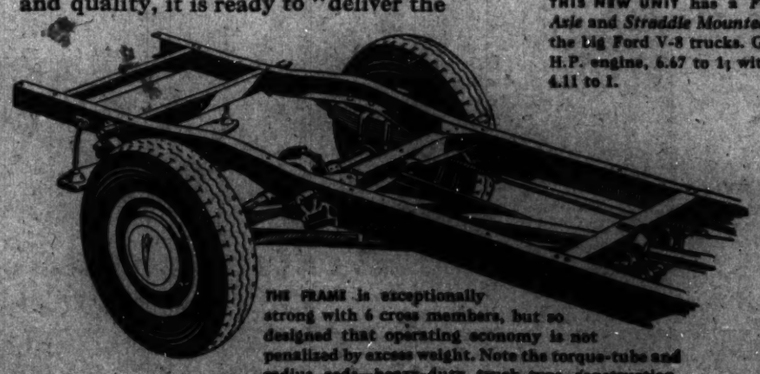
This brand new 122-inch wheelbase unit fills the gap between Ford Commercials and the big Ford Trucks

Here's Ford's answer to the demand of truck owners for a low-cost, economical-to-operate unit in the medium-load range. Smart looking, it's a definite asset to any business. Built to Ford standards of precision and quality, it is ready to "deliver the goods" at lowest operating and upkeep costs.

This rugged new unit has many features found in the heavy-duty Ford V-8 trucks . . . but it also gives you the choice of the two Ford V-8 engines.

The new Ford V-8 One-Tonners are now on display at your Ford Dealer's. Be sure to see them!

THIS NEW UNIT has a Full-Floating Rear Axle and Straddle Mounted Pinion, just like the Big Ford V-8 trucks. Gear ratio: with 60 H.P. engine, 6.67 to 1; with 85 H.P. engine, 4.11 to 1.



THE FRAME is exceptionally strong with 6 cross members, but so designed that operating economy is not penalized by excess weight. Note the torque-tube and radius rods—heavy-duty truck-type construction.

Married 22 Years, Husband Starts Philandering; His Wife Asks What to Do; They Have Four Children.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 22 years the man I married was a steady, devoted husband and father. Then, about a year ago, he changed completely, became secretive, left home early in the morning and stayed away late in the evenings. I learned he was taking a young woman to and from work, driving 10 miles out of his way to do so. He urged me to take the children and go to our summer home unusually early in the season, spent very little time with us while there, and didn't bring us back until the opening day of school.

* * * *

After our return for the winter, he continued the affair and also entered on another with a woman who lives in the same block, is 20 years younger than us, and quite attractive. He insists on my having her here at home, and until recently they spent whole evenings dancing, smoking, drinking, etc. He usually takes her home around midnight and is gone from half to three-quarters of an hour. Her own husband neglects her and is never home. They have even left me on Sundays, to go horseback riding, at an hour when I cannot leave the children. They ride with a group.

* * * *

When I protested and said how heartbroken I was, my husband said that henceforth he is going his way; that I have monopolized him long enough; but that so long as I continue to be affectionate and considerate and give him the leeway he wants, I can be sure of security. This was hard to swallow, but I had no choice, with four children ranging in ages from 8 to 16 years. The eldest senses something wrong, I think, but I have never said a word in front of them.

* * * *

All that my husband once stood for, all that he once admired, he has now rejected. Traits of mine he once praised now irritate him. Once he condemned women for drinking, smoking, making up their faces in public and telling questionable stories. Yet this neighbor does all those things and he is fascinated. Whereas, formerly he didn't want to go out of nights, now he wants to be on the go every night, and we are never home before 12:30.

* * * *

I am tired all the time for I have no chance to rest during the day. I have taken on several outside activities to make a life of my own, but my heart isn't in them and they don't help me to forget entirely. We are both university graduates. Superficially, my husband is a substantial citizen. It seems almost too much to bear that he should have changed so. I have no interest in seeking a substitute romance.

* * * *

Should I stick it out for the children's sake? Do you think he will come back to me? Is this conduct to be expected at his age—he is 47? Is it advisable for me to try to be friends with the women he admires? Should I let them know I am aware of what is going on? There are two that I know of—the neighbor, and the woman down town, whom I have met, and could see again. Sincerely.

WRETCHED WIFE.

What to Believe.

DEAR WRETCHED WIFE: Since your husband shows a disposition to uphold his overt responsibilities as husband and father, pledging economic security to his family in return for personal freedom of action, it seems to me you have a fighting chance to recapture much, if not all, of the ground you have lost. You still have a roof over your head, your husband at hand, and great potentialities of time and opportunity for remolding the situation nearer to your heart's desire.

* * * *

For too long you have taken your husband's protective interest and whole-souled devotion entirely for granted. Ever since the birth of the first child, no doubt, you have been largely engrossed in, perhaps almost altogether possessed by, the demands of motherhood. Blithely and blindly you assumed that your husband found the same thoroughgoing satisfactions in parenthood per se that you found, forgetting that he was continuously exposed to challenging counter interests outside the home. Yet I believe it may truthfully be said that in the majority of cases, a father is dynamically interested in family life only in proportion as he is dynamically interested in his wife. Only insofar as he finds romantic satisfaction in bestowing happiness upon the partner of his joys and sorrows, does he carry the burden of monogamy and continuous bill-paying cheerfully and contentedly.

* * * *

In your case, your husband ceased gradually to be in love with you as a person, however much he may have appreciated and continued to respect your virtuous and praiseworthy attributes of character. And in proportion as he ceased to be in love with you, he found the burden of family life increasingly boresome and stultifying. Therefore, he became an easy prey to tempting diversions and distractions of a social, emotional and romantic kind to be found outside the home—of such sort as would relieve and make tolerable his unrelenting daily routine. Having eventually and experimentally tasted such diversions, he found the experience so refreshing and exhilarating, at such tonic variance to his accustomed portion, that he determined, in very self-preservation, to avail himself of such psychic pick-me-ups, though it meant shaking the very foundations of his domestic arrangement.

* * * *

It has been said that the story of every man's life is the story of his quest for happiness, and if you will review your husband's conduct of the past year in the light of that philosophical observation, you may know better how to proceed in dealing with the situation. Instead of obstructing him in his quest for happiness, instead of rebuking and reproaching him for the turn it has taken, why not make it be true that the pot of gold at the rainbow's end actually awaits him in his own backyard? If it does, eventually he will find it there.

* * * *

To begin with, develop a truly sympathetic understanding of his point of view, and of those factors which impelled him off the reservation. Blame your own short-sightedness and the whole sociological and economic set-up at least as much as you blame him and his temptresses. Figure out what he is looking for, what he needs in order to be adequately happy and content, and try to supply it of yourself. A large part of what ails him, aside from having fallen out of love with you for the time being, is a wistful desire to recapture his lost boyhood, and, in recapturing it, to play in ways which for many reasons were not possible for him in youth—possibly because of parental prohibition, lack of means, rigid notions concerning what was and was not "done," early marriage and subsequent family responsibilities, and so on. Perhaps slowly, over a period of years, he has overcome these repressive handicaps, realizes at long last it is now or never for having the fling he missed in early manhood, supposes you never can understand, never will forgive, and couldn't possibly enjoy an adventure in frivolity with him, and so has decided to go it alone, cost him what it may.

* * * *

If you can lay hold on such understanding, and if you can find in your own heart a responsive echo of yearning for that which he seeks, perhaps you can get together and make it a mutual quest. I suggest, as a second step, that you set about dropping at least ten years from your appearance. If you are slightly lumpy or dumpy of figure, streamline yourself. You can do it through classes at the Y. W. C. A. or by the aid of exercise classes in any good beauty salon, or by following the daily instruction of our own Ida Jean Kain, whose practical counsel on figure-molding is undoubtedly the best of its kind I have ever read.

* * * *

Acquire a lithe figure, a graceful swinging walk, a high-headed, youthful carriage; have your hair coiffed by the smartest artist in town; get yourself some chic and becoming clothes; build up your health so that it will be reflected in a brighter eye, a glossier complexion, a happier disposition—and this may mean seeing a doctor, swallowing capsuled vitamins according to his prescription, spending a systematic amount of time out of doors, etc.; get enough rest, even though it means neglecting your family to a certain extent, sending your husband off about his own business two or three nights a week, or being quite arbitrary about exacting a two-hour afternoon rest period for yourself; look around for some feminine companionship with ladies slightly giddier than yourself, and invade some of the local cocktail bars on occasional afternoons in their company, and see for yourself that most eminently respectable women are to be found there smoking cigarettes and downing cocktails with the greatest nonchalance; and, generally, bring yourself up to date as a modern, open-minded, socially adventurous woman.

* * * *

No doubt you have unduly laid aside your youth; unduly martyred yourself to your family; have been unduly prim in your notions, manners and appearance, so that today you are a clean-washed, rigid-waisted, respectably apparelled, unprovocative middle-aged woman who makes no appeal whatever to the undying romantic imaginativeness of man. The thing to do is to become provocative, surprising, different—in appearance, in mental outlook, in your range of interests. Stock your dressing table with cosmetics and perfumes and creams; use them artistically and daringly, without apology or self consciousness. Smile aside any surprised comments with cool detachment, as though you were engrossed in some secret end of your own. Get a new repertory of conversational topics, by reading unfamiliar magazines and books. Get a new slant on men-and-women relationships; you might even be rather shockingly liberal in your appraisal of current modes and manners. In other words and in short, be as adventurous in your way as your husband is in his way; and, in the meantime, let the situation between yourselves ride along without comment.

* * * *

Don't make an obvious and hence pathetic bid for your husband's love. Just busy yourself with becoming a more thoroughly modern woman, fall in with his social plans when it is convenient or comfortable for you to do so, and when it isn't, say so. Don't hang on to his coat tails, socially, in tired and jealous anxiety. Let him see you getting along very nicely in the situation as it is, but growing prettier, more independent and more modern all the time. If you do this adroitly enough I haven't a doubt but that he will eventually discover your old charm all over again, doubly enforced by all he knows about your fundamental worth. I wouldn't advise your either cultivating or disdaining his current women intimates. Dismiss them from your mind as having no real bearing on the situation between your two selves. They are symptomatic, rather than causative. M. H.

Swing Skirt, Fitted Bodice

AN ATTRACTIVE black frock with the new full swing skirt and smart square neckline which lends itself well to various accent changes such as clips, necklaces of metal or pearls and the like. It is made of Acele acetate rayon crepe with a pebbled surface. The swirled turban, designed by Louise Sanders, is of glistening jet black cellophane—an interesting contrast for the dull black material. The top handle bag by David Lewis flaunts a top bar of plastic in shell effect. Shoes are black patent leather and gloves are black doeskin.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 11.

NOT LONG AGO I tapped a line or two on the general good sense and niceness of Mrs. James J. Braddock, the pretty homebody who is married to James J. Braddock, of Jersey—former heavyweight nose-mangling champion of the world, and a paragon of all the pugilistic and domestic virtues.

ALICE HUGHES.

This frail typewriter had barely ceased shuddering when Jim, the Cinderella man, announced his retirement from active fisticuffs, saying that most of all he did it for the Little Woman. I at once mounted my scooter and scuttled off to see Mae Braddock. Her story, and Jim's, is the most romantic of the hour—as your men-folks may know, but you may not. I'll shed a small gleam.

Four years ago, an unsuccessful box-fighter, Jim was on relief. He couldn't get a job on the Jersey docks where he began. By a series of small miracles he snatched the title, made a lot of money, and left a recent winning fight with Mr. Farr, of Wales, with the crowd's cheers ringing out! And what of Mae? For a fighter's wife is like a soldier's—sitting home worrying while the man is out fighting, whether with fists or bayonets. Well, happy now!

Jim is sane, sane, healthy, handsome and devoted. There's over $100,000 in the family kick already. They have an eight-room house in Cliffside, a two-car garage, and two fine kids, Jay 7, and Howard, 6. The future is rosy.

* * *

"I wanted Jimmo to quit, and so did his manager," said Mae, "and he did—he stopped while they were cheering. The strain and lonliness of a fighter's wife are terrible. I only saw him fight once, but I ran out after two rounds. I thought he was hurt. No ring money he could still make would compensate me!"

And big Jim, a good man as well as a fighting man with a great heart, said boodby to the gloves, after 15 years. And don't you think there isn't a modest, happy home over the river in Cliffside! Dad's home from the wars to stay!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I don't know what's with many of our more stylish ladies this winter! They just can't keep off boats going far away, and if Palm Beach isn't entirely desolate, its social scene is as full of holes as a slab of Swiss cheese. Mrs. Margaret Emerson and "Mimi" Baker sliding round the world, and the other day the big Normandie shoved off for a long South American cruise with a chinchilla-and-emerald cargo. Topping the list was Mrs. Dodge Sloane, owner of the Brookmeede Stable and "Vavalcade"—and right in the midst of the Florida and California race seasons! Doggone . . . what have girls like that to get away from? Now if it were you or I—we could think up some reasons!

* * * *

Maybe you saw the modest item from Terre Haute about the William Wilsons, but if you didn't, you must. Judge Gerdink recently gave Bill his divorce papers, after the plaintiff testified that his wife snitched his false teeth and hid them until he gave her $2! Is it isn't extreme cruelty to confine a man to oatmeal for a mere deuce, kindly tell me what is, please . . . A Daniel come to judgment! . . .

* * * *

The Shubert brothers are trying to stage a girly show, "By Candlelight," and have shot high by mentioning Marlene Dietrich, Tallou Bankhead and Libby Holman for the lead. All these big sunfish are said to have declined the bait, and the fat part may end up in the hands of some Susie Blotz. But the boys can't be ruled off for trying, on any track.

* * * *

Who's stopping at the Sevilla Hotel but Blanche Sweet, that lovely blonde who started in pictures nearly 30 years ago. Now a happily married lady, and out of the arc-light. Looks fine, too . . . And Janet Gaynor is at the Waldorf tourist-cabin. I hear from a trusted Hollywood spy that young Tyrone Power is really dipsy-do about the tiny red-head. What price Henie?

* * * *

Miss Tobe, our top style authority, is always my prize source for tips on what's up. The other day she volunteered a bit of handbag dope, remarking that the oversize handbag is the pet of the zfield this season. She says that the vogue began with last call's over-arm bag, and looks for bigger and better carry-alls next spring. In fact, says Tobe, if your handbag won't hold a peck of $100 bills, you won't be in the picture. Me, I'm trying to scratch up one century!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

"Where Are You From?"

EAST is still East and West is West when feminine representatives of these sections meet in the business world. And most employers, it seems, prefer the good old traditional Middle Western girl who got her early training by getting up at dawn to milk the cows.

This conclusion is based on a survey—by this column—taken secretly, of course—among executives who have had experience in the "handling of women." The investigation was occasioned by a recent statement made to the Associated Press by Sara Pennoyer, New York fashion promotion manager and author of "Polly Tucker: Merchant," in which she estimated that from 60 to 70 per cent of the top promotional and style jobs on Fifth avenue were held by girls from the Middle and Far West. Said Miss Pennoyer:

"Middle Westerners haven't any delusions of grandeur. They know the world isn't waiting for them."

However, Miss Pennoyer (who is from Michigan) gave the "products of the Eastern colleges" one break. "They're cocky at first," she said. "That gives them a good send-off. But when they discover they aren't to be literary editors or head buyers or top something else overnight they're stopped."

* * * *

Southern Belle Problem.

THE East was given a chance to defend itself through a sleek, dynamic New York visitor, head of a publicity and advertising agency.

"Personally, I'm from Michigan, too," she said. "But I don't mind Eastern girls so much. Their swank helps in certain phases of my business. But I have one unvarying rule in my office. I never hire Southern girls. I wouldn't have one around on a bet. They're always sick and they haven't any stamina. They just can't take it."

After that there was nothing else to do but to see a former Southern gentleman who now directs the office activities of about a dozen young women.

"To say that Southern girls don't make good office workers is an insult to the fair name of Dixie's womanhood," he hotly declared. "Where else than in the South will you find so sweet, so lovely, so pure——"

"Just a minute, Mr. B." protested the investigator. "How many Southern girls do you employ in your office?"

"We-l-l, just at present, the majority—in fact almost all—of my girls are from the West. But you see . . . well we had a retrenchment about a month ago, and . . ."

* * * *

Frail Femininity.

A GOVERNMENT official was sought as a neutral in the controversy.

"It does seem that the girls in my department are sick a lot," he admitted. "And—most of them are from the South. But I don't know that that proves anything. If they were from the West they'd probably be just as delicate. In fact few women Government workers seem to have strong constitutions—as long as they have any 'sick leave' left."

A woman executive said she preferred Middle Western girls because they were less "man-conscious" than Southern girls. "I like a professional manner around the office," she said. "However, I prefer the Southern girl to the Far Westerner. The latter has the 'sunshine complex.' She always has to be out hiking, or swimming or sunning, or week-ending. She considers playing and vacationing her inalienable rights and if the office conflicts it's just too bad for the office."

* * * *

The Defense Speaks.

ODDLY enough the only defense of the Easterners and the Southerners came from an executive who was reared in the Middle West.

"They're all alike," he said, "some good, some bad. What on earth is worse than a Middle Westerner who has 'gone Eastern?' Of course, there are professional Southern belles and Eastern sophisticates in every office, and plenty of loafers and weaklings from all sections of the country including the Middle West, if you ask me.

"Most persons who voice generalities about Easterners and Westerners and Southerners are uttering ideas they got from fiction or the movies. Sectional background doesn't build backbone."

A Western woman who has made a name for herself in the East in the sales field said she was not sure that the Middle Western girls had the right idea.

"When I came East and heard the Middle Western girls praised so highly for their business achievements," she said, "I used to swell up with pride. Now I've discovered that it isn't so much their great ability as because they haven't any better sense than to work themselves to death. If I had it to do over I'd be a hoity-toity Easterner and lend distinction to an office or a Southern belle and add charm—and probably get paid just as much for doing so."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Kicking Off Shoes Is Sign Warning You to Watch Feet.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THAT UNIVERSALLY feminine gesture of kicking off the shoes at every opportunity is a very small concession to tired, aching and generally abused feet. When you feel as if your feet are "killing" you, they are merely letting you know that they have stood enough mistreatment.

Our feet are pretty faithful. They are on the go most of the day and there is no limit to their walking hours. They are crammed into any kind of shoes that happen to catch the eye, without regard to arch support or toe room, and are expected to perform efficiently under poorest possible working conditions.

But feet can be pushed just so far, and when the fireworks begin there is really trouble afoot. An ache in a little toe can be felt clear up in the back of the neck, and protesting, overburdened arches can develop pains in the back. No wonder foot trouble is reflected in a particularly grim facial expression!

Foot Trouble Preventable.

With a little consideration, this sort of thing can be prevented. A small amount of daily care can keep the feet comfortable and their contentment contributes vastly to general health, posture and appearance—to say nothing of the disposition. The feet are the foundation of posture and when they are jammed into ill-fitting high-heeled shoes the entire body is thrown out of alignment. When the body is out of balance the adjustment of the internal organs is disturbed.

In the first place, your shoes should fit exactly. They should be neither too large nor too small and should give adequate, scientific support. Your great toe should be a half inch from the end of the shoe, and the heels should be the right height for walking. Shoe manufacturers have come to our rescue with so many beautiful patterns in all types of heels that the ugliness of the commonsense heel, as we used to know it, no longer exists. Save your spikes for dress occasions. There is no glamour in a limp.

First of all, get shoes that fit.

Be just as careful in the selection of your stockings. Get them large enough so that your toes are not curled up.

Baths in hot water, with stimulating dashes of cold water awaken the circulation and help to keep the feet in a healthy condition. And while you are bathing them, rub the heels gently with pumice to remove the hard skin that forms as a protection against friction of your pumps sliding up and down as you walk. This hard skin cuts into your delicate stockings and makes holes in the heels.

Exercise Best Treatment.

The kindest thing you can do for your feet is to exercise them. None of the body's muscles get enough exercise, but the feet get the least of all. Rotate the feet from the ankles, walk pigeon-toed with the weight on the outer borders of the bare feet, stand with the feet parallel and rock from heels to toes, and walk about the room on the toes for a few minutes every day. Foot exercises take very little time because you can do them while you go about your other chores and they are worth money in comfort.

Unorthodox Shoe Styles For Tea and Dance Wear

Paris (U.P.).—As unorthodox shoes as have ever been seen are being introduced for sports, tea and dance wear. Ranging from thick-soled, mannishly cut oxfords to shimmering glass-like fairy slippers, the new modes are made on special lasts which are remarkably comfortable.

There is nothing conventional. All lines and materials are unusual. For sports there are leopard skin or soft black broadtail fur booties that reach ankle-high. The Duchess of Windsor has bought three pairs of these in various colors and skins.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Standardization of Drugs.

"At no period has treatment by means of drugs been on so sure a foundation or so amply justified." So wrote a distinguished British investigator in the field of pharmacology, which is the science of the action of drugs.

The modern pharmacologist is a far more thorough and scientific worker than his predecessors, the early medical botanists, such as Dr. Lyman Spalding in this country, and Withering in England. Those early workers very largely gathered herbs which were growing wild in a state of nature. They studied the effects of the drug only in the simplest way by observing its action in a human patient. No attempt was made to control the observation. And especially no attempt was made to obtain the drug in the purest form or to standardize it.

In 1817, Dr. Spalding read a paper before the New York Medical Society explaining the necessity for having some standards and definitions which physicians and druggists could follow in prescribing drugs. The result was the first United States Pharmacopeia, issued in 1820, and every tenth year since then in a revised form. All the useful drugs are described here, the dosage limits set down, and the method of standardization described.

This question of standardization is the most important of the duties of the modern pharmacologist. The reason for this is plain. Take, for example, digitalis, which, as prescribed, is the leaves of the plant called the foxglove. This is valuable because when it is active it has an especial action on the heart in heart failure. But obviously the leaf you take must be potent. One leaf from one plant may have a great deal of active ingredients, and another leaf from another plant may have almost none of them.

Until 1900 the physician who was prescribing for your friend might have obtained a sample that was practically inert, and before he discovered the mistake your friend would have been dead. Now, however, the Pharmacopeia demands that all samples of the leaf be tested on animals to see that it performs the actions desired. The frog is the animal usually used. So that each manufacturer of digitalis is required to swear that the sample he puts on the market conforms to these requirements.

And this is enforceable by law, because the Pharmacopeia has the Federal Government behind it.

There are, of course, new products coming out all the time, too rapidly for the issues of the Pharmacopeia to keep up with them. Their value, however, is tested out by the Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry, and their reports are available to any physician. It is unfortunate that their judgments are not enforceable by law; had they been such a tragedy as that of the recent elixir of sulfanilimide deaths would not have taken place.

Improve Your Background

A psychosis is a new type of radio, he thinks. The armament race is the latest coast-to-coast air flight—and isn't Zola, the hero of the movie, the fellow who discovered germs?

He's never thought of educating himself—though the world is bursting with easy ways to acquire cultural background. All anyone needs is a plan.

A simple outline book on psychology clearly explains such terms as psychosis—an illness of the mind. A regular reading of a newspaper keeps you well informed about such vital developments as the mad race now going on among nations to pile up armaments for war.

By reading through a list of the world's most important novels—which any library will supply—you know the great writers so well you could make no mistake about one of the greatest, Zola.

Once you line up your program—what a delight your adventure in self-education can be. How thrilling to tie it into the threads of your daily life.

Inevitably, as you enlarge your interests, you enlarge your circle of friends.

How can you use your education to make more money? With your new mental alertness and understanding study the job of the man ahead of you. Be ready to fill it.

Two Cabinet Hostesses Give 'At Homes' in Day

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson Entertain at Second and Last Receptions of That Type This Season.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

That ancient and honorable institution, the official Cabinet "at home," saw double duty yesterday as Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of Navy, entertained at their second and last receptions of that type this season.

Mrs. Cunnings said "how do you do" to scores of guests in the spacious drawing room of her home on Tilden street. During the same hours—from 4 to 6 o'clock—Mrs. Swanson was greeting a long line of visitors at her home on R street. But at neither house was the line of cars as long, or the crowd as big as the first "at homes" of those two hostesses this winter. The balmy spring-like weather was conducive to playing truant from partying, and since virtually even social notable in town turned out for the previous receptions, a number evidently decided this business of formal calling could be dispensed with yesterday.

HOPE R. MILLER.

In keeping with the delightful informality that has characterized Mrs. Cummings' "at homes" ever since she has been a Cabinet hostess, yesterday's reception moved along in a manner that made guests want to linger longer than usual to talk with the hostess, those who assisted her and the other guests.

For the occasion Mrs. Cummings had chosen a particularly becoming frock of Medici green crepe, fashioned with long sleeves of georgette and worn with cream-colored pumps. A string of pearls completed the ensemble. In a brief chat with the hostess before I went on to the dining room, I learned that she and the Attorney General, who had planned to leave February 17 for a vacation in Florida, have postponed their trip and will go next month instead.

The long table in the dining room at which guests were served was simply and tastefully decorated with a big blue bowl of calla lilies in the center, a blue goose figurine and three tall cream candles in silver holders on either side. Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Irish Minister, was presiding over the coffee urn while I was there, and Mrs. James Roosevelt was serving at the opposite end of the table.

Mrs. MacWhite Assists Last Time

Incidentally, yesterday's party was one of the last at which Mrs. MacWhite will assist, as she and her husband will leave Washington the end of this month. He is to be transferred to Rome, as the first Minister of the Irish Free State to Italy—just as was predicted in this column almost two months ago. Mrs. MacWhite said she did not know who would succeed her husband. She also said she would be sorry to leave Washington, but that she knew Rome well and thought living there would "be interesting." Certainly her many friends here will be sorry to see her go.

Wearing a snappy red pill-box hat perched jauntily over her blonde hair and contrasting nicely with her trim black frock, Mrs. James Roosevelt found pouring tea and talking with her many acquaintances at the same time quite a task, but she managed both well, despite the throng that crowded around her constantly. Others who alternated at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. George Dern, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Frank Wideman and Miss Grace Tully. Assisting generally were Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Golden Bell and Mrs. Paul Maloney.

Meanwhile, over at Mrs. Swanson's another party was moving into high gear. As a her other "at home" this season, sailors from the Sequoia and naval aides, trimly turned out in gold-braided uniforms added a dash of color to the event. The hostess herself supplied an additional colorful note . . . wearing a handsome gown of raspberry crepe cut on simple lines.

Capt. J. R. Beardall, the Secretary's naval aide, announced the guests. Receiving with Mrs. Swanson was Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Others assisting in the drawing room were Mrs. George Barnett in a stunning floor-length black frock; Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, also gowned in black; Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, Mrs. Albert Niblack and Mrs. F. J. Fletcher.

Number of Notables At Swanson Tea Table

Helping to look after guests in the dining room was an equally distinguished group of assistants, including Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Mrs. John R. Beardall, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner and Mrs. Bernard Jones. Alternating at the tea table early in the afternoon were Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador; Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. William D. Leahy and Miss Janet Richards. Later, others at the tea table were Mme. Hirosi Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mme. Van Haersma de With, wife of The Netherlands Minister, and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone.

Mrs. Swanson's tea tables are always a decorator's dreams. Yesterday the pretty central flower piece was of pink and yellow roses, white carnations, freesia and fern—very spring-like. Four towering white tapers in silver holders also added to the general attractive effect.

Among the scores of guests I saw at one "at home" or the other—or at both—were Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon; Mrs. Edward Burke, wife of Senator Burke, of Nebraska; Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Frau Thomsen in a becoming brown ensemble, Mrs. Constantin Oumansky, Mrs. Frederic William Wile, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Russell Bennett, arriving at Mrs. Cummings' party with her daughter, Miss Florence Harris.

At both Mrs. Swanson's and Mrs. Cummings' everyone seemed to be asking, "Who's that pretty girl with the silver fox cape and the towering turban?" She was Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, wife of Representative Casey, of Massachusetts, who is having her first season in Washington as an "official hostess" and seems to be enjoying it.

British Envoy Dinner Guest

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, was guest of honor at the dinner given last evening by the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne. Lady Lindsay, who was indisposed, could not be present.

Spring flowers were used in decorating the long table in the dining room of the legation. The hostess wore a simple frock of alice blue lace.

Guests include the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Constantin Fotitch, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings; the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle; the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Jorgen Gaibe; the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Green Hackworth, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. W. S. Mann, Mrs. Grainger Blair, Arthur Krock, Clarence Hewes and Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Boomer and Frederick Bay, of New York City.

Ramsey Blacks Dinner Guests

The new Third Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Ramsey S. Black, who recently came to Washington from Harrisburg, Pa., were guests of honor at a dinner given in the Blue Room at the Shoreham last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. North. Mr. North is Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General.

Sharing honors with Mr. and Mrs. Black was Mrs. Clinton B. Eilenberger, of Stroudsburg, Pa., widow of Mr. Eilenberger, who was Third Assistant Postmaster General. Mrs. Eilenberger is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. North.

The guests included the Second Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Harllee Branch; the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith W. Purdum; Mr and Mrs. Vincent C. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Owen A. Keen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Graddick, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buckley, Miss Betty Trumbo, Miss Jean O'Connell, Ambrose O'Connell, William C. Lyons, James W. Cole and P. J. Schardt.

At Homes' Slated By Mme. Fotitch And Mrs. McNary

Mme. Constantin Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslavian Minister, has issued cards for an "at home" tomorrow; Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, has also issued cards for an "at home" today and next Thursday; the Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn will give a dinner tonight; Mr. and Mrs. William M. Cushman will give a dinner on Saturday; Anthony J. Dimond, delegate from Alaska, will give a cocktail party today; Mrs. Richardson Saunders, wife of the special assistant to the Secretary of Labor, will be "at home" on Saturday; and Representative and Mrs. Fritz G. Lanham will give a cocktail party Saturday at their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Senate Daughters To Dance Tonight

The Daughters of the Senate will hold their annual dinner dance in the blue room at the Shoreham tonight with about 40 persons present. The young ladies and their escorts will meet in the apartment of Miss Elizabeth Adams, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams, at Wardman Park Hotel, for cocktails before dinner. The dinner itself will take place at 8:30 o'clock.

Miss Hamilton Becomes Bride

Miss Virginia Hamilton became the bride of the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur, rector of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. The ceremony took place in the private chapel of the Bishop of Washington's residence on Mount St. Alban. The dean of the Washington Cathedral, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, officiated at the wedding, which was followed by a nuptial communion and was attended by members of the bride's immediate family. The former Miss Hamilton is the daughter of W. P. Hamilton, of North Carolina, and the late Maude Allen Wilcox, also of North Carolina. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Willard Ashe, of Washington.

Given in marriage by her grandmother, the bride wore a three-piece tweed suit with accessories to match, and carried a bouquet of white orchids. She was attended by her aunt, Mrs. Thomas N. Newland. The best man was Sherman J. Kruigburg.

The couple left by plane for Miami Beach. They will be gone about two weeks and on their return trip will stop off in Atlanta, Ga., to be guests of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton. The Rev. and Mrs. Paul D. Wilbur will make their future residence at 3426 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Wilbur is a graduate of Gunston Hall. The bridegroom attended Brown University and Trinity College and later was graduated from the General Theological Seminary, New York City.

Count Potocki To Fete Biddles

The United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., who have been widely feted since their recent arrival in Washington, will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given today by the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

According to present plans the Biddles will leave Washington Saturday for Philadelphia, where they will visit relatives and also the Governor of Pennsylvania and Mrs. Stepoen Earle. They will return to the Capital Tuesday to spend the remainder of their time before sailing for Europe on the Queen Mary February 23.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

IF YOU AREN'T ASKED out for dinner at least three times a week these days you might have reason to believe there was something wrong with your personality. So numerous are these affairs that one brave soul who decided to give one on the spur of the moment recently found he had to call 30 people before he could get eight to come.

DUDLEY HARMON

A peek at the calendar reveals the following events in the near future: The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will give a dinner Saturday evening in honor of the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes . . . On Tuesday evening, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera will give a similar party, and Thursday evening February 24, the sociable Stanley Reeds will entertain at a dinner . . . Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, whose home Evermay is one of the most beautiful in Georgetown, have planned a luncheon there Sunday, February 20.

THE CONVERSATION turned to dinners the other evening, and a number of people began to swap anecdotes of amusing or embarrassing situations in which hosts or guests at such parties had been involved.

A prominent hostess was giving a large formal dinner once when the butler came in and said "Senator and Mrs. X have just come in and gone upstairs to take off their wraps." Since they had not been invited, the mistress of the house was in a momentary quandary, but rose to the situation and told the butler to set another place. When the uninvited ones came downstairs, they realized they had made a mistake in nights. However, everybody was reseated according to rank and the dinner went merrily on.

ANOTHER HOSTESS once telephoned a prominent couple and told their maid that she had not received their answer to her invitation for dinner, but unless she heard from them, would expect them to come. The maid unfortunately forgot the name of the woman who had called, and her mistress could not remember having been asked to dine out on that particular evening. So, when the day rolled around, she and her husband dressed themselves to the teeth and sat in their drawing room expecting that their mysterious hostess would ring up when they did not appear and thus disclose her identity. They were all set to rush out when they discovered who she was, but alas, the telephone never rang, and to this day the woman in question doesn't know whose dinner party it was she spoiled.

ORDINARILY NOT the most exciting event in the world, an afternoon lecture must nevertheless come as a refreshing change from the usual 5 to 7 cocktail routine. One such will be held Tuesday afternoon at Dumbarton Oaks, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, when Prof. Freiherr von Heine-Geldern, of the University of Vienna, will speak on "Pre-Buddhistic Art in China and Indo-China." Sounds erudite, doesn't it?

AN ADDITION to Washington State Department ranks is Robert Buell, who recently was assigned here after some 13 years of foreign posts. Among them were Calcutta, Ceylon, his last, and London. Mr. Buell is staying at the University Club until he finds a house. He spent several years here in the 1920's . . . Helen Trenholme has an important part in "Bachelor Born," the London hit which is now scoring a success in New York. In private life the pretty actress is Mrs. Denys Smith, wife of the Washington correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph. She has appeared in several movies and had a good part in the New York run of "Victoria Regina," starring Helen Hayes.

Prochniks Give Dinner Party

Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador of Peru, and the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter were the ranking guests in the company of 22.

Mrs. William B. Barry Hostess at Luncheon

Mrs. William B. Barry, wife of Representative Barry, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. The guests included Mrs. Harry Coffee, Mrs. Jack Dempsey, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, Mrs. Frank Towey, Mrs. Harold Flannery, Mrs. Aaron Ford and Mrs. Paul Greaver.

Verses Written For Thrift Ball

Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, "court jester" for the Thrift Shop Valentine Ball, at Sulgrave Club, Saturday evening, has written amusing verses to be used as directions for locating various booths and concessions at the party. We quote the supper invitation:

"Don't forget that supper
Doesn't cost a cent.
Take your girl and feed her
To her heart's content.

Presiding over the supper room will be Mrs. Thomas C. Claytor, Mrs. Henry Miller and other child welfare board members, who are making provision for 500. All food has been donated by the five member boards of the Thrift Shop and a supper at 12 or later will be served.

Miss Fanchon Aldrich Birthday Fete Guest

Miss Fanchon Aldrich, debutante this season, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Highfield will leave today for Ithaca, N. Y. They will participate in festivities in connection with Junior Week at Cornell University as guests of Stanley Van Brunt of Washington.

Last evening, Miss Aldrich was guest of honor at a birthday party at the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel. Covers were laid for 12.

Washington Girl Will Sail Today to Honolulu for Ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Syme Haynes announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Sergeant Haynes, to Lieut. Stuart Gilbert Fries, U. S. A., son of Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, of this city.

Miss Haynes will sail this morning on the United States transport St. Mihiel via the Panama Canal and San Francisco for Schofield Barracks, Honolulu, where Lieut. Fries is stationed and where the wedding will take place on April 2.

On Miss Haynes' arrival in Honolulu she will be the guest of Gen. and Mrs. Andrew Moses until her marriage, Gen. Moses will give her away.

Lieut. William D. McKinley, son of Gen. and Mrs. James F. McKinley, who is now stationed at Fort Shafter, in Hawaii, will be the best man. Miss Haynes has not yet completed her list of attendants.

Miss Haynes, who attended Western High School here, afterward was graduated from William and Mary College, in Williamsburg, Va. She is a direct descendant of John Haynes, first Governor of Massachusetts and later first Governor of Connecticut, and also is a descendant of Gov. Dudley Diggs, Patrick Henry and Gov. Henry A. Wise, of Virginia.

Lieut. Fries also is a graduate of Western High School and afterward went to West Point, where he was a member of the class of 1935.

Miss Andrews In Va. Wedding

Of wide interest in Washington was the marriage of Miss Josephine Andrews to Lieut. Hiette S. Williams, jr., U. S. A., yesterday at Langley Field, Va. Lieut. Silas Decker, chaplain, officiated.

The former Miss Andrews, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. F. M. Andrews, is well known in Washington, where she attended school at Gunston Hall. The bridegroom is son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Williams, of Concord, N. C.

The bride, given in marriage by her father at a ceremony replete with military color and pageantry, wore a gown of cream satin, fashioned with long, close-fitting sleeves and a train. Her lace cap was made in tiara style and she carried a heart-shaped bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Jean Andrews, her sister, was maid of honor and wore a frock of pink satin with puff sleeves. Her flowers were blue delphinium. Other attendants were Miss Anne Clarkson, of Washington; Miss Mildred Dressler, of Fort Monroe, Va.; Mrs. D. E. Williams, of Langley Field, and Mrs. A. P. Flagg, of Norfolk Naval Station. All were gowned in powder blue net, trimmed with braided bolero jackets. Their headdresses were of matching net with flowers and they carried spring bouquets of yellow, pink and blue blossoms.

Lieut. J. B. Montgomery was best man, while ushers were Lieut. D. D. Hale, Lieut. Glen Thomson, Lieut. Bierne Lay, Lieut. William Robertson, Lieut. Torgils Wold, Lieut. D. MacDonald and Lieut. D. E. Williams.

Reception Follows At Langley Club

The attractive Langley Field Officers Club rooms were filled at the reception which followed the wedding, with "Army blue" uniforms and gold braid. The mother of the bride, wearing a bright print dress and black accessories assisted in receiving, as did the mother of the bridegroom, who wore acquamarine lace with wine trimming. Mrs. Melvin Asp, in a dress of butter-cup yellow georgette, also received.

Lieut. and Mrs. H. S. Williams left on a wedding trip to Key West and will stop off for a visit in Concord, N. C., on their way back to Langley Field, where they will reside.

Mrs. Williams is a granddaughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. H. T. Allen.

Nancy Harrison Nuptials Attract Out-of-Towners

Girl Scouts' International Tea Is Held

Members of Troop 30 Are Hostesses to Diplomatic Set.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The gracious hospitality and friendship characteristic of Girl Scouts was present yesterday at the annual international tea given in the national Girl Scout Little House, with members of Troop 30 as hostesses.

Girls of the troop, who are working this year under their captain, Mrs. A. F. Hinrichs, for international badges, were dressed in scout and guide unifroms of countries of the World Association of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, as well as the familiar green uniform of American Scouts. Among them was the national president, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of Washington.

Diplomats from countries which have Girl Scout or Girl Guide organizations were invited as guests of honor to the tea. They were each in charge of the girl of Troop 30 representing their country. When Lady Mar'ar came, accompanied by Miss Willis Magee, Joan Miller, in uniform of the Canadian Girl Scouts, took them through the Little House, showing them everything of interest. Mary Miles, representing Poland, was hostess to Mme. Cramiec, wife of the Polish Military Attache. Alice Elmore, for the Girl Scouts in the Union of South Africa, welcomed Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister, and her daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Mann, of London.

Anne Yung Kwai, granddaughter of Dr. Yung Kwai, of the Chinese Embassy, wore the uniform of the Chinese Girl Scouts and greeted the Chinese Ambassador and his daughter, Miss Yoeh Wang. Miss Wang, as is her custom, wore a native Chinese robe, black with a thread of gold through it.

Marcia Klein, who represented Portugal, was hostess not only to Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister, but also to the Minister's daughter, Senorita Maria Joao di Bianchi, who wore a striking costume, hand woven and hand embroidered in reds and yellows, with it she carried a beautiful wool shawl with a deep fringe and design frequently seen in silk Spanish shawls. Her heart-shaped earrings and the large pendant on her gold necklace were of delicate gold filigree.

Senorita Maria is not a Girl Scout, as she lived with her grandmother, Viscountess Valle Paraiso, on Madeira Island, and attended a convent there until she came with her father and Mme. di Bianchi to America just before the Christmas holidays. Since, she has been attending Sacred Heart Convent. She speaks fluent English and her interest in the Girl Scout hostesses and their uniforms was reciprocated by theirs in her bright costume.

When the Norwegian Minister, Munte de Morgenstierne, arrived, he was welcomed not only by Doris Saine, in the costume of the Norwegian Girl Scouts, but also by Kari-Galbe, daughter of the Counselor of the legation, who is a member of Troop 30 and wore the costume of her native country. Another guest from the Diplomatic Corps was Countess Van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador.

The receiving line included Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Henry H. Flather, chairman of the national Little House Committee, who also gave Camp May Flather to the Girl Scouts; Mrs. B. F. Cheatham, a national board member; Mrs. William Floyd Crosby, D. C. Girl Scout commissioner, and Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty.

Also assisting were Florence Farwell, who represented the District Scouts at the international camp which met at Camp Andre, New York, last summer, and Mary Elizabeth Stone, who was chosen in 1935 to represent the United States at the Girl Scout chalet in Adelboden, Switzerland. Both are Eaglet Scouts.

On Miss Farwell's uniform were pledge pins from scouts of other countries, exchanged in token of international friendship. She has these from girls of Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, France, Sweden and the Irish Free State.

Mrs. Garitt S. Miller, jr., long active in the Girl Scouts, was also assisting, as was Mrs. E. Bruce Horsfal and Miss Dorothy Davidson, of the District Girl Scouts.

Underwood & Underwood.

Moose Women Meet Tomorrow

Columbia Chapter Plans Celebration of Eighteenth Anniversary.

Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, will celebrate its eighteenth birthday anniversary tomorrow at its meeting in Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest. Miss Margaret Mitchell is chairman of the arrangements committee. All charter members and past regents of the chapter will participate.

A birthday cake with 18 candles will be a feature of the buffet supper at the conclusion of the meeting.

The executive committee will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of Senior Regent Mrs. Frances Baldwin, 801 A street northeast.

Mrs. Marie Clark, membership chairman, called a meeting of her committee this week, when plans for a class of new members to be initiated at the annual visitation of the grand regent and grand recorder of Women of the Moose, February 15, were completed. The alumni committee, in charge of arrangements for the grand regent's visit, met with the membership committee at the request of Mrs. Grace Clark, alumni chairman.

A dancing class for children of the Moose will be organized Saturday afternoon at Moose Hall, with Miss Irma Baker as instructor.

Arts Club to Hear Ellen Woodward

Miss Mary B. Adams and Lewis Lofton Moneyway will be dinner hosts at the Arts Club tonight, preceding a talk on "The Four-Arts Program of the WPA" by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward.

Mrs. Woodward is assistant administrator in charge of the division of women's and professional projects of the Works Progress Administration and the only woman on the staff. She has been connected with the Federal relief program since its inception in 1933. In addition to the WPA projects of art, theater, music and writing, she has under her jurisdiction such projects as nursing and public health, library extension, historical records, archeological and other important surveys.

Mrs. Woodward is a former member of the Mississippi State Legislature and was prominent in public welfare work in her State. She is the daughter of the late William V. Sullivan, United States Senator from Mississippi, and widow of Judge Albert K. Woodward.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

IF AND WHEN the equal rights amendment is added to the Constitution, members of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of the country will be ready to make suggestions for rewriting the laws of their own States to remedy existing inequalities and make them conform.

The proposed amendment was already on the study program of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club when rules were suspended at the Atlantic City convention last summer and a vote taken to indorse it. A plan was immediately worked out for including in this year's federation program a study of the legal status of women in each State by the clubs there. Heretofore, the B. and P. W. members have given their attention chiefly to the wages and hours legislation, but now will include in their study inheritance laws, those on marriage and divorce and the custody of children and others concerning women's status.

The National Federation's stand on the equal rights amendment was presented on Capitol Hill yesterday by Mrs. Celia M. Howard, of Chicago, recording secretary of the National Federation, who represented the executive board, and Mrs. Mary T. Denman, of Latrobe, Pa., national legislative chairman.

MRS. HOWARD, who is a member of the Elgin Club and past president of the Illinois State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, for 28 years, has served as law clerk for the judge of the United States District Court in Chicago. She is a graduate of the John Marshall Law School there.

Mrs. Denman, since her marriage in 1924, has been practicing law with her husband in Latrobe in the firm of Denman & Denman, and served as a member of the house in the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1931 and 1932 from Westmoreland County. She has also been State legislative chairman for the B. and P. W. Federation in Pennsylvania and State vice president.

Despite her activities in professional, political and club life, she has other interests—two others, both of which are first—her young sons, Davie, jr., 7, and Richard, 2.

In addition to attending the hearings, for which they came to Washington, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Denman have been conferring with Earlene White, national president of the federation and also postmaster of the Senate postoffice.

RESOLUTIONS which will be presented before the triennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs (not the B. and P. W. this time) in Kansas City in May have been drafted by the resolutions committee, in session for the past two days at General Federation headquarters, 1734 N street.

Mrs. T. H. Grimley, of Ridgewood, N. J., is chairman of the committee. Others here for its meeting are Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, of Chicago, candidate for the office of first vice president, who represents the executive committee; Mrs. Albert E. Chittenden, of Auburn, Me., and Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, of New York. Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, general federation president, is, of course, meeting with them.

MISS VELLA A. WINNER, editor of the G. F. W. C. magazine and director of publicity for the General Federation, is in Pasadena, Calif., where she was called last week by the illness of her mother.

DR. ERNEST GRUENING, director of territories and insular possessions, who returned recently from an inspection trip, will address members and guests of the Woman's National Democratic Club today at the 11 o'clock meeting of the education committee. Dr. Gruening replaces Mrs. O. W. McNeese, whose series of five lectures on "Nineteenth Century Presidents and First Ladies," scheduled to start today, was postponed until Lent.

THE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A., of which Mrs. Prentiss D. Sale, jr., is president, is having some outstanding programs this season, all of which are open to the public.

One of them will be Monday evening at the school library when Dr. Howard Dawson, rural director of the National Education Association, will speak on "The Problems of Youth Between the Ages of 18 and 25."

'Soul Conservation' Stressed At A.A.U.W. Poetry Dinner

Joseph Auslander, of Library of Congress, Honor Guest With Annette Temin, Gordon Jowers and Other Verse Prize Winners.

"Soul conservation" is as important as "soil conservation," and the poets hold the answer to that, Joseph Auslander, consultant in English poetry at the Library of Congress, last night told guests at the poetry dinner of the American Association of University Women. Discoveries in science are out-moded by new discoveries, he added, but the truth expressed in Homer and Virgil remains today as true as when written centuries ago.

Mr. Auslander was guest of honor at the dinner, at which Miss Annette Temin was announced as winner of first prize in the annual poetry contest, sponsored by the Martha McLear poetry group of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W.; Samuel Katz, winner of the second prize, and Miss Solange Strong, third. These young poets, with those who received honorable mention—Francis Barnard, of George Washington University; Mary Kate Bland, of Trinity College; Gordon Jowers and Betsy Winter, both of American University—were guests of honor also.

Miss Temin, a senior at Wilson Teachers College, who won first prize last year and thrid prizes in 1935 and 1936, was awarded first prize again in this contest on her poem, "Wheatfields." Its closing lines are:

"And here not land, but water, everywhere
"The sweeping of the sea, and far and wide
"The maiden leaning with her yellow hair
"Across the swell upon her yellow side
"And lifting darkly in unblemished motion
"Like summer swallows from the barren tree,
"At last arisen from the cosmic ocean
"The tawny child, submerged primevally."

Miss Temin also received honorable mention on her poems "Penelope" and "Addressed to My Father."

Mr. Katz, who is a junior at George Washington University, not only took second prize on his poem, "The Parade," but also honorable mention on "Second Coming." Miss Strong, a junior at American University, won third prize on a poem entitled "Mulier."

The poems were read by Miss Alberta Walker, teacher of English at Wilson Teachers' College. Among those which were best received by the company at last night's dinner was "To Puppet Wind," on which Gordon Jowers received honorable mention. It expressed the freedom of spirit which defies material bounds. Mocking at the wind which is "dominated by heat and cold," the poet says:

"I don't mean that my body goes,
"I said I go.
"Why should I be encumbered by taking my body along
"When it adds nothing to my enjoyment?
"Blow then, harder; I like to feel your borrowed force "Against my face and body;
"But you can never hold me back
"From going where my fancy wishes."

Mrs. Horace Torbert, a member of the board of the local branch of the A. A. U. W. and one of the judges in the contest, presented the prizes—$10 for first, $5 for second and third places. Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, chairman of the poetry committee and teacher of English at George Washington University, presided at the dinner.

Among those at the speakers' table were Miss Ruth Henderson, chairman of the Martha McLear poetry group; Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the club; Dean Mary Louise Brown of American University, Miss Walker, Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell, Prof. Courtland D. Baker, of George Washington; Miss Anna Halburg, of Wilson Teachers College, and Miss Elizabeth Peet, of Gallaudet.

After the reading of the poems, Mr. Auslander commended the work of the students and said it showed humility, always a hopeful sign for further attainment.

The contest is the sixth which has been sponsored by the poetry group and each year draws an increasing number of entries.

Columbia Board to Meet.

It will hear annual reports of its president, Mrs. Lawrence Groner; secretary, Mrs. Roger Robb, and treasurer, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming. Reports also will be read by the superintendent Col. Ashburn, supervisor of nurses, Mrs. Green, and head of the clinic, Miss Woods.

Final Steel Link Goes Into Chain Bridge; Fleet Plays at War

The Last Village Smithy

Robert Lee Harmon, the last of the Falls Church, Va., blacksmiths, was repairing a truck when the photographer called. But—"We had a horse in here only yesterday," he said proudly. The popularity of horseback riding helps his business, he added, but trucks and wagons provide most work.

Two Fleets Maneuver at Sea

Painted to blend with sea and sky, five of the latest United States destroyers jockey for position in the Pacific, preparing to meet an imaginary enemy in the current war games. Jockeying for position, too, is another fleet, but a peacetime one, in sail under a spanking breeze off Bermuda in an international one-design-class race.

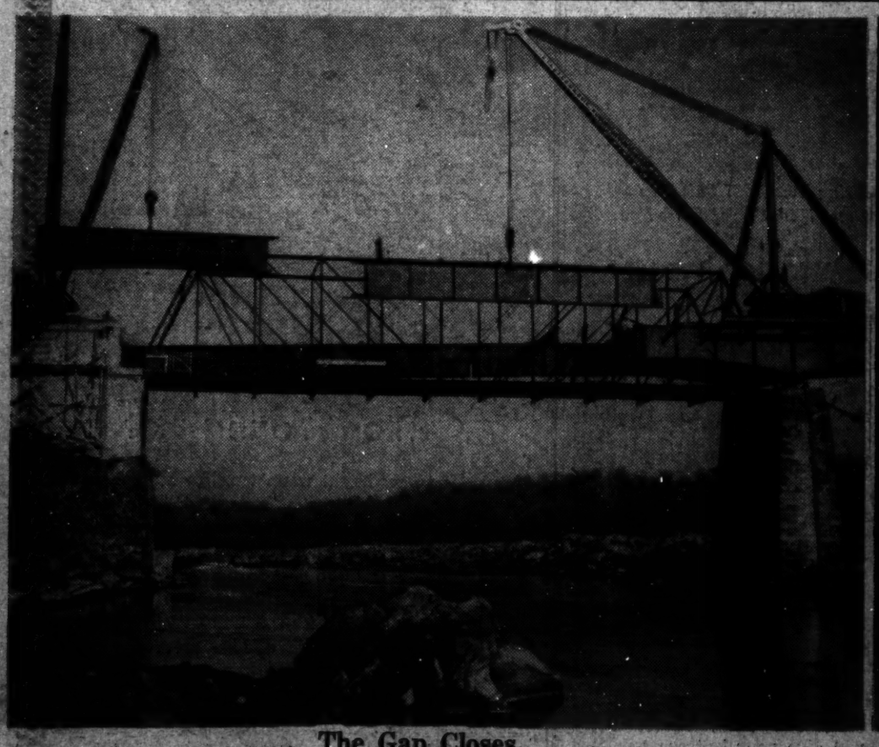
Steel Again Binds Virginia to Capital at Chain Bridge



The Gap Closes

1 Some time in early summer traffic again will flow over the Potomac from the Capital to Arlington County via Chain Bridge—not the famous bridge of history but a safer and sturdier structure. The final huge steel pieces which linked the shores were set in place yesterday. A single span of the old bridge remains in the above picture which combines the new and old as the last big steel moves to its resting place. The old span carried water mains and now will come down.

"Set 'er Down, Boys"

2 This unusual silhouette made against the sun shows two steel workers riding one of the final pieces, directing it to the pier. Stone piers of a bridge built in 1874 will serve the new structure. Several bridges have spanned the site, the first before 1811. History fails to reveal how many.

A Vital Traffic Artery

3 This general view, taken from the Virginia shore, shows the entire bridge. The bridge serves thousands of Virginia residents and now will be safer because of added width and sweeping approaches. The old bridge was shaken badly by the flood of 1936, which reached the first span on the Virginia side. The cost of the new structure is $338,029. The thunder of marching feet was heard on Chain Bridge in the Civil War.

The Washington Post

By . . . HARLAN MILLER

To his intimate friends Senator Borah has been muttering irritatedly about the social lobby in Washington.

"I don't dare go out to these foreign dinner parties," he says, "even if I wanted to.

"At their tables you either have to agree with them or insult them."

* * * *

Senator Borah thinks that the safest thing is for Senators to stay away from foreign social functions and the insidious clutch of the "white tie and decollette" lobby.

He thinks that (for example) his colleagues, Senators Vandenberg and McNary, go to the foreign embassies too often.

* * * *

After one Senator had made a certain statement concerning American foreign policy, Mr. Borah waxed explosive.

"From what he said," observed the Idaho statesman, "I could tell you at which embassy he dined the night before."

"—these heavy foreign menus"

Of course, it is barely possible that Senator Borah exaggerates the suggestibility of American statesman.

After a dinner at an embassy it is quite possible for a Senator to be committed to nothing more subversive than bicarbonate of soda.

* * * *

Army people in Washington—and especially Army wives—are simmering with indignation about the War Department order compelling officers in the Capital above the rank of major to buy about $500 worth of blue dress uniforms apiece.

* * * *

From a lofty Army official to whom protests were submitted, the word trickled out that the dress-up order came from higher up.

SECRETARY WOODRING.

The implication was plain that "higher-up" meant Secretary of War Woodring or the White House. No one knows which.

* * * *

Officers are in a bit of a stew, worrying whether their new uniforms will be ready for the Army and Navy reception at the White House, a week from today, and in low moments, after balancing their check books, not giving a hoot. They wouldn't object, of course, having normal human vanity, if they could afford the glad rags.

* * * *

"—pretty nifty uniforms, eh?"

Some of the Army wives, gently reared Southern belles, murmur the serio-comic fear that they may have to do their own washing to help pay for the uniforms.

"And the worst of it is that our husbands can only wear these uniforms once or twice a year!" they moan.

Around $250,000 of Army pay is headed toward the tailors.

* * * *

Don't confuse these blue uniforms with policemen's or firemen's uniforms . . . They're elaborate 'jewels of the tailor's art,' replete with gold-braid and doo-dads, and require many accessories in the way of hats, belts, gloves, overcoats and capes.

One is a bit fancier than the other, and the wifely estimate of $500 isn't a great exaggeration. It depends on your tailor.

* * * *

When you remember that an Army officer in Washington must also maintain a complete civilian wardobe of flannels (they wear uniforms to work at the bureaux only 4 days a year) tweeds, dinner jackets and tails, besides summer and winter khaki, o. d., serge, whipcord and whites, out of his salary, the blue uniforms become an expensive added splendor.

"And after a year or two in Washington," complains the colonel's lady, "we are ordered out to Fort Cactus—or a war breaks out—and away go the lovely uniforms into mothballs, there to rest until my hero's expanding waist measurement demands a roomier blue uniform!"

Federal Bar Notes Membership Peak

The Federal Bar Association now has more members than ever before, it was announced after a meeting of the membership committee yesterday.

Branch chapters were established recently in various sections of the Nation, Heber Rice, chairman, pointed out. When the annual conference of the association is held at the Commerce Department February 25 and 26, representatives from the chapters in Philadelphia, New Orleans, Los Angeles and possibly Seattle are expected.

Rhode Island Group Extols W. S. Tolbert

Citizens Body Praises Treasurer Retiring After 11 Years.

High tribute was paid William S. Tolbert, treasurer of the Rhode Island Citizen's Association for 11 years, by members last night on the occasion of his retirement.

The following tribute was indorsed:

"Civilization, nations and organizations become strong or slip into decadence depending upon the quality of the leadership produced by succeeding generations. No small part of the success of the Rhode Island Avenu Citizen's Association during its 30 years of existence has been due to the wise council and loyalty and leadership of one, William S. Tolbert . . . The Woodridge community and the District will continue to enjoy for years the fruits of his labors for civic betterment."

Members also indorsed a plan submitted by the flag committe of the Daughters of the American Revolution to etsablish a committee to select an official flag for the District.

The D. A. R. plan proposes a committee, consisting of the Secretary of War, Secretary of Navy and the President of the Board of District Commissoiners, to confer with the Fine Arts Commission, and adopt the official emblem.

Following the regular meeting, the association viewed slides showing recreational activities undertaken by the Community Center of the District. W. T. Kilgore, of the advisory council of the department, presented the slides and explained the unit's activities.

Expert Advises Care in Choice Of Profession

Urging American youth to plan carefully before entering professional life, Dr. Edwin A. Lee, New York vocational guidance leader, yesterday predicted a future when a larger number of men and women will be occupied with "work they enjoy."

Here for a day visiting Washington schools, Dr. Lee, who directs the National Occupational Conference, said no youth should leave school today "just looking for a job."

"The job of the schools nowadays is, first, to lead boys and girls to a vocation, then train them in it," said the New Yorker. "Every student should be shown the gamut of work and then helped to a place in the job his abilities best suit him for."

Dr. Lee described as "unfortunate" conditions in which youngsters in need of work "have to take the first job they can find." He believed every young man or woman starting out on a career should have two or three jobs to choose from.

The problem of adequate vocational education is one for local government to solve, the educator insisted.

"Washington has particular outlets for vocational training that other cities do not have," he pointed out. "You have a large field for clerical work here while other cities this size have only industrial jobs to offer."

At the same time, Dr. Lee was enthusiastic about the George-Dean act which furnishes Federal funds for promotion of vocational training in public schools. He said the act permitted local boards of education to take advantage of Government aid without losing their own control of schools.

Dr. Lee included Washington on a tour of 13 cities in which his conference is making vocational studies. Last spring, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of the Washington schools, accompanied Dr. Lee and 12 other school superintendents on a preliminary trip to all of those cities.

Boy Found in N.Y. 15 Minutes After He Is Missed Here

Within 15 minutes after 13-year-old William O'Brien was discovered missing yesterday from his home at 205 G street northwest, Washington police and the Travelers' Aid Society located the boy in New York City.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Florence Martin, told the public relations squad that her son had disappeared, taking two suitcases with him. Police sent a description to the Traviers' Aid Society at Union Station. That organization flashed a lookout to all stations between here and New York City.

Board Asks $3,247,000 For Relief

Original Amount Urged by Family Service Association.

The board of managers of the Family Service Association yesterday asked that Congress appropriate $3,247,000—the amount originally requested by the Board of Public Welfare—for District relief.

The board declared that "it is a disgrace upon our city and upon the Nation that families in the Nation's Capital are permitted to undergo slow starvation, eviction, exposure and loss of morale."

The board blamed economic conditions for the recent increase in petty crimes. Citing begging and purse-snatching, the board said that "this sort of thing is commonly not done by seasoned criminals, but rather by those who are desperate. From such beginnings comes a recklessness that leads to bigger crimes."

1,000 Rejected Each Month.

Pointing out that with $1,336,000 appropriated for general relief during the current fiscal year the Board of Public Welfare public assistance division had turned away "from 1,000 to 1,400 needy applicants each month," the managers asked that the original estimate be granted.

Two resolutions were adopted asking that the Senate hold "full and adequate hearings on the question of relief" and that the House plan for an investigation of public welfare administration be broadened to include an investigation of needs and provide for the services of "some qualified group such as the American Public Welfare Association" as consultants.

"Most Are Eager to Work."

The managers asserted many relief applicants had been self-supporting in the past.

"Most of them are eager to work," the statement said, "although some have lost that courage which is so necessary today when there are more workers than jobs. This courage will not be restored by denying them bread.

"Hundreds of applicants tell the same sort of story. For years they were self-supporting, lived in at least two or three rooms, and had the feeling of being useful members of society. Many of them have maintained their independence throughout the depression but in the last year or two have been laid off and unable to regain their foothold because of the keen competition for all existing jobs.

"Wearily and hopelessly they make the rounds of the employment offices, the public relief office, the private family welfare agencies, the markets where they salvage some discarded vegetables and bits of wood, and finally to plead with the landlord, and to beg their neighbors in the same alley or some rooming house to share their scanty food with them."

Judges Vote Down Broadcasting of D.C. Traffic Cases

In a three-to-one decision yesterday, Police Court judges voted down the proposal to broadcast Traffic Court cases. The only one to favor the suggestion, which came from the Traffic Safety sub-committee of the House District Committee, was Judge Edward M. Curran.

Judge Hobart Newman objected on the grounds of the effectiveness of a radio broadcast. He pointed out it might be necessary to "put on an act" in order to make the proceedings clear to the listeners.

Judge Walter J. Casey flatly opposes the plan on general principles. Judge John P. McMahon, president of the court, also is opposed to broadcasts, but said he was willing to talk things over with Chairman William F. Schulte, of the traffic sub-committee.

Kenneth H. Berkeley, of the National Broadcasting Co., has offered a 15-minute morning program for the proposed Traffic Court broadcasts.

George Washington Coed Relieves Embarrassing Situation

When a Chinese and a Japanese met to debate the Oriental war before the Freshman Club at George Washington University yesterday there was a ticklish moment when they were asked to pose together. So pretty Irma Silman, club secretary, solved the problem by standing between Dr. Tuanshen Chien (left), history professor in National Central University at Nanking, and Toshiro Shimanouchi, research associate of the Foreign Affairs Association of Japan.

Catholic Editor Blames War on Diplomats' Lies

Has Faith in People to Work Out Sane Solution, Says Father Gillis.

The free will of men can dictate the outcome of historical events and bring peace to the world, efforts of diplomats and financiers to the contrary, the Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of the Catholic World, declared last night at a lecture sponsored by the Convert League of the Catholic Daughters of America at the Willard Hotel.

"Put not your trust in diplomats. They can start wars, but they cannot stop them. They can draw up treaties much as that at Versailles, in which the will of the people is not represented, and the immediate sequence of which was Hitlerism and Mussolinism. They cannot bring peace," he said.

The history of diplomacy in one sentence, Father Gillis asserted, is that "the diplomats start a fuss with lies and then try to stop it by telling more lies."

"There is nothing to which the world is more inhospitable today than the truth," he said. "Tell the complete truth about Spain, for instance, and both the Communists and Fascists will be raving mad."

He berated the present-day attitude that "war is coming and nothing can be done to stop it."

"I believe in the free will of man. The people, some say, are a great ass. I do not say so. I say put your faith in the people—but I want a reconstructed people, a people reborn of spirit and discretion and love and peace."

Miss Florence M. Winter, national chairman, presided at the lecture. Miss August E. Uhl, grand regent, welcomed the guests. Dr. A. J. Burggraff, spiritual director, presented Father Gillis. Music was furnished by members of the choir of St. Matthew's Church, under the direction of Dr. Malton Boyce.

Aims of Chinese and Japanese Debated Before G.W.U. Forum

Dr. Tuanshen Chien Calls Nippon a Warlike Nation Which Must Control China to Remain a World Power; Opponent Denies Such Goal.

Representatives of the warring Oriental nations, China and Japan, met at a George Washington University freshman forum last night to argue their respective causes with words instead of guns.

Dr. Tuanshen Chien, history professor at Nanking's National Central University, declared Japan is a warlike nation which must control China to maintain its place as a first-class world power. The outcome of the war, he said, will decide not only the destiny of China and Japan but the future of international order.

Toshiro Shimanouchi, a research associate with the Japanese Foreign Affairs Association, denied his country had any desire to conquer China, and said the war was just an attempt to eliminate influences which have prevented Sino-Japanese co-operation. These forces, he declared, are communism and the anti-Japanese spirit.

He charged the Chinese set up trade barriers to stifle the growth of Japanese industry and that Communist leaders, working through China, have been attempting to bring communism to Japan.

China, Shimanouchi asserted, was unwilling to accept any compromise because she was trying to regain her independence an independence which, he said, was lost many years ago. All Japanese attempts to arbitrate the differences between the two countries have been ignored by China, he said.

In referring to Japan as a "warlike power," the Chinese speaker declared:

"If Japan wants to conquer the world, it first must conquer Asia; if Japan wants to conquer Asia, it must first conquer China; if Japan wants to conquer China, it first must conquer Manchuria."

Although he admitted outside powers are sending aid to China for humanitarian reasons, Dr. Chien expressed the opinion that any real assistance to China from other powers would be given because of self-interest.

That self-interest, he said, will become stronger as Japan gains a stronger hold on China, and will make the Japanese task in completely conquering the country even more difficult.

Both speakers were educated in the United States, Dr. Chien at Harvard and Shimanouchi at Occidental College in Los Angeles. Erma Silman, secretary of the forum, presided. The program was arranged by Eugene Lerner.

Taximan Hunted Who Was Exposed To Deadly Illness

A police search was launched yesterday for the operator of taxicab 39, company unknown, who unwittingly exposed himself to cerebrospinal meningitis.

The man drove Mary Jane Gibson, 10, of the 700 block of E street southeast, to Providence Hospital Tuesday. She died shortly afterward of this extremely contagious type of epidemic meningitis.

Although Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said there was little danger of the driver having been infected, eight men from the hack inspector's office and two detective sergeants were assigned to look for him.

Senate Slated To Keep Girls' Home in Bill

By James D. Secrest.

The National Training School for Girls and the Childrens' Receiving Home, which the House voted to abolish, will be retained in the Senate version of the District supply bill, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, indicated yesterday.

Senator Thomas, who is chairman of the sub-committee holding hearings on the bill, said he knew of no other place where the girls and children could be sent.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee, proposed to send the children to the House of Detention, which would be given larger quarters in the old Police Court Building, and the girls to the Industrial School for Boys at Blue Plains.

While explaining that the sub-committee had reached no decisions, Senator Thomas also indicated he would oppose removing the House limitation of $75 for any one family receiving relief funds.

"In my State families on work relief get only $21 a month," he said, "and those on WPA rolls here are paid only $45 no matter how large their families are."

Thomas said the question of whether the total for direct relief, amounting to $900,000, should be raised had not been brought to the attention of the sub-committee.

While indicating he was not inclined to go above the Budget Bureau's estimate, he said:

"I am willing to go along with whatever the people of Washington want appropriated for relief. It's their money."

Reiterating his intention of holding the supply bill total down, the chairman said the appropriations recommended by the Senate sub-committee might be less than those reported to the House.

"I don't see the need at this time for a lot of underpases, overpasses and caves," he said, when people are threatened with new taxes."

He indicated he favored striking out both the Dupont and Thomas Circle underpasses and the K street overpass. The Budget Bureau recommended the Dupont Circle underpass, but the two other projects were added by the House.

Asked about the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, which Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, is supporting, Senator Thomas said:

"We've got along without it for a long time, and a little longer delay won't do any harm."

Railway Head Asks 3 Changes To Aid Industry

Budd Urges Reduction in Companies, Fair Rate Making.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington Railroad, proposed today three revisions of railroad laws to enable the carriers "to obtain sufficient nourishment, not only to keep body and soul together, but to sustain other industry through their immense purchasing power."

The changes, as detailed in an address before the Chicago Association of Commerce, were:

1. Reestablishment of rate making on the basis of a fair return on investments, with a just and workable method of recapture.
2. Reduction of railroads from 850 operating companies to 20.
3. Establishment of an independent labor tribunal with responsibility and authority clearly and fairly enunciated.

Budd said the railroads' ills had been diagnosed "progressive anemia," but he found the same objective symptoms were ascribed to a condition of acute hunger, approaching starvation, "and the indicated treatment for hunger is more nourishment * * * sufficient nourishment instead of hypodermic stimulants."

By the Associated Press.

Arguments were completed yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the application of railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates. Arguments also were completed on Eastern railroads' application for an increase from 2 to 2.5 cents a mile for passenger fares. The commission gave no indication how soon it might announce a decision.

Two Tried in First Phone Slug Case

The first telephone slug case in the District since passage of the act barring their use was opened in Police Court yesterday. Charged with putting slugs in a pay telephone to make a long-distance call, Anthony Willgoose, 63, 1115 M street northwest, and John Michael Murphy, 51, 308 V street northwest, pleaded not guilty.

Principal witness for the prosecution was Raymond B. Leavitt, manager of the public phone office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. He told Judge Edward M. Curran that last December 2 he received a message from Miss Edna Frazier, long-distance operator, that slugs had been deposited on a telephone box in the lobby of the Colorado Building.

Accompanied by Sergt. John K. Baker, of the Detective Bureau, he testified he found Murphy talking in the booth and Willgoose outside. According to testimony, Murphy admitted calling Lancaster, Pa.

Three metal washers, which had been used for quarters, and one nickel were found in the telephone.

Until last August, when the President signed the bill prohibiting slugs, the practice was legal. According to Leavitt, use of slugs costs the telephone company $40,000 yearly in Washington.

Textile Workers Disclaim Strike

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Non-striking workers at the Celanese plant, Cumberland's largest industry, voted down striking spinners today and agreed to go back to work when ordered by the union's executive board.

The plant announced that it was recalling the spinners to their machines. The offer of jobs and the agreement to return to work apparently cleared the way for a resumption of normal employment for the 6,000 workers at the plant.

One was that the management might not recall the 150 workers who sat down at their machines Monday and remained in the plant until last night. The other was that the executive board might not be able to agree with the management on plans to re-start operations.

Shooting Suspect Evades Capture

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 9.—Albemarle County officers, under the direction of Sheriff J. Mason Smith, made a futile search today for John Sprouse, wanted in connection with the shooting Monday night of Tandy Gibson, 27, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Marion Gibson, 39, at the latter's home in a small hillside community seven miles northwest of Charlottesville.

Gibson continues near death at the University Hospital. Shot in the abdomen during a brawl, the bullet passed through vital organs. Although his condition remains unchanged, little hope is held for his life.

Mrs. Marion Gibson was shot in the back and is in a serious but not critical condition, hospital autorities said.

Maybe This Is Why You're Constipated

Perhaps the kind of food you eat doesn't give your bowels anything to work on. Meat, potatoes and bread don't form the kind of soft, bulky mass that will help move your bowels.

If so, a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the kind of "bulk" your intestines may need to work properly. And in addition, it contains the intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1, which helps to tone them. If you want to get at the cause of your trouble, eat some Kellogg's All-Bran every day—as a cereal or baked in muffins. And drink plenty of water. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Per Aspera ad Astra.

Hope and aspiration (being the essence of life) filled the whole being of Buck Baker back in the early eighties when he rode a bicycle as a messenger for the Weather Bureau. Certainly that's what Buck—a retired circus clown now living at Brentwood, Md.—will tell you in the cool of any evening. And what he tells will simply prove what we've long contended: That the Federal service has trained many a man for higher, more noble and even more spectacular things.

Buck knew, almost from the start, that his bicycle was carrying him somewhere other than down the streets. He sensed it in the grace of his cycling as he rounded the corners, appraised it in the ease with which he passed buggies and men on horseback and in the technique of his pedaling on the grades. He pedaled himself into an eating ambition, and he didn't want to be the Weather Man himself as would most messengers who work for the Weather Man; Buck wanted to be a famous bicyclist.

He was belabored by the dream as he pedaled toward the White House one morning to deliver a weather map, as was the routine and accustomed wont.

* * * *

Now, so often had Buck gone to the White House that his presence caused no attention. It was his simple duty to hand the map—which showed which way the wind was blowing and the clouds were moving—to some functionary, who signed it, releasing the messenger from further obligation. But on one morning the functionary wasn't present, and Buck wandered to the second floor looking for somebody to sign the map. There he noticed President Grover Cleveland oiling and polishing a shotgun.

The Fates are obdurate things, and now they were at work—the unyielding threads of their design were at play—and for the good of Buck Baker. The President, himself, took the map and signed it. And what's more he engaged Buck in conversation; wanted to know if Buck was a hunter, if he knew where any ducks were, if he could push a skiff. Buck "yessed" everything.

And at 4:30 the next morning, the President's carriage halted in front of Buck's house in the 1100 block H street northeast. They went to what Buck recalls as "Benning's Creek," where he pushed the skiff while the President saw no ducks but fired twice, unsuccessfully, at some transient and small birds.

Later in the day, Buck pedaled to the Weather Bureau, the flush of his ambition still on him. He had been out with the President, but he didn't want to be a President—he still wanted to be a famous bicyclist. Promptly, he was pounced upon. Why, it was demanded, had he bothered the President with a weather map? The President then had enough of bother with the economic weathervanes. So they laid Buck Baker off and tried to forget the commission of such an irregular deed as his. But within 30 days he was reinstated—which would prove that truth crushed will go back to work again. But that isn't our thesis: It is, rather, to be proved here that the Federal service has trained many a man for higher and nobler things.

Then Buck Baker's ambition surged over him. Turning to his bicycle that the Government had trained him on, he took to the shows and with the greatest of ease discovered the cyclewhirl, the forerunner of the motordrome. He pedaled down the steps of the Nation's Capitol; he cycled before the eyes of thousands in acts magnificent. He pedaled and pedaled, finally putting on the brakes at the very door of fame—and then, with no more heights to pedal, he became a clown for Ringling Bros. Circus.

"Do your work and do it right," he yesterday counseled present-day Federal employes who, like Buck Baker, would pedal on to better things.

DO YOU KNOW WHO DEPARTMENT: (Yesterday the subject was Samuel M. Barrett, of the Bureau of Reclamation, Interior). Today, we present a gentleman you often have seen in the lower parts of the Commerce Building. We think he has one of the most interesting jobs in the service. He is white-haired and stubby—built like a wrestler of the old school . . . carries a steamfitter's card, though he gave up that occupation long ago . . . He is famous for his stories and has a laugh that booms . . . Thousands of tourists have seen him and dozens of newspapermen have gotten some very swell stories from him.

FACTS, FIGURES, PEOPLE: Again, the FCA begs that books and periodicals borrowed from the library be returned as soon as is reasonably possible. "This action is particularly important in the case of books and periodicals secured by the library for FCA personnel from other libraries—which are sometimes reluctant to let us have their material. Every time that we are slow in returning such material to another library, we add to their reluctance." This proves that the old Spanish custom of regarding books and umbrellas as the property of no one in particular is still a vital one in American life . . . Hugh W. Fisher, formerly with the N. F. F. E. national office as director of publicity, has been appointed publicity representative of Local 262, composed of Treasury workers . . . The Civil Service Commission notes that sizable seasonal decreases in employment were reported in the War Department of 1,569; Agriculture, 4,123, and the TVA, 881. Employment in the Department of Labor declined 1,065 during the month (December), principally in the National Employment Service . . . The monthly meeting of N. F. F. E. Local 262 will be held Monday evening at 8 on the mezzanine floor of the Washington Hotel. The Credit Union's board of directors will meet immediately thereafter. Then an amateur night entertainment will be offered, in which all are invited to participate.

Three employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing retired at the close of last month, as follows: Mrs. Mamie A. Bergevin, 1604 Webster street northwest, over 33 years' service; Mrs. Louise K. Miller, 902 Twelfth street northeast, over 20 years, and James Hart, 810 Ralph street, Arlington, Va., over 24 years . . . The West Virginia Society holds a dance at the Raleigh Hotel next Thursday evening (9 to 1). Invitations have been sent to all officers and enlisted men in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps now serving in the District and whose native State is West Virginia. David S. Davison will preside; Col. Heber H. Rice will be in charge of the dance.

The Civil Service Commission announces examinations as follows: Printer-proofreader, $1.32 an hour (40-hour week, Government Printing Office; closing date, February 28; physiotherapy aid, $1,800 a year, Public Health Service and Veterans Administration; closing date, March 7; senior scientific aid (preparator in pathology), $2,000 a year, Army Medical Museum, closing date, March 7.

Auto Crash Victim Dies of Infection

Another District traffic fatality—the fifth since Saturday—was recorded yesterday when an autopsy disclosed that John Wade, jr., 18, of 3851 Chesapeake street northwest, died of injuries received in an automobile accident.

The police said the boy was a passenger in an automobile which overturned December 31 at Thirty-eighth street and Windom place northwest. Wade was riding with several other youths, and at the time none was believed injured. Leo B. Curry, jr., 18, 4613 Thirty-eighth street northwest, was fined $10 in Traffic Court for driving at unreasonable speed.

Several days afterward, Wade was treated at Garfield Hospital for injuries to his teeth. The autopsy disclosed he died of infection.

An inquest will be held at the Morgue today. The death brought the traffic toll to 15.

Chairmen Selected For Ahepa Convention

By the Associated Press.

Last week's uproarious meeting of little businessmen, who clamored first of all for easier loans with which to expand their enterprises, got results yesterday.

Secretary of Commerce Roper told reporters that in about a week a plan would be announced for lending Government funds to such businesses, and for Government insurance of loans granted to them by the banks.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and others in the Administration are making a survey of the situation, Roper said, and will formulate the recommendations.

"It was brought out," Roper said, "that the well-established company, requiring a large stock issue, can secure financial aid easier than the smaller company whose capital requirements are not attractive to large underwriters, even though the company might be as successful as the large unit.

"It is evident that the financial market is not implemented to adequately serve such smaller enterprises."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Blocked!

Thousands upon thousands of points are lost every day because partners insist on squandering two honors on the same trick. At times it is very difficult to avoid this pitfall, but in a hand such as the one described below, this particular type error is inexcusable.

North, dealer.
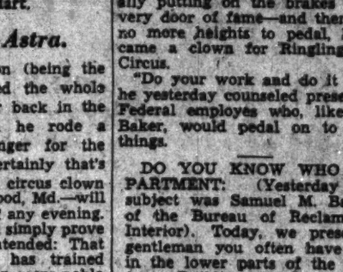
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is not held up as perfect, by any means. North's opening bid was, of course, correct, as was East's pass. South's notrump was questionable. He did not have enough to bid two hearts over one spade but, that being so, it is doubtful that he should have kept the bidding open at all. West's double was decidedly shaded, even in match-point duplicate. North had an opportunity to save the partnership by bidding two hearts over the double; his pass put entirely too great a burden on South. East was quite correct in his business pass to the double. With his holding, there was not much chance to "go anywhere" himself, but a decided chance that the enemy could be defeated. South was afraid to jump from the frying pan into the fire and, therefore, stuck to the notrump rather than experiment with two hearts—an illogical decision, in my opinion. West opened his fourth best club. Dummy's ten was played and, when it held, a low heart was led from dummy. East won, and made the fatal error of laying down the diamond King. His object, of course, was to smother dummy's Jack so that if declarer had the Ace and Wets the ten the declarer would not get two tricks in the suit. Unfortunately, West's view was short-sighted. The diamond King held, but the diamond suit was then irrevocably blocked.

Had East placed due importance on West's original double, it would have become manifest that the diamond Ace must be in West's hand—not in declarer's. West's double was light enough, even with the diamond Ace; without it, it would have been horrible.

The obviously correct return for East after winning the heart Ace was his fourth-best diamond. West's Ace and ten would have won and the third round could have been overtaken by East in order to run the suit.

It would have made a vast difference in the match-point score if the defenders had capitalized their opportunity to defeat the contract 100 points instead of presenting declarer with an extra trick.

Enjoy Them All at Their Best and Still Save Expenses

Thousands of travelers, following the sun to Florida, have reaped and are reaping the benefits of our wider scope of vacation pleasures; our more economical plan of vacation expenditures.

Let us give you the information we gave them . . . important data on vacation costs in Florida . . . facts and figures garnered after years of experience and research in this business of winter vacationing . . . valuable hints on how to enjoy the best at less cost.

Our representatives in New York and Chicago—specialists in Florida vacation knowledge—will be glad to give you the "low-down", accurate facts, either in a personal interview (if you are in these metropolitan areas or even in Boston, Philadelphia or Washington) or by correspondence, answering all your questions. This service is yours for the asking. There are no strings to our offer. You do not obligate yourself in any way.

Undoubtedly you know the two great hotels—among the finest resort hotels in the world—that make you this offer: the RONEY PLAZA, America's finest oceanfront hotel, Miami Beach, and the MIAMI BILTMORE, center of the wintertime world, Miami (Coral Gables).

They represent the BEST in vacation living—also, the MOST VALUE for your vacation dollar.

For instance, when you are a guest of either hotel, you are spared the considerable expense of hiring taxis, sightseeing cars or other transportation to get around to all the sports and social activities in this famous playground. There's a private fleet of aerocars—big, comfortable auto lounge cars—available day and night, free of charge, to take Roney Plaza and Miami Biltmore guests to the races, theaters, nightclubs, jai alai, airports, polo games, even to the Florida keys and bring them back. This economy alone saves you approximately one-third of your normal vacation expenses.

And there are many other rare advantages offered by this revolutionary policy of guest privileges and entertainment. One of the greatest courtesies ever offered is that of membership privileges in three of the finest sports clubs in America, after the guest's name has been approved by the clubs' membership committees. These privileges are granted without payment of initiation fees or dues. Think what these privileges would cost you, if you were not a guest of the Roney Plaza or Miami Biltmore. Moreover, this enlarges your vacation opportunities to include every phase of resort pleasure—from surf bathing on a private beach and golf on "the course of champions" to deep-sea fishing at the celebrated Key Largo Anglers Club.

But let one of our representatives tell you about it personally, as well as giving you other valuable information about Florida in general, various costs, routes, resort activities, etc.

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Bucky Harris Made Pilot of 1924 Club; Action Ridiculed as "Griffith's Folly;" McNeely Bought, With Sore Arm, for $50,000.

Chapter Twenty-Six.

DURING THE WINTER OF 1923-24, Clark Griffith was accused of being "a senile old man," who was taking his sobriquet of "Old Fox" too seriously. He had just appointed his young second baseman, Stanley Raymond (Bucky) Harris, as manager of the Washington club.

"Griffith's Folly," his choice was called by astonished baseball writers throughout the Nation. Griffith had been a slick one in the past, but this time he was going too far with his bizarre stuff, they averred. Harris? Why, the fellow had only been in the big leagues for four seasons. And he wasn't even a star. Griffith was saddling 27-year-old Bucky with managerial duties and ruining a promising young second baseman, was the general plaint.

But Griffith had been determined to make a change. Clyde Milan had lasted only one year as manager. Griffith found him a job at Memphis and gave him his release at the end of the 1922 season. The veteran Donie Bush, who had piloted the Nats into fourth place in 1923, did not suit Griffith. For months the Washington managership for 1924 remained open.

The Nation's baseball writers and Washington's fans were no more astonished at Griffith's appointment of Harris as manager than was Harris himself. As late as January, 1924, Harris was "in the doghouse" with Griffith.

The Nats' owner, for several years, had forbidden Harris to play professional basketball in the off season. It was a blow to Harris, who was a star with Pittston, Pa., in a top-ranking pro basketball league, and it was a tidy sum which he had been in the habit of earning during the winter. But, religiously, Griffith always wrote into his baseball contracts a clause that called for Harris to play no basketball. "It's bad for your legs—those hard-wood floors—" Griffith warned.

When Harris signed his 1924 contract, following the close of the 1923 season, he noted that Griffith had forgotten to make mention of the no-basketball clause. Saying nothing, Harris considered himself released from the basketball ban. He would play, earn himself a bit of off-season money and there was no need for Griffith to know.

Bucky Harris Made Manager of 1924 Team.

IT WORKED NICELY—until New Year's Day, 1924. Harris was in Washington to attend a New Year's Eve function at the Wardman Park Hotel. There, to his surprise, he encountered Griffith. For Harris, it was a bit embarrassing. Because, at the time, he was wearing two beauteous black eyes received in a basketball game the night before.

Under those circumstances, he was forced to break down and confess to Griffith that he had been playing basketball and the "Old Fox" went into a rage. He threatened to fine Harris heavily, bawled him out for breaking his promise and altogether was highly indignant.

Later that month, he appointed Harris manager of the Washington club.

For that 1924 team, Griffith had high hopes. Peckinpaugh was playing superbly at shortstop, Judge was the old reliable at first base and Harris was giving the team excellent protection at second. Donie Bush, the 1923 manager, had made one notable contribution to the team. He had placed the rookie Ossie Bluege at third base.

"I don't care if he doesn't hit a lick, he'll be a great third baseman," Bush had said. And Bluege, given a chance at the job, was making good sensationally.

Muddy Ruel had been bought from the Red Sox for $12,500 and the catching staff was ample. The pitching staff looked impressive . . . with Walter Johnson, Tom Zachary, George Mogridge, the spitballing Allan Russell, and Fred Marberry . . . all available.

Clark Griffith sincerely believed that, by 1925, Washington would win its first American League pennant. He did not think the 1924 team would be equal to it.

Searching for an Outfielder to Help Win a Pennant.

UNDER ROOKIE MANAGER HARRIS, Washington was off to a comparatively sour start. The team was laboring in sixth place in the early weeks of the 1924 season. But Griffith was not condemning it. The lack of a third capable outfielder was its chief handicap.

In desperation, Griffith bought diminutive Wid Mathews, Minneapolis outfielder, who had had a previous trial with the Athletics. The effect of little Mathews' presence on the Nats was magical. He literally "sparked" the team on an upward surge. Joining the club the last of May, Mathews inspired the entire team with his own sensational fielding and hitting and the Nats returned from a Western trip, in June, in second place.

It was of such a team that Griffith had long dreamed. It had virtually every physical asset—hitting, pitching, magnificent fielding—and it had the important fire and spirit. His hopes knew no bounds later in June when Johnson, Mogridge, Zachary, and Marberry beat the Yankees in a pair of double-headers and took the lead, the Nats scoring 8 runs in the eighth inning of the last game to demoralize completely the New York club.

But Mathews' individual play was tailing off and Griffith was worried. There was no doubt that the little outfielder was still an inspiration, but it couldn't be translated into crucial basehits at a time when a basehit was needed. Griffith honestly believed now that Washington could win the pennant—if it could acquire one truly big league outfielder.

He dispatched Scout Joe Engel on a country-wide tour in search of an outfielder. Engel reported that only two players in the top minor leagues had taken his fancy.

"What're their names?" demanded Griffith.

"A fellow named Zittman, who is with Newark, and a fellow named Earl McNeely, who's with Sacramento. I think either one of 'em would make good."

That day, Griffith hastened to Buffalo to scout Zittman. He was unimpressed. "How about this McNeely?" he asked Engel.

"Are you serious about paying $65,000?"

"I'm serious about getting an outfielder."

"Well, if you're going to pay any big price for McNeely, you'd better look him over yourself," said Engel. "I don't want to take the responsibility of recommending a $65,000 outfielder."

"Hell, by the time I get out to the Coast and bring McNeely back, two weeks of the pennant race will have gone. We need him now. We've got to make this deal over the phone."

McNeely Is Bought for $50,000 . . . With a Useless Arm!

AND GRIFFITH MADE THE PURCHASE over the telephone, beating down the Sacramento club's price to $35,000 in cash for McNeely plus three players, to be delivered to the Coast club at the end of the season . . . plus the services of Outfielder Mathews for the remainder of the season. Griffith asked that McNeely join the Washington club at once at Chicago.

On a June morning, a young, moderately sized fellow walked into Griffith's room and introduced himself. "I'm Earl McNeely," he said.

"So you're the fellow who cost me a fortune," laughed Griffith. "Well, glad to meet you." And the "Old Fox" extended his hand to McNeely.

"Sorry," said McNeely, shrinking from Griffith's advance and making no attempt to shake hands. "I can't raise my arm above my hip. Dislocated my shoulder last week in a game at Frisco."

Griffith had paid the equivalent of $50,000 for an outfielder who couldn't lift his throwing arm!

McNeely revealed that he was in a San Francisco hospital when the Sacramento owner made the deal with Griffith and the "Old Fox," in a rage, telephoned Commissioner Landis, demanding the deal be canceled. Landis agreed to permit Griffith to withhold payment, until McNeely was given a chance to recover.

On the day he reported, McNeely was in uniform despite his helplessness. He couldn't throw a ball 6 feet with his right arm and was on the Nats' bench. Came the ninth inning of a close game and Harris, in desperation, sent McNeely in as a pinch hitter. He rifled a two bagger over third base with two men on and won the game for Washington.

If he could hit like that, Griffith hoped that McNeely's arm would recover. For 17 days, he was used as a pinch hitter and delivered with startling success. But his arm was showing only slow improvement.

The Sacramento owner was demanding payment and Landis ordered Griffith to pay up or return McNeely. Griffith asked for more time and was refused. The "Old Fox" was afraid to keep McNeely, afraid to turn him back. He gambled and kept him.

And McNeely proved to be that outfielder whom Griffith had thought would win the pennant for the Nats. He batted .330 in the last 45 games of the season and literally lifted Washington to the pennant in a down-the-stretch battle with the Yankees.

TOMORROW: Washington's first American League pennant is won and, in the 1924 World Series, the Giants and the Senators split the first six games.

1,200 Watch Faris Lead 41-26 Win

Locals Overcome 1-Point Deficit With Fast 2d Half Rally.

By Bob Garrison.

Minus their captain but not their sizzling passing and shooting attack, George Washington University's road-weary Colonial basketball players returned home yesterday, kicked the kinks out of their legs, then proceeded to kick the daylights out of the Westminster five last night, 41-26.

Twelve hundred persons sat in Tech gym as the locals experienced a profitable reversal of form in the second half to overcome a one-point halftime lead and register their eighth win of the season. They have lost three times.

Unable to click in the first period without the services of Capt. Tommy O'Brien, the Buff cagers came back in the second half with an aim as true as their namesakes'. With Bob Faris and Jack Butterworth leading the way they used it to score field goals from every possible angle against their Pennsylvania foes to rout.

The Colonials found the going tough in the first half as they suffered from poor co-ordination of their rapid, short-passing game. As a result Westminster's long-range goals enabled it to overcome a 12-5 deficit and hold a 14-13 advantage at the end of the first half.

Lead Short Lived.

It was short lived, however, for no sooner had the second half opened than Butterworth, the team's high point scorer for the season, let fly from the side and the Colonials had a 15-14 lead. After Bob Faris had started his sensational second-half scoring spree with a snowbird goal, the Blue Jays tied the score at 17-all on two baskets by Mel Miller.

Then the siege set in. George Washington, its passing and shooting now functioning smoothly, dropped in ten fast baskets. Miller managed to sink a follow-up and then added a foul goal for the visitors and the Colonials led, 40-20.

Westminster was getting the ball down the floor in between the salvo of G. W. baskets but it, too, suffered a reversal in form—in the opposite sense. Where the Jays had been hitting the mark from long range in the first period, they were unable to score on any kind of shot in the finale.

Westminster Misses.

At one stretch, they brought the ball down court nine straight times without scoring, either relinquishing the ball to a G. W. interception or losing it after missing the goal.

Both teams used a zone defense, the Colonials preferring to work the ball through and the Jays electing to arch long shots over. In the first half, with the Colonials unable to keep the ball moving, it appeared that the long shots would prove victorious. But once the Colonials went to work in the second half, they proved the superiority of their method and even switched to the set-shot variety by way of diversity.

In a preliminary, the George Washington Freshman made it a double victory for the G street school by defeating the University of Maryland Frosh in a thriller, 33-31. It was the Little Colonials' seventh straight victory without a defeat.

Cards Lose To Wayne U. Five, 48-39

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The doubting members of the sports gentry that think basketball is a sissy game would have received an awful shock at Catholic U. last night where the Tartars from Wayne University trounced the Flying Cardinals, 48 to 39, in a double-barreled, two-fisted, rough-and-tumble encounter.

The visitors, representing Detroit's largest university, carried an impressive record of eight victories and only two defeats into the fray, one of the latter at the hands of George Washington, by 3 points, and were never pressed in scoring over the Brooklanders, despite the proximity of the score.

No holds were barred last night, and flying tackles, shoving, pushing, hacking and headlocks were all a part of the proceedings. The Cards suffered the most, losing Wayne Ambrose and the Pirro brothers, Rocco and Carmen, by the personal foul route, while the remainder of their nine players had from one to three personals at the final whistle.

Garretson Impressive.

The green-clad Wayne quintet looked impressive in the first eleven minutes of play, when a blond lad answering to Jimmy Garretson led them to a 25 to 10 advantage. Garretson scored 14 points in the eleven minutes, via six field goals and a trio of foul shots. He had 15 points when he was taken out by Coach Ertell with a minute remaining in the first half and did not get back in the game.

Behind 25 to 10, Capt. Irish Carroll took time out and this spurred the Cards to one of their greatest rallies of the season. With Ambrose and Carroll counting heavily, the hosts drew up to 24-28 but the visitors dropped three straight baskets into the hoop and led 34-24 at half time.

Ambrose lost ground in his efforts to overtake Maryland's Charlie Norton, District scoring leader, as his lone efforts from a scoring standpoint were in the Cards rally, when he counted three times from midfloor with his patented over-the-head shot.

The teams never regained their high scoring tendencies of the first half, as the Wayne dribblers were content to protect their lead in the final period and the Cotton-coached Cards outscored them 15 to 14 to reduce the final margin to nine points.

Tied in Floor Goals.

The teams were knotted at 17-all in floor goals, but Wayne counted 14 times from the charity stripe to the locals' 5 successful attempts. But Wayne had at least four times as many shots as they were not inclined to foul as frequently as the Cardinals.

Garretson, despite only playing 19 of the 40 minutes, garnered scoring honors for the evening with his total of 15 points, with Glen Burgin, a teammate, tying Vic Miller and Irish Carroll, of Catholic, for runner-up honors, with four floor goals apiece. Miller was the only Redbird to score in the first 13 minutes of the final period, when he counted three of his scores.

The Detroit quint has two more contests on its Eastern invasion, playing the oft-beaten Western Maryland team here Saturday. They led the Colonials for 37 minutes of the game in the auto city and are anxious to even the count to a game apiece in series. Their nine victims already include Boston University and Centenary.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9.—A revamped Navy basketball team, without the services of Frank Lynch, its tall center, who wrenched his knee in practice, made a slow start against William and Mary here this afternoon and then turned in to win by 61 to 20, the largest score of its season up to this point.

Bob Gillette, who entered the game with half of the first period over, led in the scoring with 14 points.

Handball Play To Goldstein

Current D. C. A. A. U. handball rankings face a drastic revision as a result of last night's semifinal singles, which saw George Wendlandt, a decided favorite on the strength of his recent No. 2 ranking, bowing to Gustave Goldstein in a slow two-game match, 21 to 9, 22 to 20.

Walter Engelhardt dropped his first match of the tourney when Champion Jack Schwartz, following his usual custom, came from behind in both games to register a decisive win, 21 to 16, 21 to 12.

The semifinals doubles matches will be extended over two nights, with Myers - Newman meeting Payne-Berman Friday night at 8 o'clock, and Engelhardt-Wondrack facing Schwartz-Pearlman tonight at the same hour.

Washington-Lee Upsets Bethesda Cagers, 39 to 38

Led by towering Forrest Tucker, Wahsington-Lee's basketball team upset Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 39-38, last night at Ballston.

Trailing, 22-16, at the half, the Generals, behind the deadly shooting of the blond center who tallied 16 points, slowly closed the gap and shot in front on successive field goals by Carl Sprinkle and Tucker. The latter hit the cords from midfloor with the basket that clinched the decision.

Norton Takes Exam; May Face Indians

Charlie Norton, Maryland University center and the District's high-point scorer, hoped that he had found one of the nine successful ways of skinning a cat as he awaited a make-up examination mark last night.

Ineligible because of scholastic troubles, the Ogden, Utah, sophomore must receive a passing grade in a special zoology exam given him so that he might be able to play in tonight's William and Mary game.

Terps Seek Conference Court Berth

Buoyed by the upset 36-32 defeat of Washington and Lee last Saturday night, Maryland University's shakey basketball team makes its final bid for an invitation to the Southern Conference tourney against William and Mary and V. M. I., tonight and tomorrow night, respectively.

The beating the Terps handed the Generals gave them a 4-all circuit record and a double dose of the same medicine applied to the final foes should clinch a tourney birth for the College Parkers.

Against William and Mary, tonight, the Terps will be heavy favorite to win and tomorrow will be at least an even money choice to repeat an earlier season triumph over the V. M. I. Cadets. Coach Burt Shipley, who has been having considerable difficulty finding a combination that satisfies his wants since Charlie "Chuck" Norton, District scoring leader, became eligible, believes he has finally found it and will start the following line-up:

Waverly Wheeler and Adam Bengoschea, forwards; John "Sport" McCarthy, at center in place of Norton, and George Knepley and Coleman Headley at guard. In Knepley, the Terps have uncovered another brilliant scoring star, whose 17 points against W. & L. Saturday placed him in third place in the local collegiate scoring race.

Tomorrow night the Old Liners indulge in the next to last double-header of the season, when the boxers augment the V. M. I. cage game by meeting Western Maryland on a program listed as "All University" Night. Before the boxers conclude the evening, there will be a parade of snappy and varied events by the various departments of the school. Musical, military and men's and women's physical education departments will vie for honors.

The only other participation, tonight, by a local college team will be American University's invasion of Virginia, where the Eagles will meet the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. The trip also calls for a clash with the Virginia State Medical College of Richmond, tomorrow night.

Tacoma Pro Tops 'Frisco Open Event

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—Heavy wind, rain and spongy turf today made a joke of the scoring efforts of the field in the first round of the $5,000 San Francisco Match Play Open golf tournament.

When the firing was over and 183 storm beaten fairway troupers had reported with tales of balls blown 75 yards off line, and hats out of the county, Charles Congdon, tall young professional from Tacoma, Wash., led the parade with a 75.

His score was four strokes over par for the 36-35—71 San Francisco Club course. Congdon posted a 38 and 37 for the two nines.

In view of playing conditions Congdon's card was considered outstanding. He toured the course when the gale was at its worst. The wind reached a reported velocity of 76 miles per hour at the San Francisco airport. It wrecked the scoreboard, blew down power lines and huge trees in the golf club area.

Ball Blown Off Line.

John Revolta, Evanston, Ill., who scored a 77, said one shot was blown about 75 yards off line. Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., reported he drove dead into the wind off the tenth and the ball traveled less than 100 yards.

One stroke behind the leader came the pretournament favorite, Lawson Little, winner a year ago. Little, out in 42, produced a fine 34 on the back nine for a total 76.

Three players stopped in the 77-short bracket. Neil Christian, Yakima, Wash., had a 39-38; Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., carded 38-39 and Johnny Revolta had 41-36.

Only 15 Under 80.

Only 15 members of the starting field broke 80. They included Romie Espinosa, San Francisco; Olin Dutra, Los Angeles, former National Open champion; John Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., all with 78s. The 79 shooters were Mark Fry, Oakland; Harry Cooper, Chicopee, Mass.; John Bulla, Chico, Calif.; Leonard Dodson, Springfield, Mo.; Leo Mallory, Noroton, Conn., and Willie Hunter, Pacific Palisades, Calif.

The second round will be held tomorrow with the 32 low scores qualifying for the match-play rounds which start Friday.

Narragansett's Stormy Petrel Accepts Cash Settlement.

By Homer Jenks.
United Press Staff Writer.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 9.—Walter E. O'Hara resigned tonight as $75,000-a-year president and managing director of Narragansett Park Horse Race Track.

He will receive $25,000 in exchange for releasing the Narragansett Racing Association, Inc., from their contract with him, which was to expire in June, 1941.

O'Hara's resignation was announced at a stockholders' meeting convened at the track clubhouse after hours of conferences between the turfman and representatives of hostile directors.

2. Payment of $25,000 to O'Hara in consideration of the cancelation of his contract.

3. Signing over to O'Hara of an insurance policy on his life by the racing association.

4. Release of the association from all obligations and agreements with O'Hara.

5. Release of O'Hara from all obligations and agreements by or with the association.

6. Resignation of Joseph A. L. Duffy as treasurer of the association.

Only One Dissenter.

O'Hara's resignation and the settlement of claims were announced by Judge James E. Dooley, vice president of the association and leader of the ouster movement, who said he had proxies representing 224,300 of the 350,000 shares outstanding.

The announcement was made at an extraordinary meeting of stockholders which had been called in connection with the ouster move against the fiery turfman.

Judge Raymond J. McMahon, association secretary, asked again if there were any opposition, and this time no one spoke in protest.

O'Hara did not attend the meeting. Dooley announced that he was presiding at the turfman's request. Though 350 to 400 stockholders had been present earlier in the day, only about 100 were there when the vote was taken.

The stockholders also voted to abolish the post of managing director, and then adjourned. Delayed for four hours, the session lasted only 20 minutes when finally convened.

Battle Over Terms.

No successor to O'Hara as association president was named.

What was transpiring in the seclusion of O'Hara's penthouse was the final chapter in his months-long battle with Gov. Robert E. Quinn—a fight which brought steel-helmeted National Guardsmen to Narragansett Park last fall and which created Nation-wide interest.

The opposition faction, led by Vice President James E. Dooley and Secreary Raymond J. McMahon, of the Racing Association, includes six New York and Philadelphia investment houses. Between 350 and 400 stockholders were here to witness the end of O'Hara's spectacular regime as director of the $3,000,000 track.

Track Is Guarded.

Though the militiamen who patrolled the track with bayoneted rifles when it was forcibly closed by the Governor last fall had long since been withdrawn, ten State troopers and a squad of deputy sheriffs were on duty today to guard against possible disorders. Also present were two representatives of Rhode Island's attorney general.

Reminiscent of the hectic days at the height of the Quinn-O'Hara war, today dawned with determined deputies wielding sledge-hammers to batter down the door of the Narragansett Racing Association offices at Hotel Biltmore. The deputies seized race track accounts and records as result of OHara's refusal to recognize a court order placing these documents in custody.

After the door was smashed, O'Hara and several associates, including Mayor Thomas P. McCoy of Pawtucket and ousted High Sheriff Philip E. Quinn of Providence County started to leave with proxies O'Hara had obtained for the stockholders' meeting.

High Sheriff John E. Baird, in charge of the deputies, told O'Hara he could not take anything from the room.

"The proxies are not the property

Cunningham, Venzke Enter Mile Run in Baltimore Meet

Glenn Cunningham and Gene Venzke, two of the Nation's outstanding mile runners, will compete in the Governor's Mile, feature of the Maryland-Fifth Regiment Armory Games, March 5-6 at Baltimore, it was announced last night.

The entry blanks of both famous runners were received yesterday by Geary Eppley, Maryland Athletic Director. The race will be held for the trophy to be presented by Governor Harry Nice.

At the same time Eppley announced that the games in the spacious Baltimore armory will rank with the best ever held in this section. Inquiries about the games have been much greater than last year when the two organizations joined for the first time in promoting the affair.

The meet, doubtless, will have a strong Southern Conference entry with notable entries from Eastern and Northern schools. With sections for colleges, schools and A. A. U., plenty of variety is offered.

Blueblood of Dogdom Take Over New York

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 9. — The bluebloods of the dog world, 3,093 of them, take over Madison Square Garden tomorrow for the opening of the Westminster Kennel Club's show.

Out of the three-day show late Saturday night, will come one dog with the coveted title of "Best In Show." The honor last year went to the cocky little English-bred wire-haired fox terrier, Fiornell Spicypiece of Halleston, owned by Stanley J. Halle, of Chappaqua, N. Y.

Fiornell Spicypiece, which entered the 1937 show almost unheralded, will be in there trying again but he faces no easy task. Few champions ever have repeated. Then too there have been a number of important importations in recent months, some of them held back for the Westminster show.

In addition a fine lot of homebreds is prepared to give the invaders a battle in the 90 breeds. Thirty of the dogs which topped their breeds last year figure to offer strong opposition. They include the Windholme Kennels' Greyhound, ch. White Rose of Boveway, best of the 1937 hounds.

To qualify for the right to face John G. Bates, of Morristown, N. J., judge of the "best in show," a dog must not only parade through its breed but top its variety group. The latter competition brings all breed champions together in six groups—sporting, hounds, working, terrier, toys and nonsporting. Fiornell Spicypiece and White Rose are the only group champions returning to the Garden ring.

Maintaining their popularity, the cocker spaniels lead the show for the second straight year. With 34 English cockers included in the list, 216 will parade into the ring tomorrow. The fox terriers and dachshunds ranked second, with 157 entries each.

The judging program has been laid out so that representatives of the most popular breeds will hold the center of the stage the first two days. The cocker spaniels, fox terriers, boxers, great Danes, Irish setters, Scotties and Pomeranians are among the prominent breeds which will be judged the first day. Reserved for Friday are the Boston terriers, Airedales, English setters, collies, beagles, dachshunds and poodles.

The saga of Walter O'Hara has taken another eventful turn. The latest chapters are a trifle on the seamy side. Yesterday, on two fronts, the little world of Walter O'Hara suffered further deflation.

POVICH.

At Providence, after deputy sheriffs smashed the doors of his office and seized the records and accounts of his Narragansett race track, O'Hara resigned. At Miami, the Federal Government posted notice that three of his race horses and stable equipment would be offered for sale at auction to satisfy a Federal lien for alleged unpaid income taxes.

It is a sad estate for Walter O'Hara. The dapper little man from Boston gave the race track business a fancy whirl before he hopped on the wrong side of the Rhode Island political fence. His Narragansett track at Pawtucket sluiced a golden flow into his pockets during each of its three yearly meetings. After the first year of its operation, Walter O'Hara became an important figure in racing. With the visionary profits of future years, he could talk big money and he did.

He made of his Narragansett track a show place. He came to Washington and bought an option on the Benning track, hiring high-powered lobbyists to press a bill that would legalize racing in the Capital. That failing, he offered to buy the Laurel track from the Butler interests for cash—and he could produce it.

The Walter O'Hara of those lush days of 1935-36-37 was a picturesque, spectacular figure. He was something of a throwback of the plunger of bygone days, inevitably surrounding himself with a coterie of attorneys, friends and hangers-on. He spent with a free hand and always picked up the tab. The best was, in fact, none too good for Walter O'Hara or his friends.

This man who liked race-track companions and never, despite his wealth, attempted any flights in the higher social strata, would have been equal to it, however. He liked to talk a bit from the side of his mouth, but he had another identity. He could tear himself away from ribald associates, affix his collar and tie, and receive a member of the clergy in the most approved genteel manner. For Walter O'Hara, who liked to laugh and shout and hear a good story, is a Harvard graduate—an honor graduate of Harvard.

He was nothing if not philosophic about his new-found affluence as the owner of the Narragansett track. He wondered himself how he ever happened to be rich. In a Washington hotel room as he finished making de luxe reservations for transportation and a suite in Miami, he said to this department, laughingly, "Shirley, it's wonderful. But I'll probably go broke at this in a few years."

Like many other meteoric figures, Walter O'Hara finally developed the conviction that he could make no mistakes. His spectacular climb had been easy. He sweetened a few political pots, jammed through a bill legalizing racing in Rhode Island, promoted himself a $75,000 salary as president of Narragansett, in addition to clipping the coupons. He was riding high.

But he was not satisfied. When political opposition arose in Rhode Island, O'Hara did not temporize. When the State Governor frowned on the Narragansett project, O'Hara bought a Providence newspaper and attacked him personally. He was counting, too, on the backing of the Mayor of Pawtucket in his battle with the Governor.

But the mayor could lend only his moral support. He did not have State militia or State police or tear gas squads. The Governor did. And the Governor sent them into Narragansett on the eve of the opening of the 1937 fall meeting. And they barricaded the mutuel windows, forced O'Hara to cancel the meeting.

Without the golden flow from Narragansett, O'Hara was indeed in a sorry plight. The State which suspended his profits from the track, did not suspend the taxes. O'Hara's racing stable, which never did earn its way, demanded a terrific upkeep. The closing of Narragansett was the date of O'Hara's decline.

Last fall he sold his Providence newspaper, apparently giving up the editorial tack. His $75,000 salary, of course, will not accrue unless the track operates. From his spectacular exploits he retains chiefly—his memories. And oh, yes, his option on the Benning track doesn't expire until 90 days after the present session of Congress ends.

Daviscourt And Ali Baba Mix Tonight

In the feature match of Turner's weekly rassle card tonight, unique in that neither of the contestants claims any part of the title, Ali Babi, the Terrible Turk, exposes his bulky chassis to the assaults of Dick Daviscourt, the Terrible Californian.

The one-fall to a finish bout headlines a card which is the best of the season, according to Joe Turner, who certainly should be unbiased. In the other portion of double windup, Dean Detton, who recently relinquished his championship at the gentle request of Louis Thezs, a St. Louisian, war whoops with Chief Chewacki, a genuin' injun.

Ali Baba, a gent with a handlebar mustachio and a gorilla-like figure, is making his first appearance in Washington and should make quite a splash. The Baba, who was a sailor before degenerating to the mat, is said to know all the tricks of the seven seas.

The Chewacki-Daviscourt brawl is bound to be a natural, for they say the chic chief harbors a deep-seated grudge against all palefaces. The Injun, who for years boxed under the nomen of Gypsy Daniels, is well equipped to match punches with Daviscourt should the giant Californian feel so disposed. The chief is said to hold a knockout victory over Max Schmeling, a fair to middling heavyweight.

Supporting the double-header feature are three 30-minute fusses. Chief Thunderbolt, san Swift Eagle, the bonbon beater, engages Henry Kulkovich, a Russian. Orville Brown, of Kansas, meets Baris Demitroff, another Russian, and Al Periera, the Portuguese, clashes with Vanka Zelezniak, still another Russian.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR CAMP, $4.00, $3.00, $2.90; SKY HOSTESS, $4.30, $3.60; CELTIC LEGEND, $4.10.

WAR CAMP, away forwardly, but racing greenly, was outrun in the early stages, saved much ground entering the stretch and came around the leaders in the final furlong and closing gamely, was up in the final 50 yards. SKY HOSTESS began fast, displayed the most speed and drew out into a good lead entering the stretch, but faltered when challenged. CELTIC LEGEND, nearest in pursuit of the leader early, weakened in the last furlong, but responded gamely to pressure and outlasted OFFICIATE. The latter began slowly, was vigorously urged and improved his position steadily on the extreme outside and finished going strong.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:32. Off 2:33. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CROWNING GLORY, $8.90, $3.60, $2.70; JUDGE LEER, $3.20, $2.50; FERRYBOAT, $3.20.

CROWNING GLORY, away alertly, drew clear under vigorous handling in the opening quarter mile, saved ground the remainder of the trip and held JUDGE LEER safe in the final drive. JUDGE LEER, in tight quarters on the inside, was under intermittent punishment in the early stages to maintain his position, finished stoutly when clear, but could not reach the winner. FERRYBOAT, prominent factor on the outside the entire trip, continued with determination under pressure in the final eighth mile to stave off ONRUSH'S bid.

Daily Double, War Camp and Crowning Glory, Paid $17.10.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:03. Winner, Woolford Farm's dk. ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOKAS, $3.90, $3.00, $2.70; HIGH IMAGE, $5.10, $3.90; MANRICO, $5.70.

DOKAS, away forwardly and going in nearest pursuit of the leader all the way, finished with determination under punishment and was HIGH IMAGE down in the final stride. HIGH IMAGE began fast, set a swift early pace and drew out in the run down the backstretch, appeared to have a safe lead at the furlong pole, but faltered suddenly in the stretch run. MANRICO stole through on the inside all the way and closed stoutly to pressure.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; allowances. Class C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:33½. Winner, Medway Stable's ch. f. (3), by Dosel—La Luna. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UPSLALA, $22.50, $8.00, $3.80; POSTERITY, $4.10, $2.60; GANGPLANK, $2.80.

UPSLALA followed the pace under light restraint until well straightened into the stretch, took command with a rush, but then faltered and was ridden out vigorously to maintain her advantage. POSTERITY, quickest to begin, displaced the final speed and continued courageously when challenged and outlasted GANGPLANK. The latter, rated behind the leaders in the opening half mile, moved up gradually on the outside rounding the turn, came wide into the stretch and hung when it came to a drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; allowances. Class C (second division). For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:05. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Sexton's ch. f. (3), by Kai Pens—Mint Drop. Trained by A. C. Nichaus. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:12 4-5, 1:39 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRISH MOON, $17.00, $8.80, $6.40; XAVIER, $9.20, $6.30; FLYING LEE, $5.70.

IRISH MOON, in tight quarters between the leaders in the early running, was eased off the pace leaving the backstretch, slipped through on the inside entering the stretch, responded determinedly to punishment and outlasted XAVIER when the real test came. XAVIER, outpaced in the opening half mile, moved up menacingly on the outside rounding the turn, closed gamely under punishment, but could not overtake the winner. FLYING LEE, steadied off the leaders and saving ground the entire trip, closed gamely when placed to punishment.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:34. Off 4:34½. Winner, Milam Farm's br. m. (5), by Blue Peter—Silver Bone. Trained by R. McIlvain. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:12 1-5, 1:37 4-5, 1:52

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERPSICHORE, $11.10, $5.10, $4.10; NO SIR, $7.50, $5.50; DNIEPER, $4.90.

TERPSICHORE, hustled to the front going to the first turn, set an even pace under steadying restraint while saving ground and held on tenaciously when challenged and outlasted NO SIR when the final issue came. NO SIR, on the outside, went in close attendance of the pace for the entire trip, moved up menacingly on the stretch but attempted to veer in causing the furlong pole. Arcaro, in an effort to prevent interference with TERPSICHORE, was unable to ride him vigorously in the final drive. DNIEPER broke a trifle slow, saved ground in the last mile and gained steadily, but was unable to overhaul the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:02½. Winner, A. J. Abel's ch. g. (7), by Whiskaway—Madrigal. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:14, 1:40 2-5, 2:00 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BREEZING ALONG, $12.00, $6.20, $4.40; LADY TICHNER, $5.90, $4.60; WISE WILL, $7.20.

BREEZING ALONG bore in going to the first turn and was taken back, and under steadying restraint began to better his position on the extreme outside when straightened into the stretch, closed with determination through the stretch and wore the leaders down in the final drive. LADY TICHNER, a forward contender on the inside early, slipped through leaving the backstretch and took command, but then bore out slightly coming into the stretch and faltered in the closing strides. WISE WILL closed with a belated rush.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:34. Off 5:37½. Winner, P. B. Codd's b. g. (4), by St. James—Humanity. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 2:07 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPURLIN, $7.80, $5.00, $4.20; SUGABOOT, $8.60, $5.90; SOU'WESTER, $8.00.

SPURLIN, running in much improved form, followed the pace well up under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, closed gamely when called upon and wore SUGABOOT down through the stretch to win going away. The latter opened up a big lead with a rush rounding the first turn, saved ground thereafter, but faltered in the last furlong. SOU'WESTER, a forward factor the entire trip, held on well and outstayed CARL B.

Crisler Quits To Take Job At Michigan

Ex-Princeton Grid Coach Accepts Same Position With Wolverines.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 9.—Herbert Orrin (Fritz) Crisler resigned his post as head football coach at Princeton University tonight and announced he has accepted a "similar position" at the University of Michigan, "with additional duties in athletic administration."

Crisler tendered his Princeton resignation at a meeting of the university council on athletics, and then announced his decision to accept the Michigan berth, as successor to Harry G. Kipke, who was notified on September 9 that his contract would not be renewed.

Crisler's name has been linked with the Michigan coaching berth for weeks. In going to Michigan, he returns to the Big Ten Conference, where he first built a reputation as coach at Minnesota, after his undergraduate days at the University of Chicago.

It had been reported that Crisler's previous hesitancy at accepting the Michigan post was based on the fact that he wanted the athletic directorship, as well as the coaching berth.

In his statement tonight, he pointed out that the "new position," which included "added duties on athletic administration," was "presented to me last Monday."

"This has been a most trying decision for me to make," he added, "in view of the kindly expressions of feeling on the part of the administration, faculty, alumni and students of Princeton.

"However, Michigan presents such a far-reaching opportunity that it was difficult to do anything but accept."

In accepting the resignation, the university council released Crisler from his Princeton contract, which still had two years to run. He came to Princeton in February, 1932, and in 1935 (exactly three years ago tomorrow), signed a new five-year contract.

Prof. Burnham N. Dell, chairman of the Princeton council on athletics, announced that the council "has accepted the resignation with regret."

"No action was taken in regard to a successor to Mr. Crisler," the statement said.

Newark Pro Five Will Play Return Game on Sunday

Heurich's professional basketball team will play host to the Newark Pros Sunday afternoon at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest in the third game of their series.

Newark won the first contest last Sunday a week ago at the Heurich gym, 36 to 34, after several overtime periods. Returning to Newark for a second game, the Brewers won, 38-37, thanks to Whitey Wilson's field goal in the last two seconds of play.

Table Tennis To Roosevelt

Roosevelt emerged victorious in the first annual table tennis tourney sponsored by the Community Center Boys Club, last night at the Roosevelt High School armory, defeating Eastern and Jefferson teams. The winning team scored 26 points, Eastern and Jefferson, 8 each.

Woodrow Wilson finished fourth with 6 points. The play was divided into three classes, 12-14 years; 15-17 years and unlimited.

Frank Dodson, Jefferson, defeated Sid Shipiro, Roosevelt, in the 12-14 class, 21-8, 21-9. Shipiro and Ted Thomandes defeated Frank Dodson and Joe Coakley, Jefferson, in the doubles, 8-21, 21-15, 21-7.

Louis Obergh, Eastern, defeated Joe Woodson, Roosevelt, in the 15-17 class, 21-13, 17-21, 21-16. Woodson and Frank Bruk defeated Louis Obergh and Phil Gray, Eastern, in the doubles.

Jules Bernard, Roosevelt, defeated James Limerick, Roosevelt, in the unlimited class, 21-18, 21-17. Bernard and Cleve Stauffer, Roosevelt, defeated Limerick and Dave Davenport, 21-9, 21-10, in the doubles finals.

Nationally Known Riders Pay Tribute To Jimmy Sullivan

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 9 (A).—Funeral services for Jimmy Sullivan, 23, Washington, D. C. jockey who died Monday, were held here last night with many nationally known riders and turfmen paying tribute. The youngster was fatally injured in a spill at Agua Caliente, Mexico, race track January 30.

Sullivan's wife, 22-months-old son and his father, James A. Sullivan, will accompany the body East today for burial at Washington.

Bankers Led By City No. 1

Bregman Bowlers Lead Recreation League.

City Bank No. 1 rolled high team set in the Banker's League at Arcadia last night, with 1,648 for the three games, while American Security and Trust No. 2 captured game honors with a 561 count.

Bridges, of Riggs, accounted for high game with a 143 effort, while Burrell, of American Security and Trust No. 1, rolled high individual set of 363.

Bregman's Wildcats bowling team, paced by Sam Simon's 410, John Chaney's 372 and Arthur Crown's 371, took a single game lead in the Recreation League last night by winning the odd skirmish from the fifth-place Marvins Credit Co.

The University Shop, pacesetter for weeks, were knocked out of the lead by Terry's Appliance when the Terrymen deadlocked second place with the former leaders by taking a 2-1 decision. Cliff Hollis' 376 and Charley Nicholson's 374 led the winning charge. Irwin Simon's 379 and Gene Hargett's 376 were high for the losers.

Marlboro Hotel, aided by Joe Harrison's 377, whitewashed Herzog's, while Allied Roofing Co., led by Perce Wolfe's 397 and Ralph Meyers' 393, swept their set from Blaydes Contracting Co. Blankens Restaurant took the odd tilt from Cooke Press.

Briarley Five Defeats Prep

Briarley Military Academy won its most cherished victory of the season yesterday, whipping Georgetown Prep by the surprisingly one-sided score of 45-20 on the Briarley court.

Led by Bob Chichester, its forward, who was playing his first game since leaving the hospital, where he was confined with injuries sustained in an auto accident, Briarley led, 19-9, at the half and never was in danger.

Chichester, with 13 points, and Lee Lodge, with 12, were outstanding for the winners. Capt. Paul Kelley paced Georgetown with six markers.

The triumph avenged a four-point early season defeat at the hands of the Prepmen and was more decisive than the victory St. Johns turned in last week.

of the association. I want them and I'm entitled to them," O'Hara protested.

Baird relented and permitted removal of the proxies, which O'Hara said represented a majority of the 350,000 shares of stock.

"This whole thing is shot through with unlawful moves," was O'Hara's acid comment.

Later, in Superior Court, Judge Jeremiah E. O'Donnell, by agreement of counsel, continued a temporary restraining order to prevent O'Hara from removing the association's record and accounts. A hearing will be held Friday on the merits of the restraining order.

O'Hara's counsel was given permission to take records seized by the deputies to the stockholders' meeting which had been scheduled for this afternoon.

Nazis, Italy Oppose Ban On Olympics

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 9.—A canvass of European reaction to the Chinese Athletic Federation's request of a boycott of the Olympic Games scheduled for Tokyo in 1940 showed today that Germany and Italy are definitely opposed to such a move while other nations have adopted a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Most British athletic authorities are now in Australia attending the Empire Games. However, a spokesman for the British Olympic Association said that "any boycott talk would seem a bit previous just now since we haven't yet received an invitation to the 1940 Olympics." It was also pointed out that the British organization has not yet received the Chinese boycott request.

An official of the French Olympic committee told the United Press in Paris that it also had not yet received any communication from China, adding that such a matter would have to be treated with the utmost caution since "the authority of the federation making a request of this nature would have to be verified before the French committee could act."

It was further noted that the matter of a possible boycott would come through the office of the international Olympic committee.

In Copenhagen, Admiral Carstensen, chairman of the Danish Olympic Federation, said that Denmark would adhere to any decision reached by the International Federation. It was believed that other Scandinavia... nations would adopt a similar attitude.

Sweeping Change In Pitt Athletic Policy Announced

Pittsburgh, Feb. 9 (A).—Chancellor John G. Bowman announced tonight a sweeping change in control of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, shifting it from the old athletic council to an all-faculty committee.

At the same time a new code, tightening eligibility rules until they compare "with any in effect at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell or the Big Ten Conference" will be adopted.

Dr. Bowman said the change was made at the suggestion of the old board and with the indorsement of Dr. John B. Sutherland, football coach; Harold C. Carlson, basketball coach, and Track Coach Olson.

The chancellor said most of the new rules already are in effect. The new code formally is effective March 1.

Rookie Catcher Signed by Nats

On the recommendation of Howard Maple, former National coach and present coach of the University of Oregon nine, Clark Griffith yesterday added another rookie catcher, young Bill Beard, former player, to the roster.

Beard, described by Maple as "one of the greatest major league prospects I've ever seen," is generally conceded to be the finest player ever to wear Oregon's colors. He will report with the first contingent of batterymen on February 27 and will contend with Livingston and Early for the understudy position to Rick Ferrell.

Police B. C. Opens Boxing Tourney

The semifinalists follow: Raymond Arduini, Reggie Murphy, John Coakley, Joseph Cucimano, Sam Brandeberg, Emil de Toto, Nick Brown, Carl Coakley, Jack Schryver, William Russell, Jiggs Slattery, Francis McDermott and B. Pappe, of No 4; Gil Eslin, Franny Babashan, Joe Brown, Danny Petro, Louis Spinelli, Braniard Burgess, of No. 5; Bo Lamar, Marvin Kramer, James Donahue, Pete Smith, Calvert Weems, Matt Christofer, Vic Berger and George Steinmeyer, of No. 10, and Tony Ingersen, of No. 11.

Cliff Battles Is Undecided On Coach Job

Decision Hinges on '38 Salary Offered by Redskins.

Cliff Battles, whose split-second thinking helped to elevate him to stardom in the National Football League, is utterly unable to make up his mind about accepting an assistant coach's contract with Columbia University.

But the appearance in Washington of George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, will help Battles to make a decision. On the salary offer of Marshall for the 1938 season will depend Battles' course.

The Redskin ace, who returned from Miami yesterday, was in day-long conference with Wash B. Williams, local bottling firm head, who employs the football star in the off-season. Williams, expressing his desire to see Battles remain in Washington, nevertheless advised Battles to take the most remunerative offer.

It is believed that Battles will hold out for a two-year contract in his negotiations with the Redskins' owner who will be asked to meet the $4,000 offer of Columbia University. Battles revealed yesterday that he was paid only $2,750 for the 1937 season, his highest salary during his six years of professional football.

Yacht Leader Speeds Pace

By the United Press.

Aboard U. S. C. G. Cutter Mojave near Stirrup Cay, Bahamas, Feb. 9. Stormy Weather, white-hulled 53-foot yawl owned by Robert W. Johnson, of New York, held a 10-mile lead over the six other remaining entrants in the Miami-to-Nassau yacht race late today, footing east toward Stirrup Cay, the two-thirds mark.

Beating to windward, close-hauled on a port tack, Stormy Weather, veteran race campaigner and winner last year, was taking advantage of a brisk, due east breez to set a fast pace. The black-hulled Sonny, owned by Albert Peirce, of New York, was second.

Others to withdraw were Harrison Tweed's 40-foot schooner Sewanna, which was heading for Bimini; Harkness Edwards' Winsome Too, which already has returned to Miami, and Caprice, 56-foot ketch, owned by Julian J. Reiss, of New York.

H. Summerfield's St. Clair, and Vandal, owned by W. T. Price, jr., Miami, left the race shortly after the start yesterday.

Others still in the race were J. Wesley Pape's San Cristobal, John Timken's Kittyhawk, H. M. Davock's Abenaki, Charles Cox's Naomi and Caroline, 37-foot ketch, owned by H. C. Bowen, of the East Greenwich Yacht Club. Their positions were not known.

Sonny, a cutter which likes the heavy going, had gained a mile on Stormy Weather in four hours.

Wheat Prices Advance With Export Sales

Day's Upturns Followed by Setbacks as Result of Profit-Sales.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Higher prices on wheat formed the rule today, but upturn of a cent led repeatedly to profit-taking and to setbacks from the day's top.

Helping to lift wheat values was continued export demand for wheat from North America, with estimated purchases of 500,000 bushels, chiefly United States hard winter wheat to be shipped via the Gulf of Mexico. A conspicuous aid, too, for the upward trend of wheat came from New York Stock Market gains.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@⅜ above yesterday's finish, May 95⅞@96, July 91⅞@92, corn ⅛ off to ⅜ up, May 59⅞, July 60⅝@60¾, oats ⅛ advanced, rye varying from ⅛ decline to ¾ gain, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents bulge.

Oil Shares Lead On Curb Trading

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Specialties and a few oil shares emerged ahead on the curb market today but other groups fluctuated narrowly with the trend mixed at the close.

Detroit Steel Products gained 2¾ at 20¼, and an improvement of around 1 to 2 points was shown by Sherwin Williams, Aluminum Ltd., McWilliams Dredging and New York Merchandise.

Gains of less than a point were shown by American Cyanamid "B," American Gas, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Pantepec Oil and St. Regis Paper. Unchanged to lower were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Teck-Hughes, Electric Bond & Share and Lake Shore Mines. Newmont dropped 3 on light sales to 57. Transfers totaled 127,000 shares compared with 113,000 yesterday.

Steel Output Is Unchanged At 31 Per Cent

New York, Feb. 9.—Steel ingot production for the country this week stands at 31 per cent, unchanged from last week, says Iron Age today in its weekly review of the steel industry.

"Efforts by steel producers and consumers to appraise the effect on business of this week's negotiations on a wage contract by the United States Steel Corporation and the SWOC so far have not been fruitful. While some orders held up by price and wage uncertainty of recent weeks are expected to materialize shortly, the industry is already looking for other developments to restore confidence.

"Steel companies following the Steel Corporation's lead a year ago in making signed agreements covering wages and other conditions of work are expected to do likewise this year, with some of the larger independent producers continuing to stand firm against such agreements. Over shadowed by interest in the wage negotiations are other developments indicating that the period of hesitancy in business is not over.

"Reflecting continued low melting rates, scrap prices, after holding for five weeks, have again turned down, with prime heavy melting steel off 25 cents at Chicago, where other grades dropped from 50 cents to $1 a ton. With lower scrap quotations and an unchanged rate of ingot output the steel industry finds its principal outlets still operating on recent low-production schedules.

"Automobile manufacturers report improved sales, particularly in used cars, providing basis for hope that the used car jam will be broken and that assembly schedules requiring increased amounts of steel are not far off. A slash of $100 by Packard on all six-cylinder models has aroused speculation as to maintenance of automobile prices generally, but reports from Detroit indicate no unanimity of opinion for widespread reductions.

Rail Buying Light.

"Purchasing by the railroads remains light, pending the Interstate Commerce Commission decision on a freight rate advance. The New Haven plans a $1,253,000 car modernization program and contemplates purchase of about 7,600 tons of rails. Steel for six locomotives to be built for the Milwaukee road by American Locomotive Co. will be bought shortly. Bangor & Aroostook is inquiring for 500 box cars, 100 70-ton hoppers and 50 rack cars.

"Japan is reported in the market for 50,000 tons of pig iron expected to be placed mostly in the South for March-April delivery. Meanwhile the January daily average of iron production in the United States was reported 4.1 per cent under December, January total prduction was 1,429,085 gross tons compared with 1,490,324 tons in December."

New York, Feb. 9.—Stocks closed a little better than even with the previous day's prices, but they were unable to hold early gains. Traders were inclined to take the short view on steel and motor price cutting. Stock turnover was around 750,000 shares. United States bonds were steady and commodities were mixed. Dollars again were weak and gold sold at a slight discount in the London market. May wheat rose an eighth of a cent to 95⅞ cents a bushel.

Stocks exhibited their best prowess in the first half-hour of the trading. In that period gains were made of 1 to 3 points in leading issues, including Chrysler, Steel, Bethlehem and others. The remainder of the day was given over to resistance to profit taking and fresh selling of a rather half-hearted nature. Metals softened, as did steels, on price cutting developments. Railroad stocks were popular for a while, but they slipped with the remainder of the market. Rail equipments lost most of their early gains of 1 to 2 points.

Eastman Kodak lost only a point or so on the lower dividend, which was interpreted by the management as not meaning a reduction. Radio Corporation was strong and fairly active, reflecting the better profits account. Building construction stocks continued to find buyers. Gypsum, Manville and Radiator were firm by fractions to more than 2 points.

Wage Agreement.

The scum on the water created by the lack of developments in the industrial situation was washed away by the steel mill announcement of a reduction in prices of cold rolled sheets and by the wage agreement effected between the United States Steel Corporation and the C. I. O. The wage agreement, the outcome of discussions extending over several weeks, was in effect a continuation, with important reservations, of the contract signed a year ago, which settlement guaranteed industrial peace in the United States Steel Corporation mills. Last year several of the so-called independent steel companies refused to follow the lead of Big Steel and resisted the demands of the C. I. O., with the result that strikes took place but that eventually what were said to be better terms were obtained than those agreed to by the steel corporation.

The agreement today made by United States Steel reaffirms the principle, crowded somewhat into the background last year, that the corporation does not grant exclusive bargaining to the C. I. O., which will speak only for its membership. It is also the general understanding that the agreement will provide more elasticity on wages, so that in case of material reduction in steel prices, forced by economic conditions, the steel corporation will be able to make wage adjustments. No steel company management has subscribed to the view of John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., echoed by President Roosevelt, that steel wages could be regarded as independent of steel prices and that prices could come down materially without affecting wages.

Steel Prices Cut.

That consideration focused attention today on the price cut of $2 a ton, plus a $2-a-ton oiling charge, on cold rolled sheets, announced by a United States Steel Corporation unit and some of the leading independent companies. Since the lower prices apply to steel used in quantity by the motor industry, whichd in turn has been dabbling with price cutting, it was expected that further reductions in motor prices might take place and that, if demand for steel rose on the price reductions, other price cuts would follow. If lower prices for steel, motor cars and other products go far, some wage cutting doubtless would follow in the steel mills and perhaps also in the automotive industry.

Such developments are favorable rather than otherwise. They reflect unsatisfactory conditions which are well known, but they give some promise of a turn for the better. Should increased consumption take place, as is expected, the rise in production would add to employment and stiffen the wage structure. Meanwhile steel ordering is being held up pending the outcome of wage and price negotiations. Steel scrap prices, according to the Iron Age, have fallen again, and railroad buying remains light.

Other midweek trade news was somewhat colorless. Railroad freight traffic last week rose slightly over that of the preceding week, but was still about 15 per cent under the corresponding week of a year ago. Electric power output also declined. Retail trade generally is running under a year ago.

Business Quiz Finds Bankers Outranked

New York, Feb. 9.—In a business quiz sent out by Dun's Review, doctors, dentists, lawyers, merchants, executives and students frequently outranked executives and bankers, to whom the terms used might be called shop talk. One banker scored 58 out of a possible 100 points. The average was 66. Those who scored 75 or better were rated exceptional, a total equaled or exceeded by several students and doctors. Question No. 15 was a stumbling block. It asked the name of the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

France

A Wall Street man who is a good judge of international financial developments, and who has just returned from Paris, expects the "crisis to end crises" to develop in French finances within the next two or three months. His views run this way:

"The budget situation, even if normally capable of solution, is rendered impossible, under persent political setups, by approaching huge armament expenditures. The money market is incapable of further financing France's huge deficits and the extraordinary overdraft facilities given the government at the Bank of France will be used up before many weeks have passed. The foreign markets will not give France large credits except against deposit of gold as security. Since the small French capitalists have no confidence in the outlook, continued expatriation of their funds makes a constantly adverse balance of payments which is enormously increased by an adverse debit balance of visible trade. Production is hampered by uneconomic restrictions upon hours of labor and unrest in labor ranks in general. The final crisis will bring a national union government along the lines successfully attempted a dozen years ago by Poincare, clothed with sufficient authority to force political compliance with its actions.

Picking Presidents.

The paid president of the Stock Exchange scarcely will be selected before the amended constitution is prepared, adopted and set to working, which will be some time yet. Meanwhile the nominating committee probably will have the most to say about selection of the next president, and it is unlikely to be influenced greatly by trial balloons. A morning newspaper story to the effect that O. Max Gardner, prominent North Carolina politician and Washington lobbyist, friend of the President and New Dealer, had been chosen was regarded by well-informed people in Wall Street as a bit of kite flying which probably would help to defeat its purpose, if any help along that line were needed. No doubt some of the New Dealers on the Stock Exchange would like to see a buffer man such as Gardner selected, as insurance against further SEC attacks, but it certainly can be said that no committee, group or member has has been authorized to do any president picking as yet and that Gardner's selection is purely a bit of brokerage house wishful gossip. If undercover men on the Stock Exchange could pick presidents at this stage, they also could decide on policy after the adoption of the new constitution with its liberalized provisions; and if that could happen no advantage would accrue to the exchange in amending its constitution, for the improvements are designed to build up public confidence.

RCA Income Is Estimated At $9,000,000

Indicates an Increase of $2,844,000 Over 1936 Net.

New York, Feb. 9.—An estimated profit for 1937 of $9,000,000 was reported to the stockholders of the Radio Corporation of America in an advance statement announced today by David Sarnoff, president. This preliminary estimate indicated an increase of approximately $2,844,100 over the net of the previous year.

Gross income of RCA for the year was estimated at $112,650,000, compared to $101,186,300 in 1936. After cost of operations, net income before deductions was estimated to be $15,400,000, compared to $11,484,100 the previous year. Deductions for taxes, interest, depreciation and amortization of patents and goodwill, were estimated at $6,400,000, leaving a net of $9,000,000. After allowing $3,250,000 to cover the year's dividends on preferred stock the earnings applicable to the common stock are equal to 41½ cents a share.

Compared with 1936, operations for 1937 showed an increase of 11 per cent in gross income, while net profit increased 46 per cent over the net profit in 1935 of $6,155,900.

Continental Can Co.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Continental Can Co reported that the 1937 net earnings were $8,721,025 after charges, taxes and provision for Federal surtax on undistributed profits, equal to $3.03 a share of common stock after preferred dividend requirements. This compared with $9,038,787, or $3.17 in the previous year.

General Fireproofing.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 9 (AP).—General Fireproofing Co. reported 1937 net profit of $1,147,557, after deduction of all charges, including estimated Federal taxes, compared with $564,621 for 1936 and $11,087,553 in 1929. After deduction of preferred dividends, earnings were equal to $3.56 a share on 319,682 shares outstanding of the company's common stock. Earnings were $1.62 a share in 1936 and $3.33 in 1929.

Globe-Wernicke Co.

Cincinnati, Feb. 9 (AP).—Globe-Wernicke Co., office equipment manufacturers, reported net profit of $104,197.34 for 1937, after deductions of $53,308.50 interest on outstanding 6 per cent first mortgage bonds and $20,657.63 for Federal income taxes. This represents an increase of approximately 15 per cent over 1936 earnings, and, the company said, was its best since reorganization in 1934.

Shipments of Lumber 53 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended January 29 stood at 40 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 53 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 55 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments about 61 per cent of that week's shipments.

The 1938 week showed gains over the previous week in shipments and new business, with production about the same. All items were lower than during the corresponding week of 1937. For the eighth consecutive week new orders exceeded production.

Eastman Kodak Votes $1.50 on Its Common

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on common stock, payable April 2 to holders of record March 5. On January 3 a payment of $2 was made, while in 1937 the company paid $1.50 in April, $2 quarterly in July and October and 50 cents extra in December.

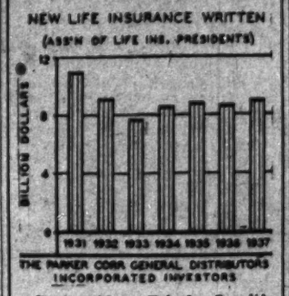
Insurance Policies Set 6-Year Peak



Boston, Mass., Feb. 9.—Our life insurance companies wrote the largest total of new policies last year for any year since 1932. Last year's total exceeded 1936 by 4 per cent. The average value of an ordinary life policy written last year was for $2,110 and compares with $2,680 for the ordinary policy written back in 1929.

1937 Registrations Under Year Ago

The Securities and Exchange Commission has made public an analysis, prepared by its research division, of security registrations which became effective under the securities act during 1937.

Registration for new securities totaling $3,379,284,000 became effective during the year. Included in this figure are approximately $381,000,000 of securities which were registered for reserve against the conversion of issues having convertible features. Excluding this amount, new securities with estimated gross proceeds of slightly more than $2,998,000 became fully effective during 1937.

This total is approximately $1,802,000,000 lower than the comparable 1936 figure, but is about $465,000,000 higher than the corresponding total for 1935.

Electricity Output Declines for Week

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States for the week ended February 5 totaled 2,062,447,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of .3 of 1 per cent from 2,068,968,000 in the preceding week and a drop of 5.4 per cent from 2,201,057,000 in the comparable 1937 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The decline was more than seasonally expected and the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, fell to 108.2, a new 1938 low, from 108.6 per cent in the previous week. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 116.6 a year ago.

HeroBoatswain Of Coast Guard Dies in Norfolk

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 9.—Chief Boatswain John Allen Midgett, attached to the United States Coast Guard station at Rodanthe, N. C., died in a hospital here today.

Midgett came of a family long identified with the Coast Guard service. Two sons and two sons-in-law are Coast Guardsmen.

He was decorated by both the United States and British governments for his work in supervising the rescue of nearly two score men from the British Tanker Mirlo, torpedoed off the North Carolina coast by a German submarine in 1918.

Midgett served in the Coast Guard more than 30 years.

Audiences Must Assist Program, Dr. Kindler Holds

Listeners have as much responsibility for the success of a performance as the orchestra or its conductor, Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, declared here yesterday in outlining the general objectives of the new series of three "Children's Concerts for Adults," which begins next Monday night. The concerts are to be at 8:30 p. m. in Roosevelt High School auditorium, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

"The difficulty, of course, will be to strike a medium without too much compromise in addressing those who 'know' things already, and those who are completely virgin material as far as these concerts are concerned," Dr. Kindler said.

"While it has been emphasized the concerts will be 'informal' in their nature, I want to dispel the notion some people may have that they are for the purpose of 'having a good time' only.

"It will require on the part of the listener an unbiased, uninhibited, unprejudiced attitude; a readiness on the part of some to hear repeated what they already know, and a different kind of readiness on the part of others to forgive that I tell them things which I mistakenly take for granted that they would know."

Hoover Embarks on 'Sentimental Journey' to Belgium

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Herbert Hoover sailed yesterday for Belgium, where he will be honored, 20 years afterward, for his relief work in the dark days of that Nation's World War struggle. The voyage was called a "sentimental journey."

Md. Realty Dealer Hurls Self Under Train; Inquest Ordered

Circumstances surrounding the death of Jesse H. Hedges, 55, real estate operator, will be aired at an inquest set for Wednesday at Berwyn by Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips. Hedges was killed yesterday when he stepped into the path of a Baltimore & Ohio express train at Sunnyside, Md.

J. French, the engineer, said Hedges stood beside the tracks for a moment, buttoned his overcoat and stepped in front of the speeding engine.

Because of the condition of the body, Hedges was unidentified for several hours. A. B. Ilsley, a brother-in-law, who lived with him, established identification.

William Downing, 925 Monroe street northeast, told the police he noticed Hedges sitting in the car for an hour and a half before the accident occurred.

An envelope addressed to Mrs. Hedges and marked "Please deliver," was found in the victim's pockets, but the police refused to reveal its contents.

Hedges, who lived at 102 Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., came to Washington from West Virginia to enter the stock brokerage business. Later he was with the real estate firm of Moore & Hill for four years. He was with the Boss & Phelps real estate concern for eight years as a salesman, and then Hedges formed the Hedges & Middleton partnership in 1920. He entered business for himself in 1928.

Hedges, who was a member of All Saints' Protestant Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, is survived by his wife and two brothers.

Mayor Davis Sues To Bar Sales Tax

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (AP).—Mayor S. Davis Wilson and his wife, as taxpayers, today asked common pleas court to enjoin the city from collecting a 2 per cent retail sales tax levied by city council.

The mayor and Mrs. Wilson allege the tax is unconstitutional, but were refused an immediate restraining order pending final hearing of the case. The tax was passed yesterday, by a 15 to 7 vote, over Wilson's veto, to supply nearly $8,000,000 in new revenue to balance the budget.

Farm Implement Man Asks Horse-Trading Aid

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 9 (AP).—Hardware and implement men need a trade-in manual on horses for their own protection, says John Hoene, of Cottonwood, Idaho, a dealer 29 years.

"We dealers are being outsmarted by the farmers on horse-trading deals," Hoene told the Northwest Dealers Convention today.

'Sweat Box' Killed Son, Mother Claims in Suit

Illness Proves Fatal to Father McShane at 69

The Rev. Francis Dominic McShane, O. P., professor of moral theology at the Dominican House of Studies for 23 years, died yesterday at Providence Hospital. He was 69.

Father McShane had been a member of the Dominican order for nearly 53 years. He entered the House of Studies here in July, 1914, and continued active in teaching until last Easter when ill health forced his retirement. He had been in the hospital about a month.

Took Vows in 1886.

Born in Higginsville, N. Y., Father McShane received his early education at the College of the City of New York, and at St. Francis Xavier College. He received the Dominican habit at St. Rose's Priory at Springfield, Ky., in March, 1885, and a year later took the vows of the order at St. Joseph's Priory in Somerset, Ohio.

Father McShane was ordained in Louvain, Belgium, in 1891, and later returned to Somerset to complete his studies. He received the degree of lector in sacred theology in 1895, and until the turn of the century he taught philosophy and theology at St. Joseph's Priory.

Served as Curate.

He served as curate of St. Mary's Church in New Haven, Conn., for seven years, and later as vicar of St. Thomas' Church in Zanesville, Ohio. In 1908 he returned to St. Joseph's Priory as head of the institution, remaining until 1914, when he joined the faculty at the House of Studies.

He leaves a brother, James McShane, of New York City.

Solemn requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Dominic's Church. The Very Rev. J. B. Walker, O. P., prior of the House of Studies, will be celebrant; the Very Rev. T. S. McDermott, O. P., will give the absolution, and the Very Rev. E. G. Fitzgerald, O. P., regent at the House of Studies, will preach. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Bob Burns Says—

I know you readers will be glad to know that this paper will accept nothing but honest advertising. This editor is just as strict as the editor of the Van Burean Press-Argus.

One time a man came into the Argus office and says, "I wan 'ta advertise for a wife."

The editor says, "Well, we've got to be honest about it, what classification do you want me to put that under?" do you want it under "business chances," "pet stock," or "household fixtures?"

Should Government Censor Radio Broadcasts?

Senator Herring, of Iowa, is preparing a bill on stricter control of radio broadcasts. At present radio broadcasters operate under self-imposed censorship, with each station or chain exercising veto power over programs submitted to them. Should this system be continued, or should the Government censor programs in advance of broadcast? The Gallup Poll made a cross-section survey of America's 24,500,000 estimated radio set owners. What is their answer?

Nolan Defense Letter Doubted By Prosecution

'Genuineness' Questioned at Trial of Motor Official and Partner.

A letter introduced by defense attorneys for William J. Nolan and Benjamin D. Jenkins yesterday was questioned as to its "genuineness" by John J. Wilson, Assistant U. S. Attorney, who is prosecuting the two on charges of false pretense.

R. M. Sigwald, an official of the Universal Credit Co., who was alleged to have written the letter, apparently knew the Nolan Motor Co., of which Nolan was former head and Jenkins, a partner, had sold conditional bills of sale on automobiles to a bank, the defense contended.

Wilson interpreted the letter as showing the credit company knew the 45 contracts it purchased from Nolan had been sold previously to the Munsey Trust Co. He then went on to question the authenticity of the letter.

"In my estimation the bottom part of the letter is wider than the top," states Wilson, adding that the signature of Sigwald was attached to the letter by a strip of transparent tape on the back and that there were two fonts of typewriting on it.

Nolan, under cross-questioning, denied he had discussed with his counsel that the pieces of paper on which the letter was written were "of different color."

He then testified Sigwald told him to put 45 sales contracts in the bank with the understanding he was to repay the bank when the finance company authorized their acceptance by their local offices.

The Government has charged the defendants sold the true contracts to the Munsey Trust Co. for purchase by the Yellow Cab Co., and then sold "false contracts for the same units to the Universal Credit Co. for sales purportedly made to the Minute Cab Co.

Official Guilty Of Accepting Pay Under Fake Name

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP).—A special Supreme Court jury tonight convicted Councilman George R. Reilly of fraudulently obtaining city pay under an assumed name.

Reilly's counsel said he was "the goat" in a city investigation.

Reilly admitted he signed the name "James Malone" to a WPA application and received the pay, but said he did so for a friend who didn't "write so well."

He admitted neither he nor the friend did any work for the money.

A. F. L. Man Holds Lead On Howard in Race

Indianapolis, Feb. 9 (AP).—Claude M. Baker, of San Francisco, a supporter of the American Federation of Labor, continued tonight to run well ahead of Charles P. Howard, of Chicago, secretary of the Committee of Industrial Organization, in indorsements from local unions for president of the International Typographical Union. Howard now is president of the I. T. U.

Woodruff Randolph, secretary-treasurer of the I. T. U., said Baker had been indorsed by 94 locals and Howard by 47.

8 Killed and 6 Injured In French Airline Crash

Marseille, France, Feb. 9 (AP).—Eight persons were killed and six injured today when an Air France flying boat hit the Marseille breakwater at the moment of take-off and burned. The airliner was bound for Ajaccio, Corsica, on the Marseille-Tunis run.

The four-motored ship was the first lost by Air France in more than two years, company officials said.

Wife Overcome by Gas As Draft Kills Flame

Gas from a kitchen stove in her home at 21 Q street northeast nearly proved fatal to Mrs. Margaret E. Burton. Police said there were several pots on the stove and apparently a draft had blown out the flame.

Mrs. Burton was found unconscious on the floor and was revived by the Fire Rescue Squad and treated by her private physician.

Gee, Man! Hoover Draws Pretty Autograph Hunters

Packers Scent 'Holiday' Move By Producers

Marketing Moratorium Is Hinted to Curb Falling Meat Prices.

Bad roads, storms, floods and blizzards have played an important part in reducing the marketward flow of livestock and a seasonal contraction in receipts is normal at this time of year but a sharp falling off of supplies the last few days attracted particular attention in the trade. Not once this week have Chicago arrivals equaled advance estimates based largely on reports of farmers' loading intentions.

Dealers said producers and feeders, acting independently although in harmony, have been cutting shipments to market partly in an effort to bolster prices. They have been encouraged in this, it was said, by availability of relatively cheap feed.

From recovery peaks of last fall, hog prices have tumbled almost $5 a hundredweight. Cattle have plunged to the lowest point for some grades in more than three years, while lambs recently touched lows unequaled in more than two years.

The decline in livestock prices since fall has been caused partly by increased supplies, general business conditions, reduced purchasing power and consumer resistance, traders said. Wholesale prices of meat have tumbled 10 to 50 per cent in that time.

Airline Permitted To Resume Service

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper announced yesterday that Northwest Airlines had been authorized to resume passenger service immediately.

The line's 14-H Lockheed planes were grounded following a Montana crash January 10, in which 10 persons lost their lives. All Northwest passenger operations were ordered suspended Saturday.

Roper called attention to the 11 years before the crash in which Northwest Airlines had operated without a single passenger fatality and said the record was an "outstanding achievement."

Egypt Bars Pictures Of Bathing Beauties

Egypt considers pictures of bathing beauties injurious to public morals, the Commerce Department warned American exporters yesterday. The department called attention to a recent Egyptian decree excluding certain cotton cloth bearing prints of nudes and bathing beauties as trademarks.

Flowers Blossom As Spring Seems Settled in District

After a week of spring weather, bloom in Washington yesterday as domestic and wild flowers were in the Weather Bureau could see no cold weather for another week.

Throughout the city forsythia bushes were seen yesterday and Dr. Albert W. Woods, chief plant pathologist, Department of Agriculture, reported that Japanese quince, purple crocuses and snowdrops were among domestic plants in bloom.

The Weather Bureau said cold air was piling up in Canada which may sweep over the country and possibly injure flowers prematurely in bloom here.

Special Housing Aide

DR. ROBERT WEAVER.

Robert Weaver Named Aide to Nathan Straus

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, 30-year-old colored housing expert, was named yesterday as special assistant to Nathan W. Straus, United States housing administrator.

Dr. Weaver will act as adviser on colored relations for the Housing Authority. During the past four years he has served in a similar capacity in the Department of the Interior. He has also worked with the housing division of the Public Works Administration, aiding in development of a score of low-cost housing projects for colored.

He has been active in promoting employment of trained colored architects and engineers on projects for members of their race. Among low-cost housing projects he has helped to develop are the Langston terrace homes in Washington, the Harlem River project in New York City and several large-scale projects in the South.

Dr. Weaver, who lives at 1206 Kenyon street northwest, was born in Washington, and educated in public schools here. He later attended Harvard University, specializing in economics, and receiving his bachelor's, masters and doctor's degrees there. Following completion of hir studies, he taught economics at Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. Weaver said yesterday that low-cost housing for the colored would be a major factor in the housing problem faced by the United States Housing Authority.

"In practically every city of the United States, where there is an appreciable Negro population, Negroes face an acute housing problem," he said.

"While the housing problem is for the most part the result of low wages, in the case of colored persons there is, in addition, a peculiar scarcity of descent, low-rent shelter. Negroes, as most recent migrants to the city, are forced to live in old, poorly designed and dilapidated buildings which have been discarded by other groups.

"Past experience of Government in housing has shown the need for planning for Negro participation from the beginning. It is my hope that I will be instrumental in stimulating such planning."

Paralysis Funds Campaign Begun

Founders' certificates for the new National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis have been placed on sale by the Parent-Teacher Association in many of the leading department stores, banks and hotels, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, general chairman of the President's Birthday Ball Committee, announced yesterday.

The tickets are to be sold to carry on the fight against the disease. All funds will go to the foundation, as did the funds from the President's birthday balls.

Cost of the tickets are $1 for a personal founder; $2, honor founder, and $5, family founder.
